"Camille" — First National, Riviera Theatre, Omaha

News-Bee: "For sheer breath-taking beauty and superb performance, give me Norma Talmadge in 'Camille.' Not only is picture supreme triumph of adorable Norma's colorful screen career, but her Camille probably is lovliest ever brought to stage or screen. Holds rapt attention and interest of whole audience during every moment that she is in picture. A gorgeous and exquisite beauty, with talent convincing and satisfying. Delightful and praiseworthy attraction. Do not fail to see it."

"Camille"—First National, Ambassador Theatre, St. Louis

Times: "The role of 'Camille' is not new to stage or screen, but modern incarnation and beautiful through medium of Norma Talmadge is perhaps most exotic and beautiful that public has yet been able to enjoy. Fred Niblo has given technical treatment that fully maintains high artistic standards, which he established in 'Ben Hur,' and that greatly enhances splendid performance of star. Norma Talmadge has never appeared to greater histrionic advantage. Widely divergent emotions which identified 'The Lady of the Camellias' portrayed with sincerity of interpretation that has been unsurpassed by any 'Camille' in theatrical history."

Star: "With 'Camille' as her vehicle, Norma Talmadge reaches pinnacle of her career as emotive actress. Has brought to screen one of finest portrayal of an all-sacrificing love that has ever been filmed. Should satisfy most critical. Gilbert Roland bids fair to take his place as one of great lovers of screen."

"Whit Pants Willie"—First National, Carlton Theatre, Philadelphia

Record: "Johnny Hines outstrips former successes. Hilarious from beginning to end, nicely produced and comedian keeps running steady streams of really good humor without let-down. Good cast supports."

Inquirer: "Laughs that gurgle with introductory sub-title and never end until fade-out accompany antics of Johnny Hines in 'White Pants Willie.' Film absorbing throughout."

Evening Ledger: "Johnny Hines, that popular comedian, will please not only faithful following that is essentially his aown, but casual movie goer with his latest film. For it is breezy comedy. Naturally entire burden of film rests on Johnny Hines' shoulders, and he carries off honors easily and deftly. He never becomes tiring—as do some other comedians."

Evening Bulletin: "Johnny Hines provides plenty of fast comedy and mirth-provoking stunts suitable for entertainment during hot summer days."

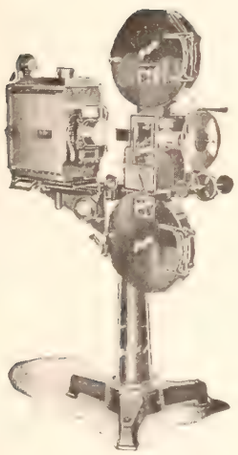
Public Ledger: "This scintillating farce is one rollicking laugh after another."

"The Poor Nut"—First National, Oriental Theatre, Chicago

Daily News: "As good as play, and that's good. The joy, cleanliness and humor of piece made play popular and do same for movie."

Herald-Examiner: "Mulhall a scream as 'poor nut.' Riotous farce, unwinding to accompaniment of gurgles and guffaws. All told, this is one of most amusing and nutty little stereopticons on market, completely successful translation from stage to screen. Go and have good time."

"The Patent Leather Kid"—Globe Theatre, New York City



Evening Journal: "Barthelmess makes comeback picture great entertainment. Well made, story splendidly developed, and its telling absorbingly human. Happy ending beautifully done without usual maudlin sentiment. Barthelmess, in several of the sequences, does outstanding work. Comedy and grimness and thrils. You'll get kick out of this one. It's worth seeing."

Graphic: "The old Barthelmess of 'Tol'able David' and 'Broken blossoms' came back on screen and scored cinema knockout. Utterly different in type from earlier characters which brought Barthelmess fame, this newest film shows him once more in best form, real actor; who can make flesh and blood being out of a film portrait. Santell built up around sterling performance of star an atmosphere and sustained interest with intense action to last close-up. Molly O'Day handled difficult character like veteran performer. To be recommended on street dotted with shell-peppered celluloid."

harold LLOYD

¶ It means nothing for a company to have a lot of stars. The question is: Who are they? What kind of stars are they? Young folks 17 to 30 years of age compose 70% of motion picture audiences. Restless, up-to-date young folks. The class most affected by these changing times. ¶ Thumbs down, cries this youthful hard-boiled public, on the doll-faced heroines and too heroic heroes of yesterday. Up with breezy Harold Lloyd, saucy Clara Bow, regular-guy Richard Dix, virile Emil Jannings, slam-bang Beery-Hatton, sophisticated Adolphe Menjou. Spotlight for modern stars sparkling with color, honesty, fun, action. Spotlight, in other words, for Paramount stars, and curtain for the has-beens and never-wases! ¶ Cold facts—box office figures, fan mail totals, exhibitor reports—prove the superiority of Paramount's list. Surround this stellar galaxy with the industry's shrewdest showman brains, the finest resources, national advertising hitting 70,000,000 readers—and try and tie it!

stars—but what

HAROLD LLOYD. More than a great comedy star—a keen, alert showman. Variety analyzed a year's theatre grosses and named Lloyd the biggest draw in the business! His latest production, which he is now making in New York, will prove it anew. Produced by the Harold Lloyd Corporation. A Paramount release.

* * * * * * * * * * * * *

CLARA BOW. Idol of the hour. Million candle power "It" girl. 16,000 fan letters a month. Here now in "Hula." Previous Bows pale beside it. Coming in Elinor Glyn's "Red Hair," "Devil-May-Care." A Bow year!

emil JANNINGS

BEERY AND HATTON. First of the comedy teams—and still first. These boys are naturally funny. Not near-Beerys—the real thing. See "Fireman, Save My Child." Watch for "Now We're in the Air," "Now We're in Dutch," "We're in Society Now," "The Big Game Hunt."

* * * * * * * * * * * * *

RICHARD DIX. Real, fighting he-man. And they love him! "Quarterback," "Vanishing American," "Knockout Reilly." And now the slashing two-fisted roustabout of "Shanghai Bound." Then "The Gay Defender," and more.

* * * * * * * * * * * * *

* * * * * * * * * * * * *

POLA NEGRI. Empress of emotions. "Barbed Wire" reveals the new Negri. Photoplay hails her second for 1927-8, "Woman on Trial" as "a glorious, extraordinarily fine picture." All-star casts and directors. Real stories. A super-Negri.

* * * * * * * * * * * * *

ADOLPHE MENJOU. Lover, new style. Don Juan in evening clothes. "Service for Ladies" rated among first six of new season by Photoplay. Then "A Gentleman of Paris." "The Musician." More.

* * * * * * * * * * * * *

FRED THOMSON. Biggest Western draw of them all. Paramount rounds up the best, always. And Silver King. In a "natural" special, "Jesse James" and another big special. And a series of rip-snorting typical Thomsons.

* * * * * * * * * * * * *

FLORENCE VIDOR. Lovely, gowned by Poiret. Class, with a naughty twinkle in her eyes. At her best in "One Woman to Another." In "Honeymoon Hate," from the Satevepost serial.

* * * * * * * * * * * * *

ZANE GREY. Biggest name in Western stories. Zane Grey-Westerns—the class product. Watch for "Nevada," from American Magazine serial. "Open Range," Country Gentleman headliner.

GEORGE BANCROFT. Brand new style of star. Villainy with "it." A mighty performance in one of the season's best specials, "Underworld," the giant thriller sweeping the country. Now stardom. Coming in a Joseph Conrad story, "Victory." And in one roaring comedy special with Chester Conklin—"Tell It to Sweeney."

esther RALSTON

ESTHER RALSTON. "American Venus," "Fashions for Women," "Ten Modern Commandments." Paramount's luscious blonde has arrived! More alluring than ever in "Figures Don't Lie." "The Glory Girl" and others.

CONKLIN and FIELDS

FIELDS AND CONKLIN. Paramount originated comedy teams. Naturally we can pick 'em and make 'em right. Fields, whom Exhibitors' Herald after "Running Wild," calls the screen's greatest natural comedian. Conklin—well, you know what Chester means to a picture. Both of 'em in "The Side Show." And more.

¶ Study the list again, gentlemen. Compare it freely with others. Then you'll understand why in Hollywood to become a Paramount star is to join the major leagues. Paramount star—a mark of superior merit and drawing power. Naturally your public and you won't be satisfied with less!

SPECIALS. Best of the stars, and specials like "Beau Geste," "Chang," "Metropolis," "Rough Riders," "Beau Sabreur," "Underworld," "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," "Tillie's Punctured Romance." And more. Short features—Paramount News, Paramount-Christie Comedies, Paramount-Hortons, Paramount Novelties, Krazy Kat and Inkwell Imps Cartoons. Paramount—the whole show!

PARAMOUNT 100% PROGRAM

JAMES CRUZE to produce "ON TO RENO" starring MARIE PREVOST

Sensational Story of Reno Divorce Mill to be Filmed as Brilliant Melodramatic Comedy

FIRST FROM JAMES CRUZE ON PATHE–DEMILLE PROGRAM OF HITS FOR 1927-28

ONE man had dashed west to seek his sweetheart, and one his wife—and both found THE SAME woman! To husband and lover came the same shock of surprise, of incredulous dismay, of hot anger.

Had they been simple victims of a questionable scheme—toys for the daring game of a designing woman? Were four lives to be spoiled by the sensational revelation?

MARIE PREVOST, incomparable interpreter of sophisticated femininity, has one of the greatest roles of her career in "On to Reno"

Here is an amazing story by Joseph Jackson, a smart sophisticated comedy drama centering about the great "divorce mill" at Reno.

With Marie Prevost as the central figure plus the superb direction of James Cruze, "On to Reno" is bound to be one of the big box-office hits of the year.

This is the first of several great productions which James Cruze will produce and supervise for Pathe during the coming year, with the same careful selection of story, star and cast. Each a sensational showmanship combination.

JAMES CRUZE, one of the screen's greatest, who has a record second-to-none as a director of box-office hits. "On to Reno" was selected by Mr. Cruze as type of story in which he has achieved some of his biggest successes.

CULLEN LANDIS to play opposite Miss Prevost. His ability and name lend definite box-office value to this great production.

WALTER WOODS, who will act as scenario supervisor. Most of James Cruze greatest pictures were directed from scenarios supervised by Mr. Woods.

Marcus Loew

The Industry United in Sorrow Over His Passing

By William A. Johnston

EVERY so often this turbulent industry is unified. Today, as I write this, the common mind is one of sorrow over the passing of Marcus Loew. There are no exceptions.

The newspapers seem unanimous in their recognition of him as a figure of world-wide importance. And so he was. And so he will be remembered.

But we are thinking of him as a man, a sterling, lovable man. And so we will remember him.

He was universally liked.

And no prominent man can leave behind him a greater heritage than this.

WHENEVER some one man had to preside over a meeting of the clans of the industry, the choice was Marcus Loew.

He was always cool and candid; sturdily fair; without pose; genuinely unassuming; real; always the same whether you met him on the street or in his magnificent home, Pembroke.

He was a kindly man.

Nothing pleased him more than to play the host at Pembroke; to as many as cared to come; and this he did with the same heartiness and unostentation that characterized him when his home was a modest apartment in New York City.

THERE is a great romance in his career, the newspapers point out.

But it is not merely the romance of the motion picture. It is the romance of wonderful personal achievement; the story of a penniless New York boy who battled his way to great wealth and renown and achieved both without loss of his own character or the affection of others.

He had the sturdiness of the pioneer, the decision of the soldier.

He could say yes and no and mean what he said.

He demanded and gave fairness.

He fought at times against very heavy odds. But he never wavered, never lost his head. He builded well and solidly even when the lightning threatened. His courage was highly exceptional, most admirable.

It is sad that the toll of such men must be taken in early life. It is regrettable that he could not have seen more of that which he builded.

But his work will go on and the memory of him will live for many years.

In this corner we have Jack White, director-in-chief of Educational Studios who was married last week to Pauline Starke whose photo is shown in the opposite corner

Inside Slants on the Industry

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

The Mirrors of Filmdom

NEWSPAPERMEN will not soon forget Marcus Loew. They know, perhaps better than many others, how human he was; how approachable; how democratic at all times; and what a refreshing sense of humor he exercised even in trying situations.

The measure of a man is very clearly shown in his dealings with the press. Mr. Loew put up no false barriers around himself; it was always possible to see him on a news story; or, for that matter, to discuss any subject in which he was interested, without the necessity for a formal appointment. He gave his views frankly and without fear and a fine sense of justice tempered everything that he said and did.

Though it is not generally known, Mr. Loew was at one time a newspaperman himself; the publisher of a small paper in his early days. This experience was no doubt reflected, in his later great career, when he came to power in the film world.

The men of the trade press estimate pretty accurately the bigness or the smallness of film folk. They do not share the illusions in which some of these personages envelop themselves. The newspaperman is trained to deal in facts; not in illusions.

Mr. Loew, newspapermen know, was one of the few really big men in the industry; and by all who knew him was well-beloved.

ELIZABETH LONERGAN, American representative of Kinematograph Weekly and staff correspondent of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, returned this week on the Homeric from England, where she has been studying film conditions and consulting with Kine Weekly and Picturegoer. During her stay abroad, Miss Lonergan contributed several reviews of films and articles on the British studios to the NEWS.

THE evidence in favor of the "Back-to-the-Movies" idea continues to pile up at a great rate. "What Price Glory" grossed more than $400,000 at the Roxy in three weeks, establishing several different kinds of records—on its merits as a picture, properly presented.

Out in Minneapolis, the Pantages theatre played a straight picture policy recently for the first time in its history when it showed "What Price Glory." The theatre broke all its records for a week's gross box-office intake, the figure being slightly over $16,400, and the film was held over for a second week of fine business.

IN St. Louis, the week ending September 2, there was a forceful demonstration of the same thing. The alibi of poor industrial conditions, unemployment, unfavorable weather or counter-attractions, was not needed when such pictures as "Beau Geste," "What Price Glory," "Metropolis" and "The Fighting Eagle" held the screen.

General business conditions in St. Louis have changed but little in recent weeks. There have been no business booms, no general revival of industry and no sudden increase in population. Hence, the big business generally done in the city first-runs the week of Sept. 2 was due primarily to the fact that for the first time in many moons the picture was given the opportunity to do its stuff—and it did, without being snowed under by presentations, bands and revues.

More St. Louisans went to the downtown first-runs that week than in any similar period in the city's history.

AT Loew's State, in St. Louis that week, "The Big Parade," which had already played two extended runs in the city at advanced prices, grossed upwards of $42,000 for the week at popular admission scale. It was held over—the third time a picture has been held over in the three years' history of the house.

Estimates of the total attendance at the State for the week ranged up to 115,000 persons. If this figure is correct, it was the greatest week enjoyed by any theatre in St. Louis, topping the 113,000 week set at the Ambassador theatre by Paul Whiteman and his band last Christmas week.

THE Ambassador Theatre, St. Louis, also enjoyed a very wonderful week's business because the feature picture "Beau Geste" was given an opportunity to demonstrate its worth. There was a stage offering but it didn't handicap the picture because it had real merit. Final figures are not yet available but it would not be surprising if the final reports show that only the Whiteman record topped "Beau Geste."

At the Grand Opera House, "What Price Glory" was playing its third St. Louis engagement and it packed 'em at every show, every day in the week. What becomes of the idea that costly presentations, noisy band shows, etc., are needed to put over good pictures?

Prior to coming of motion pictures—musical revues of that time were in their very ascendency—St. Louis had fewer than a dozen theatres, while today there are about 107 theatres doing business in the community.

At the St. Louis Theatre, "Metropolis" got off to a flying start with big business on Saturday and Sunday and while the crowds tapered off the latter part of the engagement, on the whole the week was above average for this house. In recent months, the Missouri had been converted into a jazz palace, stage shows being played up in preference to feature pictures.

Just across the street, the Grand Central, St. Louis's first high class picture house, has been dark since early in the Summer. Some observers in the Missouri city attribute the closing to a policy of too much jazz and not enough picture.

WILLIAM A. JOHNSTON'S exclusive interview with Sam Katz, published in last week's issue, defined pretty clearly the Publix policy in several directions, notably the plans for unit partnership operation of secondary theatres.

In this connection it is understood that a deal is under way by which the Publix Class B and C theatres in the Southeast will be managed by local chain executives, though still remaining Publix houses.

IN the summer of 1926 Publix Theatres Corporation and Saenger Theatres, Inc., of New Orleans, announced the formation of an affiliation for further theatre developments in the South in which Publix and Saenger would be jointly and equally interested. Under the plan no theatres then being operated by either company was to be included in Publix-Saenger activities, but the New Saenger Theatre in New Orleans, which opened in February, 1927, was included in the deal and became the de luxe Publix house in that city.

It will be recalled that a few months after the formation of Publix-Saenger Theatres Corporation that company gained a strong foothold in North Carolina through the formation of another subsidiary company—Publix-Saenger Theatres of North Carolina—through the acquisition of 50 per cent interest in Piedmont Theatres, Inc., a chain of theatres owned by R. B. Wilby, H. F. Kincey and their associates. The chain consisted of some twelve theatres at the time, and others have been added since the affiliation was perfected.

At the time Publix and Saenger entered into the original affiliation with plans to push developments in theatre acquisition and expansion in the South no mention was made of the possibility of the class B and C Publix houses passing under the operating administration of the Saengers. However, it is known that a deal to accomplish this was set in motion many months ago with E. V. Richards, General Manager of Saenger Theatres, Inc., taking the initiative.

What adds strength to the report that Publix-Saenger Theatres Corporation will gain operating control of the Publix houses in their territory is the fact that those B and C houses have not, on the whole, yielded a profit commensurate with the investment they represent. It is generally conceded that a well organized local theatres operating group would have considerable advantage in this connection.

The foundation has been laid for the deal whether it is eventually consummated or not. Through their affiliation with Mr. Wilby and Mr. Kincey and their several associates in North Carolina the Publix-Saenger Theatres of North Carolina already own 50 per cent interest in an excellent group of theatres. Their successful operation of those houses from their headquarters in Greensboro, N. C., offers further evidence of the advisability of having a local executive familiar with the territory in charge of actual administration.

It would be a simple and logical move to shift all Class B and C houses in Louisiana, Alabama, Mississippi, North and South Carolina to the Saenger and Saenger affiliations. And there is a persistent report to the effect that the Saengers would make the deal with Publix for such a handling and then in turn delegate operating authority to their subsidiaries. In Georgia, it is said, Arthur Lucas might enter into agreement to take over the Publix B and C houses through an affiliation with the Publix-Saenger Theatres Corporation. Mr. Lucas already heads Community Theatres Corporation, which owns and operates five suburban theatres in Atlanta and several houses in southern Georgia. Also he is now engaged in building a new theatre in Macon, Georgia, Publix's only opposition theatre. One of his important holdings is the Lucas Theatre in Savannah, Ga.

Florida will probably not come into the deal inasmuch as E. J. Sparks Enterprises has already perfected a deal by which the majority of the Publix B and C houses in that state were pooled with Sparks holdings and all placed under the supervision of Mr. Sparks. That deal was made several months ago and is already operative.

THE Hollywood Committee on Rumors is not quite so active this week, but it sends in a report to the effect that production supervisors are planning to organize, the object being, so it is said, to keep wages of supervisors up and prevent the wolf from approaching their several doors.

We had not realized that the supervisors' situation was so acute; in fact, we still don't realize it.

HAL ROACH is a vigorous champion of the short subject. At a luncheon the other day he declared two-reel comedies to be the solution to the presentation problem, which is becoming serious in many sections.

Picture theatres are beginning to find at the start of the new season that there is a shortage of talent for presentation purposes. There is a lack of variety—and this Mr. Roach believes can be supplied best of all by good short subjects.

Mr. Roach came straight to the point on the financial side of short subject production. "We find it impossible to obtain a return that compares with sums expended on feature pictures of far less entertainment value—just because they are in two reels. What has length to do with entertainment?" he asked.

The answer is, of course, nothing in itself. We believe firmly that a picture theatre is primarily a place in which to show pictures. That being the case, the short subject should be given its proper and rightful place on the program as a creator of variety.

A FEW words about ourselves: Motion Picture News has a world-wide audience. It is read in sixty foreign countries and territories, and for many years has been recognized as the authoritative American trade paper. These are:

Alaska, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Borneo, Brazil, British West Indies, Bulgaria, Canada, Canal Zone, Chile, China, Costa Rica, Cuba, Czecho-Slovakia, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Egypt, England, Esthonia, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Guam, Guatemala, Hawaii, Holland, Hungary, India, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Java, Jugo-Slovakia, Korea, Mexico, Nicaragua, Norway, New Zealand, Panama, Peru, Philippine Islands, Porto Rico, Poland, Roumania, Russia, Scotland, Africa, Straits Settlements, Sweden, Switzerland, Spain, Tasmania, Turkey, Uruguay, Venezuela, Newfoundland, Netherlands.

The News is quoted very widely in newspapers in this country—and the same thing is true abroad. For example, "Progres," newspaper of Bordeaux, France, recently referred to The News as being one of the three best edited of trade papers, the others being "Lichbildbuhne," Berlin, and "Cinema," Brussels.

Through its reciprocal news arrangement with "Kinematograph Weekly," the leading British trade paper, The News maintains close contact with trade developments in Europe.

Wage Troubles Near End in Many Cities

Settlement of Chicago Strike Finds Theatres Again Playing to Capacity

WITH the settlement of the wage controversy which darkened practically every motion picture house in Chicago, word comes from many different points that labor conditions are again threatened to get back to normalcy. The Chicago settlement came following a conference in the office of Mayor William Hale Thompson. Under the terms of the compromise settlement stage hands receive increases of from seven to eight per cent and operators withdrew their request for increases for apprentices. Operators are assured fulfillment of existing contracts. Since the settlement the theatres have been playing to standing room.

After Famous Players-Canadian Corporation had secured an interim injunction restraining the operators and stage hands of Toronto theatres from joining with the musicians in case of a local strike in which about one thousand men would have been involved, both sides got together Tuesday and signed a three-year agreement.

A threatened walk-out of stage hands, musicians and operators at the leading Harrisburg motion picture theatres was averted after an all-day session on September 2 at which the managers and the employes reached an agreement.

The conference of September 2 took up most of the day and in the final show down the scale of wages was boosted.

Minneapolis this week narrowly escaped a strike of motion picture machine operators which almost closed its 58 theatres and threw 7,000 persons out of work. The strike was averted at the last minute.

The operators gained wage increases ranging from 7 to 15 per cent as a result of this conference.

A brief period of open shop conditions in five Houston theatres was ended August 21 after a one-day operation of machines by non-union operators. The controversy between Will Horwitz, theatre manager, and union operators was terminated at a conference Saturday night. At this conference, Mr. Horwitz agreed to a 5 per cent wage increase.

A jurisdictional fight between licensed engineers and union electricians as to which organization should have charge of the operation of cooling systems in the leading theatres of St. Louis has caused the engineers to pass out handbills announcing that no licensed engineers are employed in operating the cooling systems in the St. Louis, Grand Opera House, Missouri, Ambassador and Loew's State theatres.

In all probability the differences that have been existing between the motio npicture machine operators' union in Albany, N. Y., and the exhibitors of that city, will be smoothed out this week. Exhibitors admit this, following two or three meetings that were held last week.

A strike of motion picture operators' union threatened to close the theatres at Sioux City, Iowa, last week but a last minute agreement was reached between the theatre men and the Sioux City theatres. The agreement was reached a few hours before the operators were due to walk out. The new scale of wages with a total of ninety-five cents an hour was claimed by both sides to be a victory.

Forty-seven Baltimore moving picture theatres are now running without operators affiliated with the Federation of Labor and they have signed contracts with the Motion Picture Managers' and Operators' Union No. 1, an independent organization not affiliated with labor.

Changes in Ohio Dep't of Education

Vernon M. Riegel has resigned as head of the Department of Education of the State of Ohio and has been succeeded by John L. Clifton. Mr. Riegel now heads the Ohio office of the visual education department of Fox Films with headquarters in Columbus. He is concerned only with non-theatrical films, his chief interest being to make visual education a part of the prescribed public school curriculum. Mr. Clifton was previously connected with the Ohio State University in Columbus. No other changes in the personnel of the censor board has been made.

Labor Arrangements Halt Proposed Loew-Publix Presentations Combine

BECAUSE of certain labor arrangements which made the deal impracticable, the Publix-Loew presentations combine, which recently was announced by the companies, has definitely been called off. The companies learned that labor regulations would conflict with the plans for sending the Publix de luxe stage shows into some of the larger Loew houses.

Arrangements as they exist between the chains at the present time will be continued, it is said, with each organization booking its attraction independently. Louis Sidney is in charge of presentation bookings for Loew and Jimmy Cowan serves in a similar capacity for Publix.

It is said that Publix is now ready to open its units in New Haven instead of at the Paramount Theatre in New York City. This is to allow time for polishing up of the attractions before they are displayed in New York.

Legislators Commend Chain Manager

THE Alabama House of Representatives took an unusual measure when by unanimous vote it adopted a resolution last week thanking the Montgomery Enterprises and Hoxie Farley, the local manager at Montgomery, for the splendid entertainment provided the legislators in the way of motion pictures during their long stay in Montgomery.

The resolution commended manager Farley for the many courtesies shown them and congratulated the company on the high-class entertainment, the courtesies and service furnished the people of Montgomery in the several motion picture theatres controlled by the company.

3,995 French Theatres Tout-Cinema Estimates

According to a report to the Department of Commerce from Trade Commissioner Geo. R. Canty, Paris, in Metropolitan France there are registered 3,995 motion picture theatres, according to the Tout-Cinema 1927. Of this number 180 are located in Paris, and 3,815 are in the provinces. Of these picture theatres, 24 of the Parisian theatres have more than 1,500 seats, 40 have from 1,000 to 1,500 seats, 81 have from 500 to 1,000 seats, 29 have from 300 to 500 seats, and 6 have less than 300. Seventy of the provincial theatres have more than 1,500 seats, 235 have from 1,000 to 1,500 seats, 1,127 have from 500 to 1,000 seats, 1,174 have from 300 to 500 seats, and 1,209 have less than 300 seats.

Marcus Loew Dies Suddenly In Sleep at Glen Cove Estate

Head of Vast Theatre and Film Interest Long Ill, But End Comes Unexpectedly---Amusement World Grieves

MARCUS LOEW, president of Loew's Incorporated, died at 6:30 Monday morning, September 5, at his home in Glen Cove, Long Island. The heart attack to which he succumbed while sleeping was sudden and unexpected, for, though in ill health for some time, the late motion picture and theatrical leader improved because of his complete retirement from active business. The deceased is survived by Caroline, his wife, and Arthur M. and David, his sons.

Mr. Loew had been in practical retirement for the last three years. In 1924 he abandoned active exercise of his authorities in the affairs of his corporation. Nicholas M. Schenck, executive vice-president, has been the virtual head of both Loew's Incorporated and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which were organized and headed by Mr. Loew until 1924, when failing health caused him to relinquish his active participation in business affairs. Mr. Schenck will continue the administration.

For nearly a month before his death Mr. Loew had been vacationing at Mr. Schenck's home in Saratoga. Last Sunday he returned to Pembroke, his Glen Cove estate, aboard his yacht, "The Caroline." The entire Loew family was present at the time, as they had all gathered at Glen Cove for the first week-end after Mr. Loew's return from the Saratoga sojourn.

The funeral services were held at 11 a.m. Thursday, the procession starting at 11:30 from Pembroke to Maimonides Cemetery, Cypress Hills, L. I., the burial place of his parents, Herman L. and Ida (Lewenstein) Loew, and the last resting place of Marcus Loew. The Rev. Dr. Aaron Eisman, of 1310 Poe Ave., Bronx, officiated.

The pallbearers were: David Warfield, Nicholas M. Schenck, David Bernstein, Adolph Zukor, Joseph Michaels, John Golden, Lee Shubert, Charles M. Schwab, William Randolph Hearst, Edward A. Schiller, Will H. Hays, Aaron Jones, Arthur Brisbane, E. F. Albee.

Honorary pallbearers were Louis B. Mayer, Joseph M. Schenck, Irving Thalberg, Sidney Kent, Sam Katz, Felix Feist, Leopold Friedman, C. C. Moskowitz, Joseph R. Vogel, Maurice Blumenthal, Richard Rowland, J. J. Murdock, B. S. Moss, A. L. Erlanger, J. Robert Rubin, Edward Bowes, Daniel E. Pomeroy, William Hamlin Childs, William C. Durant, William L. Phillips, William Braden, Messmore Kendall, Carl Laemmle, Sime Silverman, R. H. Cochran, William Fox, E. W. Hammons, Joseph P. Kennedy, J. Homer Platten, Albert Warner, G. M. Baynes, Charles H. Christie, Cecil B. DeMille, D. W. Griffith, J. J. McGuirk, Samuel Spring, H. D. Buckley, Courtland Smith, J. I. Schnitzer, Mark Hyman, Morris Kohn.

Marcus Loew

In respect to the memory of Marcus Loew nearly every motion picture theatre in the United States remained closed until 2 p.m., on Thursday, at which time the funeral services for Mr. Loew were concluded. This action followed a meeting of the board of directors of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., the organization headed by Will H. Hays. As a further token of respect the orchestras and organs in theatres played "Lead, Kindly Light," which had been Mr. Loew's favorite hymn, at the first performance Thursday afternoon.

Motion picture studios and film exchanges in the United States and Canada observed the occasion by ceasing all operations for five minutes beginning at 2 p.m., New York Daylight Saving Time, on Thursday. At the meeting of the Hays organization, at which arrangements were made for these observances, a set of resolutions were adopted expressing the grief of the board members at the loss of Marcus Loew.

The affairs of Loew's, Inc., and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, representing the principal interests of the late Marcus Loew, will continue without interruption under the administration of Nicholas M. Schenck, who has had active charge of both companies since 1924, when Mr. Loew went into practical retirement owing to failing health.

No accurate estimate of Mr. Loew's wealth is obtainable at this time, but his personal fortune runs into many millions. His principal interests are represented in Loew's Incorporated, which owns a large chain of theatres, and in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures Corporation. In 1924 he purchased "Pembroke," one of the show places of Long Island, at an announced price of $1,000,000.

All holdings of the family will be represented in the corporation by his two sons, Arthur M. Loew, vice-president, active in the Foreign Department of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; and David Loew, vice-president, active in the management of the theatres and real estate operations.

The affairs of both these corporations will continue without interruption under Nicholas M. Schenck, who has had active charge of their administration since 1924.

The death of Marcus Loew marked the passing of one of the most beloved personalities in the theatrical world. It has been common understanding that he was a man who had made his own way to his position of vast wealth without having lost that common touch of kindliness towards all. It is doubtful if the passing of any individual of the entertainment world has caused such genuine grief or has evoked as many condolences and tributes from mourners, to whom the name of Loew was either a symbol of a good time or a good friend.

Among those who paid tribute to his memory were:

NICHOLAS M. SCHENCK.—It is futile to describe the grief of all of our associates and myself at the loss of that great, lovable person. His memory will linger long in our hearts and in the annals of the amusement business.

ADOLPH ZUKOR.—I went to Glen Cove to see Mr. Loew yesterday. I knew he was a sick man, but he did not seem near death. When I heard the news today, it was a terrible shock. He and I have been close friends for thirty years. We have practically grown up in the business together and have been associated in many enterprises. All I can say now is that I feel his loss more than that of any man in the world.

LEE SHUBERT.—Marcus Loew was a wonderful character, beloved by every one who came in contact with him. It was always a pleasure to do business with him on account of his honesty and integrity. His death will be felt by the entire theatrical world in which he won for himself an enviable standing. His success was all the more remarkable in that he started from the very bottom. Personally I feel his loss perhaps more than any of his business colleagues because I had been associated with him since his start in the show business. Marcus was a truly great man in every sense of the word.

E. F. ALBEE.—I was shocked and grieved at the sudden passing away of my friend, Marcus Loew. I paid a visit to his home two weeks ago yesterday, and while he was not very rugged, he seemed in good spirits and was about to take a trip to Saratoga on board his yacht. I don't know of any one outside of his immediate partners who was more familiar with his wonderful rise in the theatrical profession than myself. He booked his first two houses in the Keith-Albee office. Every one respected him. He was a keen business man; loved home life and his family; was a fair opponent in business. I considered him one of the finest examples of clean business principles in the theatrical world. He will be greatly missed not only in the show business but by his legion of friends.

MAJOR EDWARD BOWES.—A great soul has passed away.

WILLIAM de LIGNEMARE, general manager for Anne Nichols, who proposed Mr. Loew for the Legion of Honor.—When I talked with him about the Legion of Honor recognition planned for him, Mr. Loew insisted that there were others in the motion picture industry who deserved it more than he, and even mentioned their names to me as if to prove he was right.

JOHN C. McDOWELL, Secretary, Theatrical Protective Union, No. 1.—We are astounded at the news of Mr. Loew's death. It is certainly regrettable to learn of the passing of this man with whom, as an employer, we have always enjoyed the most harmonious relations.

SAMUEL L. ROTHAFEL.—I have lost a dear friend. He was a genius and a great organizer. The industry has suffered an irreparable loss. What more can I say?

B. S. MOSS.—The motion picture industry has lost a pathfinder who blazed the trail by his progressiveness, his fearlessness and his integrity. I personally have lost a great friend.

ARTHUR HAMMERSTEIN.—He was one of my best friends and had been a great friend of my father. I know Mr. Loew had been very ill for the last three or four years, but his death comes as a great shock.

SIDNEY R. KENT.—The loss of his leadership to the great business he helped build and guide to eminence cannot be estimated. The loss of his sweet and generous friendship to the countless number who knew and loved him, cannot be replaced.

JESSE L. LASKY.—In the death of Marcus Loew the industry has lost one of its builders. It is with real sorrow that I heard of his passing. Those who were associated with him have lost a real friend.

EMIL S. SHAUER.—Marcus Loew was one of the few men I could really say I loved. In his death the motion picture industry has lost a great genius who so ably led in the work of organizing and making possible high-grade entertainment for hundreds of millions of the world's population. His passing at the zenith of his career is not only a great personal loss, but will come as a shock to those whose playtime hours have been made lighter and better by the able leadership of one of the industry's great pioneers.

SAM KATZ.—The business world and the entire motion picture industry has lost one of its most powerfully constructive leaders in the death of Marcus Loew. The influence of his dominant personality has been felt in every branch of the business. He was one of the pioneers, and from the first to the last a man to respect and admire. His death comes as a personal loss to me as to all his steadfast friends.

JOSEPH PLUNKETT, managing director Mark Strand theatre.—In the passing of Marcus Loew I have lost a very dear friend and the industry has lost a great leader. My heartfelt sympathy goes out to his family.

R. F. WOODHULL.—It was my pleasure to know Marcus Loew during the afternoon and evening of his life and to notice with admiration that during these two periods of his career he was abundantly blessed with an accumulation of well-deserved friendships. To say that I regret the passing of Marcus Loew seems a meager expression of my feelings.

E. B. HATRICK.—In the death of Marcus Loew, the film industry loses a pioneer and an outstanding figure, but the world suffers an even greater loss—a lovable character whose main object in life was to help someone.

E. V. RICHARDS, JR.—Marcus Loew was a big man with a big heart, a rare combination of big business. What a loss to all of us!

AL LICHTMAN, HARRY D. BUCKLEY and ARTHUR W. KELLY, United Artists executive committee of three.—"The motion picture industry attained prominence through the life struggles of a handful of men. Marcus Loew, perhaps the greatest of them, has passed, and we join in silent tribute with every member of the industry for which he did so much.

WILLIAM FOX.—I deeply regret the passing of Marcus Loew, for whom I have regard and affection. He was one of the real pioneers in motion pictures, and his death makes a big gap in those ranks. His place in pictures is assured for all time, but he will be missed as long as memory runs.

JOSEPH M. SCHENCK.—It is a great personal loss to me and a great loss to the entire picture industry and the public. He was one of the most important personalities in our country and the most human man I ever met.

Following are the resolutions adopted at a special meeting of the board of directors of the Hays organization this week:

WHEREAS, The members of the Board of Directors of Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., are deeply grieved at the death of one of the ablest, most respected and best loved pioneers and leaders in the motion picture industry, Marcus Loew, and

WHEREAS, As President of his corporations and a member of the Board of Directors of Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., he has by his splendid talents, sound judgment and that rare and admirable attribute—eternal humanness—succeeded pre-eminently in a field which reckons in terms of service as well as in accumulation of worldly goods, and

WHEREAS, By his charity to all men, in thought and in deed, he built for himself in the hearts of his associates a position of honor which time will not eclipse, and

WHEREAS, His example, his foresight, his ideals and his accomplishments remain a heritage to those who follow in the industry he loved and served;

NOW THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED, That the Board of Directors of Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., in special meeting convened, does hereby express its profound regret at the passing of this great leader, who was a tru friend to all men, whose deeds are a lasting monument and whose career will be an inspiration forever, and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That these preambles and resolutions bs spread upon the records of the Association and copies thereof sent to the family of our friend.

Triumphed Over Great Obstacles

An indomitable will and a capacity for hard work were the characteristics which equipped Marcus Loew for the remarkable accomplishments which crowned his spectacular career. His personal modesty, geniality and strict adherence to the rule of "live and let live" were qualities which won for him the love of his friends and acquaintances and the high esteem of his fellow men.

The son of Jewish immigrants, Marcus Loew was born May 7, 1870, at Avenue B and Fifth Street, New York. He embarked upon the career which ultimately was to carry him to a position of eminence in the amusement world when he was nine years old. Discouragements numerous and severe enough to have broken the spirit of one not so generously endowed with the will to work and succeed marked his early efforts to struggle up from poverty and obscurity.

He began to make his own way by earning money while still attending school. His profits were counted in the pennies he earned selling newspapers on the streets of the East Side. When he was nine years old necessity forced him to devote full time to business. The first job was with a map-coloring firm at a wage of 35 cents a day. Then he and a few fellow workers went on strike for 40 cents—and all of them lost their jobs.

Thrown out of work and finding jobs scarce, Marcus and another boy organized a printing business. They acquired an old hand press and printed cards, later expanding the business to the publication of a paper, The East Side Advertiser. Working furiously as reporter, editor and advertising solicitor of the paper, he made a valiant effort to succeed, but difficulties arose and he and his partner were forced to sell out.

Then he took a job with a wholesale furrier, remaining at this work until he was eighteen and had acquired a thorough knowledge of that business. With a modest capital, put aside from his earnings, he launched out for himself. Things went well until there came a collapse of the fur business, and Loew's firm was forced into bankruptcy with liabilities of about $1,800. Though not legally responsible for the debts, as the company had gone through bankruptcy, Marcus took a job as a fur salesman with other companies and saved up enough to repay all the creditors of his company.

Again he started his own business and was making progress when the general depression of 1895 struck fatal blows at companies similar to his own. He was one of a few furriers to survive the storm, but it was not an encouraging survival, for he wound up his affairs with about $7 left to show for the faith, hope and hard work he had put into this enterprise.

Then Loew engaged in a jobbing business, dealing in velveteen capes, at that time coming into wide demand. This business developed gradually and soundly into a prosperous organization.

In 1894 he married Caroline Rosenheim, who with their two sons, David and Arthur, both executives in his organization, survive him.

His business affairs seemed settled for life, when a chance acquaintance with David Warfield, the actor, was instrumental in bringing Marcus Loew into the amusement business he has served so well.

Meeting With David Warfield

Both Warfield and Loew were investing in apartment house properties, and Marcus gave the actor advice and assistance in the management of his affairs which enabled Warfield to turn one of his properties from a losing to a paying proposition. The business association and friendship thus formed was to last throughout the years that have followed. The meeting of these two took place in 1899.

A short time later Adolph Zukor was launching a penny arcade in Union Square, and Warfield, who had amassed a modest fortune through his success on the stage in the role of "The Music Master," was enthusiastic about Zukor's enterprise. He induced Loew to enter with him into an association with Zukor and his partners. The business flourished and in 1904 Loew and Warfield withdrew to form a stock company to operate a chain of arcades.

The first of these peep shows was established at Twenty-third Street and Eighth Avenue, New York. Others were opened in New York and Cincinnati.

Loew's genius for organization was showing itself in a spectacular manner now, and his keen sense for adapting his business to changing conditions and new demands was displayed when he arrived at a quick decision to make use of motion pictures, just coming into prominence in the amusement world, in his arcades.

He set up his first projection machine in Cincinnati, and then brought the picture idea to New York, opening a picture show on an upper floor above one of his arcades.

He acquired his first real theatre when the old Cozy Corner, a former burlesque house in Brooklyn, was taken over. Loew remodeled the Cozy Corner and reopened it as the Royal Theatre. Though many regarded the move as a rash adventure—believing that picture shows could not be operated on such a scale—Marcus Loew instituted a picture program and with an admission scale of 10 cents top turned a profit of $60,000 on the first year.

Develops Combination Program

He elaborated the picture showings with acts consisting of recitations and songs. It is said that his first engagement of a performer to appear in between picture showings was the result of one of his characteristically delicate ways of performing a charity. According to the story David Warfield had sent to see Loew an actor acquaintance who was in need, thinking that Marcus might find some employment for him. At the time there was nothing he could offer, so Loew told the man he was hired to give recitations as an added act to the picture programs. This novelty was something of a success and it was extended. From that beginning Loew developed his policy of combined vaudeville and picture entertainments as a popular attraction.

In 1908 he acquired Blaney's Lincoln Square and a short time later the old Harlem Casino. Thus was laid the foundation for the chain of theatres now operated by Loew's Inc., now directly controlling about a hundred houses and holding an interest in many others in New York, Boston, Buffalo, Washington, St. Louis, several cities in Ohio, the South and on the West Coast, and in foreign countries as well.

The expansion of theatre interests as a natural consequence directed Loew's attention to the source of supply for pictures. He was buying pictures at a wholesale rate and the dependence of the many theatres, representing a huge investment, upon films of suitable drawing power became a consideration of prime importance to the continued success and progress of his company.

Merges Large Picture Interests

Loew bought the Metro Film Corporation in 1920. Perhaps his first important decision as a producer came in connection with the filming of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" from the novel by Ibanez. It was a subject requiring an ambitious mounting and therefore a costly operation as production went in those days. Many believed the public had had too much war as an actual experience in their lives to be interested in a motion picture dealing with war. Loew provided the funds for the filming of the picture, and while he did not hazard all, the investment was large and much depended upon the success of the picture.

"The Four Horsemen," it is a matter of history, immediately established itself as a popular success and set new box office records, ultimately piling up one of the big gross figures achieved by film spectacles. In addition it brought to the fore Rex Ingram, its director; June Mathis, scenarist, and Rudolph Valentino. Then followed other elaborate film productions, "The Prisoner of Zenda," "Scaramouche," and others.

In 1924 Loew merged Metro and the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, bringing into the amalgamation the Louis B. Mayer Company and thus effecting the biggest production merger in the history of the industry up to that time.

The expansion policy he set for his theatre and production organization was consistently carried out over a period of several years. More and more elaborate theatres were built by Loew, and he acquired large houses built by others. In 1921 he built Loew's State Theatre on Broadway, a huge theatre and office building. In 1923 he acquired the Lexington Opera House, built by Oscar Hammerstein with the original intention of presenting opera there.

In 1924 Mr. Loew's health failed, and he turned over the active administration of the various companies he headed to Nicholas M. Schenck, for a long time associated with him in business.

Mr. Loew purchased "Pembroke," one of the show places of Long Island, at Glen Cove, for an announced price of $1,000,000. "Pembroke" was the estate of the late Captain Joseph R. De Lamar. The greatest flight of imagination scarcely could have pictured to the youthful Marcus Loew, living in poverty and struggling to keep up with necessity, the possession of "Pembroke" as one of the rewards for the effort he was to put forth in his endeavor to make a success in life.

This magnificent estate includes such luxuries as Japanese and Italian gardens, spacious conservatories, indoor swimming pools, shooting galleries, gymnasiums and a theatre capable of accommodating 150 persons.

Organizations Commanded by Loew

Among the companies, besides Loew's Inc., under his command were the Peoples Vaudeville Company, International Vaudeville Company, Loew's Theatrical Company, Loew's Amusement Company, Marcus Loew, Inc., Greeley Square Amusement Company, William Morris, Inc., Bedford Theatrical Company, Gem Amusement Company, Twentieth Century Amusement Company, New York and Fall River Amusement Company, Advance Amusement Company, Fort George Amusement Company, Hamanova Producing Company, Columbia Amusement Company and Moving Picture Company of Massachusetts, Mascot Amusement Company, Delancey Amusement Company, Natoma Amusement Company, Loew's Boston Theatres, Inc., Loew's Buffalo Theatres, Inc., Loew's Inc., of Delaware, Loew's N. and K. Corporation of Tennessee, Loew's New Rochelle and Syracuse Corporations, of New York and a number of New York City organizations, including Loew's Booking Agency, Marcus Loew Realty Corporation, Loew's Borough Park Theatre Corporation, Loew's Eighty-sixth Street Corporation, Loew's Lexington Theatre, Inc., and Loew's Star Attractions Bureau.

Nolan Articles Interest Critics

Sherwood Writes Second Extended Comment; Bahn, of Syracuse, Agrees With Author; Critic Pans Press Agents

WARREN NOLAN'S article, "God Bless the Movie Critics!" continue to stir up comment, some adverse, same favorable, in newspapers and letters from critics themselves.

Robert E. Sherwood, editor of Life and well-known film critic, devoted his entire article in the New York Evening Post for the second time to a reply to Mr. Nolan. This article is syndicated to many important newspapers throughout the country, by the Bell Syndicate.

Chester B. Bahn, dramatic critic of The Syracuse Herald, discussed the Nolan views at length in his issue of September 4.

And Gerald F. Doyle, photoplay editor of The Memphis (Tenn.) Evening Appeal, wrote a sizzling letter, in which he scored several things, including press agents.

The letter from Mr. Doyle to MOTION PICTURE NEWS follows in part:

Critic Pans Press Agents

"Of all the mess of press agents who pour in on me their flood of inane and often illiterate blah, Warren Nolan has hitherto seemed to write usually with some sense and discretion.

"Where does he get the idea that a by-line will take the place of ten or fifteen dollars pay? Personally, I am so disgusted at times with having to write about movies that almost I would pay to hide my identity.

"Sure, a critic may bawl out a press agent 'making thrice his salary,' if there are any press agents in such lucky positions. Mr. Nolan, of course, is getting big money. In this town, however, there is only one man of whom I know who has ever made a dollar more than I get. In Denver, where I happen to be acquainted with conditions also, an ordinary reporter drew as much as the ordinary press agent.

"Who gives a damn if Douglas Fairbanks remembers his first name? I have met many movie stars and, with the exception of about three, I could not to this day relate their Kleiged names to their faces. Generally speaking, I never care to see another movie star. Most of them are good fellows, it's true, but I prefer to do my drinking with cotton men, lumber men, aviators and bootleggers.

"Mr. Nolan has given me a hunch. As soon as I can, I will have a sign: 'Wednesday is the day for press agents. It won't be long now.'

"Sure, I go to lunch with press agents, theatre managers, musicians, and, when I am able to, with charming secretaries. But I also go to lunch with anybody I am able to find who knows how to use a knife and fork. I hate to eat alone. Most newspaper men that I know have the same happy contempt for a dollar that I have and the 'free' insinuation, implication or declaration only riles them.

"Mr. Nolan's instance of H. L. Mencken demanding a ticket to the Valentino funeral is nothing extraordinary. The spectacle it afforded must have furnished any critic with material galore, over which he could lick his chops with glee.

"What, I ask you, has a critic get to do with the drawing power of a picture? That is the business of the writers for your and other trade publications.

"For the most part, the movies get exactly the treatment they need. It is mostly helter-shelter, hodge podge, low-brow, scrappy, unintelligent and even illiterate. Truth to tell, so are the movies. Even some of the productions of the high-brow Chaplin, the ponderous Lubitsch, the film-eating von Stroheim, would not rate very high in a Binet intelligence test.

"Only the other day, a press agent came into my office. Said he: 'I've got a great stunt for you boys. Get your newsboys together, get a band, and march them downtown to our show and we will let them in for nothing.' Yes, a great stunt! We could have sent our boys to see the show and it would have cost us less than even the price of the band—to say nothing of the worry and of the time.

"Someday, I hope to write for Mr. Mencken a little piece entitled, 'Press Agent Follies.' It will consist of little anecdotes and extracts from blurbs. It could be mighty long. I ran out of fur-lined cuspidors a long while ago, but I would like to have one for nearly every press agent I hear from. Each deserves it for his gall in sending in matter about his pictures which even an advertising manager would hesitate to publish for paid rates for fear he would run afoul of the Postal Law, dealing with conspiracy to use the mails to defraud.

"I would far rather buy my own tickets and thus be relieved from the strain of holding back from committing mayhem and assault when I am reminded that the show which I have failed to laud to the skies I came to see on a free ticket.

"The more I see of the movie business the more I am convinced that the sooner it goes broke and is taken over by newspaper publishers the better."

Syracuse Critic Approves

In his comment for The Syracuse Herald, Mr. Bahn wrote:

"In the MOTION PICTURE NEWS my good friend, Warren Nolan, sometime newspaperman and cinema critic asks a very pertinent question:

"'What single effort has been made in the past 15 years to erect any structure of sound, fair motion picture criticism, and to attract to that work clear-thinking, cultured literary men who are on a mental level with those occupied in criticising other art forms?'

"The answer is—but it is really too obvious. From time to time, in this department, I have had some things to say about the lowly state of criticism, with specific reference to the hinterland. Mr. Nolan's article, 'God Bless the Movie Critics!' convinces easily that the same situation, nay even worse, exists in the metropolis.

"'In New York City motion picture critics have been made from dried-up editorial writers, wistful young ladies fresh from the reams of advice given to the love-lorn, sports' wrtiers, ex-actresses, police court reporters, sons of English noblemen and 18-year-old cub reporters.'

"Verily, a stinging indictment of those who pass upon the cinema for the presumed benefit of millions of theater patrons, and whose names are heralded far and wide by the trade advertising.

"Mr. Nolan's text is 'Something Ought to Be Done.' And it should.

"If the drama, with its restricted clientele, is entitled to serious critical consideration, the cinema, with its universal appeal, is much more so. I believe that managing editors who toss the movie critic's job to Tom, Dick or Mary, and let it go at that, are darn poor newspapermen, something like 10 years behind the procession.

"But the heart of the problem, I believe, is the definition of just what should constitute cinema criticism. Once we establish the standard, we may cut our critical cloth to fit the pattern.

Reporting vs. Criticism

"Personally, I feel that a picture, in a newspaper at least, should be reported rather than criticized. That is, the reporting angle should be stressed always. The critic, of course, has a double duty, first to see the picture through the eyes of the audience, and secondly to apply his own analytical measuring rod to it and note the result. Obviously, the latter verdict will be as intelligent and honest as the critic—no more, no less.

"It is equally logical, I believe, that the critic's real university is not some collegiate institution, but actually the cinema playhouse and, if convenient, the cinema workshop. Mr. Nolan says, 'A man who is to be made critic should be sent to Hollywood for six months to infest the studios and learn how pictures are made, so that in criticism he will not demand effects that he should know are presently impossible achievement.' Agreed, but I doubt if that hope will ever become an actuality. And Mr. Nolan, as an erstwhile working newspaperman, knows why.

"I have said before, and I say again, that the acid test of a picture is whether it supplies entertainment for its intended public. If its elements are skilfully manipulated to that end, it is a good picture in its own particular field, and all the talk in the world about rhythm, tempo, visual flow, and other catch words of the high brows cannot alter the fact. For the rest—to quote Mr. Nolan—'reviews should be written brightly, entertainingly, and with the thought in mind that they must read easily.'

"There is, to be sure, much more that might be said, and perhaps at some later time I will say it. For the present, however, let me express the fervent wish that Mr. Nolan and MOTION PICTURE NEWS have Started Something."

In and Out of Town

SAM SAX, Gotham president, leaves next week for the coast to be on hand when "Blondes by Choice," the third of a series of twelve Gotham productions for the current season, gets under way.

LON YOUNG, director of publicity and advertising for Gotham will leave at the end of next week for Bermuda with Mrs. Young. He expects to ge gone about two weeks.

BUDD ROGERS, vice-president of Gotham, returned Tuesday from a brief vacation in Massachusetts. Fishing and golf occupied most of his time during his stay.

AFTER a pleasant stay visiting friends and family in the East, Joe Bonomo, former Universal serial star and lately, a free-lance artist, returned to Hollywood. Before leaving, he signed a contract with Nat Levine, independent producer of Mascot Serials, to appear in a forthcoming serial, "Heroes of the Wild."

LEON SCHLESINGER, of the Pacific Title and Art Studio, has arrived in New York from Hollywood. He is in the East both for business and pleasure and while here will make his headquarters at Warner Bros.

MORRIS SAFIER, head of the Extended Run Department of Warner Bros., is back at his desk in New York after a two weeks' trip to the South, where he visited the company's offices in that territory as far as New Orleans.

CLAUDE H. MACGOWAN, general sales manager in Columbia Pictures Corporation, has returned to the home office after a month's swing around the various branches.

HENRY KING, director of "Stella Dallas," "Tol'able David" and "The Magic Flame," has arrived in New York from Los Angeles to do research work at the Metropolitan Museum of Art on "The Darling of the Gods," Morris Gest's first motion picture, which Mr. King will direct for United Artists release.

W. E. Callaway, Southern Sales Manager for First National Pictures, has returned from a three weeks' trip to New Orleans and other branch offices in the South.

Schenck Takes Oath On Highway Commission

Joseph M. Schenck, motion picture magnate recently appointed to the State Highway Commission by Governor Young, took his oath of office at Sacramento August 25th and left with B. B. Meek, State Director of Public Works, on an inspection tour of Southern California highways.

The new commissioner said that the state ought to be guided by the opinion of thoroughly trained road building experts in determining its future highway undertakings and held that, so far as Northern and Southern California are concerned, "there ought to be no divisional thought in the administration of highway work."

B & K Win Demands for Protection

Are Granted Far-Reaching Concessions Which May Be Applied to Other Circuits

PROTECTION concessions of far-reaching proportions have been granted Balaban & Katz, according to word from Chicago, which will probably serve as a pattern to be applied in many sections of the United States. According to the terms provided there is little chance for the survival of the ten-cent shooting galleries.

Balaban & Katz have been granted just about the protection they sought in the rezoning of the territory about Chicago. The new agreement extends protection covering the entire territory and imposes restrictions ranging from 28 days to one year on subsequent runs, as well as widening the protected area to embrace several counties and in some instances half of the state.

As a part of the agreement first run houses are to get four weeks' protection over class A pre-release houses. The latter in turn would have seven days' clearance over class B houses. Classes C, D and E will follow with successive seven day clearance.

Under the terms of the agreement the ten-cent theatres would not be eligible to play a picture until the fifty-third week after its class E run. The year's clearance is provided for all theatres charging less than 15 cents.

Kansas City's protection war seems to be gradually drifting into a status of self-adjustment. Thus far no contracts have been entered into by theatres in towns outside Kansas City and within sixty miles of the city, which might serve as a barometer in the campaign of first run houses to obtain 30-day protection within sixty miles of Kansas City.

There have been several contracts entered into by suburban houses of Kansas City, Kas., however, and those contracts have included an extension of twenty-eight days' to thirty-five days' protection for the first run theatres, making an increase of seven days in protection. It generally is understood that the first run houses of Kansas City, the Electric being the only large house in question, will submit to a one- or two-week protection on the part of Kansas City, Mo., first run houses.

Several exhibitors in towns near Kansas City thus far have signified their willingness to submit to seven and 14-day protection, the number of days depending upon the distance from Kansas City. Thus far no contracts have been entered into with Kansas City, Mo., suburban houses, but it is believed those contracts will be the same as those of the suburban houses of Kansas City, Kas.

St. Louis Ambassador Sets Record

A NEW one-year high attendance record has been set by the Ambassador Theatre, Seventh and Locust streets, St. Louis, Mo., controlled by Skouras Brothers Enterprises, Inc. The Ambassador was one year old on August 25 and during the preceding twelve months had a total attendance of 2,604,848 persons.

The theatre charges a 65-cent top with a 35-cent maximum charge for the early afternoon matinees. Paul Whiteman and his band is given credit for bringing the most patrons to the Ambassador in any week. In the week following last Christmas a total of 113-223 persons visited the theatre to hear Whiteman's music.

Next to the Whiteman record run the second week that the Ambassador was open was the best. In that week 73,494 persons paid to see "Subway Sadie." Gilda Gray attracted 70,099 patrons in one week, holding third place for the year.

New Class A Theatre for San Francisco

A new Class A theatre and store building is to be erected on Forty-fourth and Noe Streets, San Francisco, according to Alfred P. Fisher, constructural engineer. The structure will be of steel and reinforced concrete, having a seating capacity of 1000 and containing two stores. The cost is estimated at $70,000. Morrow & Morrow, the architects, have completed the plans, and it is expected that the owners will be ready to receive bids for actual construction at an early date.

Ed Smith Named Acting Manager of Tiffany

Ed. J. Smith has been appointed acting general manager of Tiffany Productions by M. H. Hoffman, vice-president. Smith will serve in his new capacity and at the same time will carry on his present duties as general sales manager. He went with Tiffany last December and since that time has built up a nation-wide sales organization with a staff of managers and field men. Exchanges have been established in every principal exchange city in the United States.

Cleveland Men To Build at Galion, Ohio

A group of Cleveland men, headed by Sam F. Deutsch, have incorporated the Galion Amusement Company for the purpose of purchasing the property known as the Galion Maccabee Temple building, located on the northwest corner of the square, at Galion, Ohio.

A three-story brick building will be erected on the site comprising three stores, ten office suites, a lodgeroom and an 800-seat motion picture theatre. Plans for the theatre have already been completed. It will be Spanish in type, and will be provided with complete stage equipment, so that vaudeville or road shows may be shown.

$408,152 Glory Record at New York Roxy

Amazing Total Makes Statisticians Predict $5,000,000 Gross for House for Year

"WHAT PRICE GLORY" completed it three weeks' run at the Roxy Theatre in New York last week with the amazing total of $408,152.45, a record which has not before been approached in a motion picture house. The first week showed a gross of $144,267.30, the second week, $137,893.70, and the third week, $125,991.45.

As a result of this unprecedented attendance, which totaled 492,699 people, statisticians in Wall Street are now predicting a gross of $5,000,000 for the Roxy during the first year of its existence. This is exclusive of admission taxes.

From the period of March 11th to August 19th receipts of the house, exclusive of taxes, totaled $2,351,608, a weekly average in excess of $100,000. It is now figured the weekly average will gross for the year $115,000.

Along with the exceptional business being done by the Roxy, the Fox Film Corp. and Fox Theatres Corp. are expected by Wall Street to show largely increased earnings. It is said Fox will receive $525,000 a year in rentals from the Roxy, which is equal to a little over $1 a share on the 500,000 shares of common stock outstanding.

It is figured that the Fox Theatre Corp., which holds 75 per cent in the Roxy circuit, which controls 51 per cent of the common stock of Roxy Theatres Corp., ultimately will receive approximately $500,000 a year in dividends. This will make the two Fox organizations receive $1,000,000 a year on an investment of $4,000,000.

The weekly expenses of the Roxy are said to run around $50,000, including rental. Interest and depreciation will bring the total to $70,000, which will leave a weekly net profit of $45,000 or $2,400,000 a year.

The gross attendance figures for "What Price Glory" at the Roxy are reported as follows:

Ohio M. P. T. O. Sets Date for Convention

At a meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Ohio held August 31st at the Neil House, it was decided to hold the Seventh Annual Convention of the organization in Columbus on November 15th and 16th, 1927.

J. J. Harwood, Cleveland; John A. Schwalm, Hamilton, Sam E. Lind, Zanesville, and W. M. James and P. J. Wood, Columbus, were appointed a committee to handle the details in connection with the convention.

In connection with the convention, a trade exposition will be held at which displays of the very latest in motion picture equipment and accessories will be shown, and as Columbus is a central point, motion picture exhibitors from the entire middle West are to be invited to attend the exposition.

United Artists Announce Erection of Five Additional Houses in Circuit

UNITED ARTISTS THEATRE circuit stockholders have been advised in a supplementary report that the company is erecting five additional houses with partners, to the twelve houses now in operation. The twelve houses have a total seating capacity of 24,117 and the five new ones will have a total capacity of 10,050. In all but two of the twelve houses now in operation the company has a fifty per cent interest.

Included in the present lineup are the Rivoli and Rialto in New York, in which the company purchased a 50 per cent interest from Paramount; two in Hollywood, three in Baltimore, two each in Seattle and Columbus and one in Pittsburgh. The houses under construction are located in Los Angeles, Chicago, Detroit, Columbus and Portland.

In his announcement, Joseph M. Schenck, president of the company, says that by early in 1928 the circuit should embrace seventeen theatres, all in operation. This total will have been achieved in a year and a half.

John Harris Passes Away in Pittsburgh

JOHN HARRIS, SR., 81 years old, and pioneer showman in Pittsburgs, passed away on September 2nd at his home in Crafton, at Pittsburgh suburb. He was founder of the Harris Amusement Company, which controls a big chain of motion picture and other theatres in Western Pennsylvania, Ohio and other states.

Mr. Harris entered the amusement business as a member of the firm of Harris & Willoughby. He later became a playwright and had some success in producing plays. He was associated in the management of the first motion picture house in McKeesport, a suburb of Pittsburgh.

Deceased was the father of the late state Senator John P. Harris and present state Senator Frank J. Harris, and Dennis A. Harris, now president of the Harris Amusement Company, in which all three sons as well as the father had large financial interests.

New England Theatres To Buy Elm Circuit

New England Theatres Operating Co. is negotiating for the purchase of the circuit of the Elm Amusement Co. and it is understood that plans have progressed to such a state that announcement of the transfer may be made at any time. The Elm Amusement Co. owns theatres in North Attleboro, Malboro, Milford, East Boston and elsewhere. The New England Theatres Operating Co. owns one of the largest of the New England circuits.

Universal Opens House in Kenosha

The new Kenosha Theatre, a Universal house in Kenosha, Wisconsin, was formally opened with a brilliant premiere gathering the night of September 1st. The new house represents an investment of $750,000 and was built by the United Studios, Inc., of Chicago. It is conducted by the Milwaukee Theatre Circuit, Inc., a subsidiary to the Universal Chain Theatrical Enterprises, Inc. The Kenosha will operate on a combination policy of pictures and vaudeville with three changes a week.

Wisconsin Exhibitors Elect McWilliams

The Wisconsin exhibitor organization at the convention held in Milwaukee last week again elected F. J. McWilliams as president of the association, with other officers named as follows: A. C. Gutenberg, vice-president; Max Krofta, recording secretary; Ernest Langmack, treasurer, and William Jacobs, sergeant-at-arms. Henry A. Staub was re-elected secretary and business manager.

Fred Niblo Will Direct Colman, Banky

Fred Niblo has been signed by Samuel Goldwyn to direct Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky in their final co-starring film, as yet untitled. Niblo was signed through arrangement with Joseph M. Schenck, president of United Artists.

$30,000 Advance Sale for "Wings" in N. Y.

A. GRIFFITH GREY, head of the Paramount roadshow department, announces an unusually heavy advance sale for "Wings," now in its fourth week at the Criterion Theatre in New York. The advance sale, according to Grey, is $30,115 and the picture is said to have played to capacity since its opening.

According to the Grey announcement the Criterion was completely sold out in advance for the week of September 4th and at the same time there was an advance sale of $9,000 for the week of September 11th. The box-office had sold as far ahead as September 24th. Extended engagements are planned for Chicago, Philadelphia and Boston.

3,000,000 Feet of Film to Australia

For the second time in recent months, more than 3,000,000 feet of positive film were exported to Australia, it is shown by figures just compiled by the Department of Commerce covering motion picture exports in June.

Another outstanding feature of the month's trade was the export of over 2,000,000 feet of positives to Bolivia, and 1,590,000 feet to Spain.

Exports during the month included 17,010,624 feet of positives, valued at $433,698; 4,015,555 feet of raw stock, valued at $121,546; 508,664 feet of negatives, valued at $69,913, and 1,182,407 feet of positives to non-contiguous territories, valued at $18,484, a total of 22,717,250 feet with a value of $643,641.

Tiffany Names Three New Branch Managers

Ed. J. Smith, general sales manager of Tiffany Productions, has appointed three new branch managers in the organization. J. W. MacFarland, former feature manager for Pathe and Universal in Detroit, has been named to head the Tiffany office in Los Angeles.

A. W. Plues, formerly connected with Pathe in Indianapolis and with M. G. M. in the southern division, now has charge of the Indianapolis exchange. H. H. Hurn, formerly Tiffany special representative in the Chicago exchange, has been appointed in charge of the Cincinnati office.

Cast Is Completed For "The Gorilla"

Edward Small, producer of "The Gorilla" for First National, has completed the cast that will support Charlie Murray and Fred Kelsey in that mystery comedy. Tully Marshall and Claude Gillingwater have already been announced. The newcomers are: Dorothy Revier, Walter Pidgeon, Gaston Glass, Brooks Benedict, Syd Crossley and Aggie Herring. Production has already started with Alfred Santell directing.

Mussolini on Movietone

Sheehan Back from Europe With Prominent Names on Fox Contracts

THE return from Europe of Winfield R. Sheehan, vice-president and general manager of Fox Film Corporation, brought several announcements of the signing of foreign talent to participate in coming Fox programs. The works of several authors were secured for the screen, as were exclusive services of some of them to appear in Hollywood.

Among other things Mr. Sheehan announced that Mussolini, Premier of Italy, had made a special address to the American public through the Fox-Case Mevietone. In fact, Mussolini made two thirty-minute addresses, in which he outlined his political purposes, hopes and achievements. They will be used in connection with a picture to be shown at the Times Square Theatre in New York late this month by the Fox Film Corporation.

Mussolini's talks are in both English and Italian. The Fox-Case Movietone was shown to the Italian Premier in the Fox offices in Rome before an exclusive audience invited by Mussolini and including cabinet ministers, army and naval officials and personal friends.

While in Europe Mr. Sheehan contracted with Henri Bernstein, noted French author, for five original stories for Fox films. The author will arrive in New York shortly and will go directly to Hollywood.

Motion picture rights to three popular European novels were bought by Mr. Sheehan. They are, Herman Bang's "The Four Devils," which will be directed by F. W. Murnau; "Don't Marry," by Bolla Zenes, and "The Richest Man in the World," by Franz Herczog, Hungarian novelist. He also contracted for the music and story rights of "The Dollar Princess," Leo Fall's successful operetta.

Carl Mayer, author of "The Last Laugh," was signed by Mr. Sheehan. His next three plays were secured, as well as his exclusive services in Hollywood, for a period of years. Berthold Viertek, German stage director, will also be under the Fox banner, starting January 1.

Mr. Sheehan said that F. W. Murnau declared to him that the photoplay of the future will be as different as that of to-day as the styles in clothes to-day are from those of the ancient Greeks. Murnau has certain ideas which he believes will lead eventually to a complete metamorphosis in film manufacture.

Fox News Cameramen in N. Y. Convention

STAFF and field cameramen permanently located in the larger cities east of the Mississippi for Fox News have been holding a convention at the home office of the company during the week. They were brought to New York for a general discussion of newsreel policy with Truman H. Talley, director-in-chief; Edmund H. Reek, news editor, and the home office editorial staff.

Among the out-of-town cameramen attending the sessions were: Ray Anderson, St. Louis; Frank King, Buffalo; Larry Ellis, Boston; Charles Clark, Philadelphia; A. B. Cheroton of New York, who is leaving for the Chicago territory to become assistant cameraman under William Storz; Webber Hall, of the New York staff, temporarily assigned to Memphis and New Orleans territories, and field cameramen Robert Jennings and Ray Foster, two eastern contributors to Fox News. Fernando E. Delgado was also present. He has just returned to New York after a two-year trip for Fox News to Spain and Portugal, Cuba, the West Indies and different parts of South America.

Neilan Named to Direct Colleen Moore

John McCormick has made arrangements for Marshall Neilan to direct Colleen Moore in the star's next production for First National. The story, as yet untitled, will be a comedy drama with the action taking place around an exclusive watering place.

Miss Moore is completing a four-months' rest and is eager to start work on her new vehicle. McCormick will produce the picture and will have as his assistant Duncan Cassell, while Ben Silvey will serve as assistant director. The story of the new picture was written by Howard Irving Young and the continuity is being prepared by Gerald Duffy.

Five Paramount Features Ready for Camera

Paramount has arranged a busy production schedule for the immediate future. Four feature productions are now being filmed and eleven others will go before the camera at once.

Five pictures are now ready to get under way. They are, "The Gay Defender," starring Richard Dix; 'The Side Show," a comedy special with W. C. Fields and Chester Conklin; "Red Hair," an Elinor Glyn original to star Clara Bow; a story based on Joseph Conrad's "Victory," which will star George Bancroft, and the next Esther Ralston vehicle, a story of the stage.

Lillian Gilmore Signs Long "U" Contract

Universal has signed Lillian Gilmore to a five year contract following a series of successes in which she has appeared in pictures for that company. She is just 18 years old and has been in pictures only a few months. Her best screen work was in the leading feminine roles opposite Ted Wells in "Straight Shootin' " and Al Wilson in "The Phantom Flyer."

Miss Gilmore is the daughter of Barney Gilmore, famous actor-playwright, and Mrs. Gilmore, one of the noted Shirley sisters of vaudeville and stage fame.

New England Organizes

Will Have Own Theatre Owners Association With Headquarters in Boston

THE Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New England, with regional headquarters in Boston, is now assured. At the request of representative exhibitors of Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire, and Vermont, National President R. F. Woodhull of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America spent the forepart of the present week in Boston where several conferences were held, during which extensive arrangements were made to develop organization activities in the above states.

In a statement made by Mr. Woodhull on the New England situation, he said:

"After considerable deliberation with some of the leaders in that territory, it was decided to embrace the States of Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire, and Vermont in one organization because these states form a solid block in the northeast corner of the country. This organization will be known as the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New England. Each State, however, will have separate legislative committees to care for necessary work in their respective capitals.

"A special committee of exhibitors was named at the Boston conference to develop ways and means to hold a big mass meeting of Theatre Owners, out of which the main organization will be formed.

The committee is as follows:

Harry Wasserman, Roxbury, Mass.; Stanley Sumner, Cambridge, Mass.; J. Lourie, Boston, Mass.; P. J. Lydonk, South Boston, Mass.; E. H. Horstmann, Worcester, Mass.; O. Ramsdell, Malden, Mass.; Linwood Curtis, Worcester, Mass.; W. B. Littlefield, Hyde Park, Mass.; Charles Moning, Plymouth, Mass.; Nathan Yamins, Fall River, Mass.; David Adams, Concord, New Hampshire; Mr. Ford of Allston, Mass., and Mr. Boas, of Boston, Mass.

Loans English Producers

Dr. Giannini Extends Bank's Activities in Aid of Production Abroad

DR. A. H. GIANNINI, president of the Bowery and East River National Bank of New York, who pioneered the business of banking loans to motion picture producers in America, is now extending the activities of his institution to foreign fields, according to an interview published in the Los Angeles Examiner.

Dr. Giannini, who has always been interested in motion pictures, started making loans to producers eight years ago and since that time declares his banks have loaned totals of from $2,000,000 to $10,000,000 annually for the production of pictures. He says that motion picture producing companies have established themselves among the safest and sanest risks for huge bank loans.

The Dr. Giannini published in the Examiner was, in part, as follows:

"England and other European countries are interested in motion pictures. But the attitude of the English banks today is the same attitude that prevailed among American bankers fifteen years ago. England does not want the English exhibitors to use all American-made pictures and encourages them to enter the field of production. But England bankers are wary of advancing loans to producers.

"The motion picture business today is a legitimate business. The men in command of the industry are men of competency and integrity, and I do not hesitate to extend all the credit accommodations they ask for.

"Only recently I financed a British motion picture, and I am the first American banker to make such a loan. The loan was extended for the financing of a picture to be made in England by the British National Pictures and which will star Syd Chaplin.

"I did this because I believe I am giving the industry its start in England, with the hope that other American bankers will follow suit."

Warners Will Produce Commercial Films

WARNER BROS. have organized a new department to produce commercial pictures of all descriptions for outside organizations. Educational, industrial, commercial and professional films will come under the scope of the department.

These pictures will be made in New York and the new branch of the organization will be under the supervision of Herbert B. Fogel, who has had long experience in the making of short subjects. In addition to black and white subjects pictures will also be produced in natural colors.

Eight Paramount Shorts For September Release

Paramount has eight short subject releases scheduled for September. The program provides four two-reelers and four one-reelers, among the former being three Christie comedies. There are also one Mintz comedy-drama, two Krazy Cat and two Inkwell Imp cartoons.

The first release, September 3, was "French Fried," a Christie, starring Neal Burns. "Koko the Knight," an Inkwell cartoon was released the same day. The Mintz comedy-drama, "A Short Tail" will be released September 10, as will "School Daze," a Krazy Kat cartoon.

September 17 is the release date for 'Crazy to Fly," a Bobby Vernon starring comedy, and "Koko Hops Off," of the Inkwell cartoon series. "A Moony Mariner," starring Billy Dooley, and "Rail Rode," a Crazy Kat cartoon, will be the last release of the month.

Rainbow Completes Six Two-Reelers in Color

RAINBOW PRODUCTIONS has completed a series of six two-reelers in color in record time at the Cosmopolitan Studio in New York and the executives are so pleased with the rushes that they are now considering the advisability of a super-production in eight reels of the picture for Broadway presentation, instead of releasing as the series of two-reelers. The entire series was shot in three weeks.

Lars Moen produced and directed the series, Donald Weston Bartlett as co-producer and Robert Snody as production editor. The pictures were made for the North American Society of Arts, Inc.

Edna Murphy is starred in the pictures, with Mabelle Swor, Walter Tennyson, Louis Dayton, Herbert Fortier, Louise Peters and Myra Brooks in leading roles.

Warner Production Nears Peak on Coast

Warner Bros. have reached the peak of production with fourteen features under way. "The Jazz Singer," starring Al Jolson, is nearing completion, and last scenes are also being shot on "Roulette," starring May McAvoy; "Sailor Izzy Murphy," starring George Jessel, and "The College Widow," starring Dolores Costello. "A Dog of the Regiment," starring Rin-Tin-Tin, is well under way.

Four features recently went into production. They are, May McAvoy's next, "If I Were Single," "The Girl From Chicago," with Myrna Loy and Conrad Nagel; "Good Time Charley," featuring Warner Oland, and "The Silver Slave," starring Irene Rich. Casting started this week on Monte Blue's "The Comeback."

Stories being prepared for production are "The Cliff Dwellers," with Rin-Tin-Tin; "Five and Ten-Cent Annie" for Louise Fazenda and Clyde Cook; "Rebecca O'Brien" for May McAvoy, and the next special for Dolores Costello.

Lloyd Keeps Busy With Fair N. Y. Weather

Harold Lloyd finally got a break in the New York weather and managed to get in several days of work on his newest Paramount comedy over the last week-end and through the week. He shot scenes at Coney Island, Sutton Place, Lincoln Square and the Plaza Hotel. Great crowds surged about the comedian as he was working, but they were not unruly, and Lloyd took occasion to thank New Yorkers for the splendid cooperation they have given him. If the present weather continues Lloyd hopes to complete his New York stay within eight weeks.

Ramon Novarro to Appear as Louis Fourteenth

Ramon Novarro will appear as Louis the Fourteenth in his next starring vehicle for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. It will be a lavish production dealing with the life of the greatest of the French Kings during the period before his marriage. The story, as yet untitled, will be an original one.

Eastman Issues Booklet on Film Mutilation

VALUABLE information as to how to prevent mutilation of film and to improve projection has been prepared by the Eastman Kodak Company in an illustrated booklet called, "Film Mutilation and How to Prevent It." This is a handy pocket guide for the operator and should be read by every responsible projectionist.

A postcard rquest addressed to Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., 469 Fifth Ave., New York City, or to the editor of this publication, will bring a copy of the booklet free of charge.

Joe Steed's Ensley House Nearing Completion

Remodelling of the Franklin Theatre, operated by Joe Steed and Warren Andrews, at Ensley, is rapidly nearing completion and the house is expected to be ready to open by Thursday, September 1. Workmen have been placed on the job so as to have shifts covering day and night.

When completed, the Franklin will be one of the most up-to-date houses in the city. A large new stage is being built and elaborate embossed plastering work will set off the whole front of it. A fly loft for handling stage drops will be included. A large balcony is being built and total seating capacity will be much greater than the average suburban house. The lobby will have an arched ceiling illuminated by colored lights and rest rooms will be located on either side.

Bandit Fails to Loot Till of New Theatre, Baltimore

Running through the back of the house with blood streaming from a wound in his head, John T. Moore, manager of the New Theatre, Baltimore, prevented the escape of a lone bandit who had hit him with the butt of a revolver and had attempted to rifle the cash box of the day's receipts. Moore's cry of "Murder!" roused the large audience and many joined in the pursuit of the robber, who was captured at pistol point. Mr. Moore was taken to Mercy Hospital where his wounds were dressed. The organist and operator did their bit to keep the alarmed house quiet, keeping the film and music going as if nothing had happened.

Midwest Will Soon Award Pana Contracts

The Midwest Theatre & Amusement Company will shortly award contracts for the erection of a 1200-seat vaudeville and picture theatre in Pana, Ill. The house, which will cover a site 67 by 120 feet at the junction of two main highways in Pana, was designed by Spindler & Spindler. The house will change its feature pictures three times a week and will also put on several acts of vaudeville. Occasionally road shows will play the new theatre.

New M. P. T. O. A. Bureau

Theatre Auxiliary Department Will Render Aid in Handling of Houses

PRESIDENT WOODHULL and Business Manager O'Toole of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America have created a new department to function along service lines to exhibitors. The new bureau known as the Theatre Auxiliary Department will take into account the needs of theatre owners along any line appertaining to the handling of their theatres, except the exploitation and advertising features, which will be handled where needed through the Exploitation Bureau, now in process of development.

Just who will serve as head of the new bureau has not yet been announced. An executive who has served in the industry for many years has been offered the place and is still in conference with President Woodhull and Chairman Joseph W. Walsh, of the Administrative Committee. He will carry on the work of the department from national headquarters at 745 Seventh Avenue, New York City.

This Department will be at the service of all Theatre Owners of the country, whether directly attached to the National organization or not, as it is the purpose of the National office to make organization effort in this relation as comprehensive as possible in caring for the needs of the entire Exhibitor body.

If a theatre owner feels the need of advice in the matter of building, remodelling or otherwise handling the physical phases of locating or furnishing a Theatre and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America can be of service in any way it will be freely tendered. Information regarding any theatre accessory will be placed at the disposal of all exhibitors through this Department, which has attached to it, in an advisory way, several of the leading Exhibitors of the country who are entirely familiar with every phase of Theatre Ownership and equipment and are willing to share their knowledge freely with other exhibitors who may be able to profit by it.

Circuit Profits Are Small

Pettijohn Declares Larger Chains Show Only from 4 Per Cent to 9 Per Cent

CHARLES C. PETTIJOHN of the Hays organization, head of the Film Boards of Trade, announced in an address at the annual convention of the Wisconsin exhibitors held in Milwaukee last week that, contrary to the general impression, the large circuits are not reaping extensive profits on their investments. He declared that profits ranged only from about 4 per cent to 9 per cent.

It was while emphasizing the need for adjustment of operating conditions that Mr. Pettijohn made his statement. He said that overhead and various other expenses which vary from time to time ate extensively into the profits. Elaborate settings, which increase overhead, are demanded by theatre patrons, according to the speaker.

Close to one hundred theatre owers, managers and secretaries were in attendance at the meeting at which Pettijohn urged better organization among exhibitors. While the speaker said organization had improved during the past few years, there was still much room for increased co-operation to meet successfully the many new problems that were constantly arising.

In the course of his address Pettijohn said that in late years exhibitors have been realizing that it is to their advantage to study the type of pictures the public desires. If the exhibitors study the demand closely and communicate the results to the producers the result will be for much better harmony throughout the industry.

Continuing, Pettijohn said that theatres staging vaudeville acts in connection with a motion picture, particularly those in smaller cities and towns, should be careful in staging and booking only good acts if they wish to attract full houses.

In connection with this, Pettijohn said, it is perfectly all right for the theatres to book vaudeville acts, but they should not feature over the picture. He pointed out that vaudeville should be offered as an added attraction which the house is to donate to keep patronage.

"Patent Leather Kid" in Chicago Fight Week

WITH the Dempsey-Tunney fight set for Chicago, September 22nd, "The Patent Leather Kid" will be opened for an indefinite run in that city at the Woods Theatre on September 19th. It is figured the fight fans who will flock to Chicago at that time will be liberal patrons of the fight picture.

The Chicago opening will be the first big city engagement to follow the run now at the Globe Theatre, New York. The same prices are to be charged, $2.20 top evenings and $1.65 top matinees. The presentation at the Woods will be similar to that prepared by Joseph Plunkett for the New York run.

First National will dispatch special exploitation men to Chicago within a few days to launch an aggressive exploitation campaign, which will be backed by heavy newspaper advertising.

King Vidor Will Direct Marion Davies

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer announces that King Vidor will direct Marion Davies in "The Patsy," her next starring vehicle. As a stage play "The Patsy" scored in New York two seasons ago. Vidor has just completed his new M-G-M special, "The Crowd."

Millions for Blue Laws

Huge Fund to Be Raised for Legislation at Next Session of Congress

"BLUE" legislation will be forced into a prominent place at the next session of Congress, it is disclosed, with the openinf of a drive by the Lord's Day Alliance for funds with which to finance their campaign.

No limit has been fixed for the amount to be raised, but it is no secret that the organization is hopeful of getting a fund well over $1,000,000, to be used for the "education" of Congress in the need for a Sunday-closing law for the District of Columbia, to be used as a model for similar legislation in States now having no such laws.

Well satisfied with the results achieved last year, when the Lankford bill was forced through the sub-committee of the District of Columbia Committee of the House of Representatives by the efforts of Southern democratic members, officers of the reform organizations are freely predicting that during the coming session such legislation will not only get through the committee, but through the House as well, with every prospect that it will be passed by the Senate before the Congress comes to an end on March 4, 1929.

In order to bring the weight of millions of persons to bear upon Congress, the Lord's Day Alliance is seeking affiliation with other reform organizations, such as the Methodist Episcopal Board of Temperance, the Anti-Saloon League and the Federation of Churches.

The plea for funds is based on the assertion that lax Sunday observance is responsible for present lawlessness, and that a large percentage of our criminals are little more than children; anything that tends to draw the people away from church on Sunday is condemned as being conducive to crime.

It is likely that the reformers will accompany their Congressional efforts with a demand upon the heads of the Army and Navy that military and naval establishments throughout the country shall be required to comply with the Sunday laws of the States in which they are located. The success of such a demand, it is felt, would be a real victory for the reformers, who could cite it as administration approval of their efforts.

Fred C. Dahnken

Jensen to Pilot Leo in Flight from Coast

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have selected Martin Jensen as pilot of the airplane that will transport Leo, the M-G-M lion, across the continent. Jensen piloted the "Aloha" across the Pacific to win second place in the recent Dole air race to Hawaii. The air pilot who returned from Honolulu to Los Angeles arrived in Hollywood last Friday night, when he was signed.

The Mahoney Aircraft Corporation is constructing a special "ship" in San Diego for the coming flight from Los Angeles to New York. It is figured this non-stop flight will take not more than twenty-four hours.

Paramount Newsreel Names New Cameraman

Paramount Newsreel has appointed William F. Gerecke, well-known news cameraman to the staff. He has been assigned to cover stories in and around New York. This gives Emanuel Cohen, editor of the Paramount News, ten cameramen working out of New York.

Gerecke for many years did free lance work and contributed many camera stories to the various newsreels. He was previously photographer of commercial reels produced by the United States Rubber Company.

Stern Bros. Have Long List of Comedies

Stern Brothers have announced a supply of two-reelers on hand which are included in release dates through December. Prints are already in the exchanges and available for previewing.

The product consists of one Universal Junior Jewel series of twelve two-reelers, and four Stern Brothers series of thirteen two-reelers each. All of the new comedies are based on popular newspaper comic strips.

Beery and Hatton Will Kid Society

Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton will been seen next in "We're in Society Now." in which they will satirize New York's 400. They have kidded war, the navy, aviation, mountaineering and the heroes of the fire department and they will now take a crack at the ultra-fashionable of Fifth Avenue. Production will be started as soon as they complete "Now We're in the Air," on which they are now at work.

Fred Dahnken Dies In Salt Lake City

FRED C. DAHNKEN, owner of the American Theatre of Salt Lake City, and millionaire theatrical and real estate man, died at a local hospital there, Aug. 28th, as a result of burns about the body and limbs, which were received when he was trapped by flames in the basement of his residence.

Mr. Dahnken became affiliated with the show business in Salt Lake when he purchased the American Theatre from Mrs. W. H. Swanson in 1923, which he has since operated in connection with the Egyptian theatre of Boise and the Lindhurst of Brooklyn.

Previous to that he was with the Turner and Dahnken chain of show houses, interest in which he sold in the same year for more than a million dollars. He recently leased the Salt Lake house to P. O. Silvagni, but still owns the building.

Booth Enterprises Open Greenville Theatre

Monday, August 29, marked the opening of a new theatre, Greenville, Tenn., the Palace, which represents another link in the chain of houses operated in this section by Booth Enterprises, Inc., of which E. A. Booth is the head.

The new theatre, located on Depot Street, is singularly attractive in its tasteful simplicity. Finished in Tiffany blend, the lobby is especially pleasing with its white tile floor and wall mirrors. Rose, gold and black constitute the color motif throughout the house. Large drop lights from the ceiling and brackets on the walls are shaded in gold with rose background. The walls are done in Russian renaissance with art panels in subdued shades, and an effect of spaciousness is conveyed by a 30-foot ceiling.

Wicker furniture, upholstered in the color scheme shades of rose, gold and black, adds greatly to the coziness of the foyer. A. C. Rankin decorated the house.

Columbia Signs Players for New Features

Columbia Pictures has signed a quartet of players to appear in leading roles in forthcoming productions. Dorothy Sebastian and Gibson Gowland will be seen in support of Conway Tearle in the company's next special, "Isle of Forgotten Women," which will be directed by George B. Seitz.

Pauline Garon and Alice Calhoun have been signed to play featured roles in two features that will go into production shortly, the titles of which have not yet been announced.

"Victory," Conrad Novel, Bancroft's First Vehicle

"Victory," the novel by Joseph Conrad, will serve as George Bancroft's initial starring vehicle under his new contract recently entered into with Paramount and not "You Can't Win," as announced last week. John Goodrich is writing the adaptation of the Conrad work which will be directed by Josef von Sternberg. No feminine lead has been chosen for the film which goes into production some time in September.

Movietone Accompanies "Seventh Heaven"

ROXY will show Movietone in a new way with the first showing at popular prices of the Fox feature, "7th Heaven," which opens at the Roxy Theatre, September 10th. Movietone will furnish an orchestral and choral accompaniment for the showing of the picture.

The scoring of the feature was ararnged by S. L. Rothafel, "Roxy," with the assistance of Erno Rapee and his musical staff at the Roxy. The Movietone orchestra is made up of members of the Roxy Symphony Orchestra and the chorus also is taken from the theatre.

First National Starts Four Features

First National started photography on four new features at the Burbank studios last week. Colleen Moore got under way in an original screen story written by Howard Irving Young and as yet untitled. Marshall Neilan is directing.

George Fitzmaurice started the direction of "Louisiana," an adaptation from the stage play, "The Barber of New Orleans." Billie Dove is starred. The new Harry Langdon picture, about which no details have been divulged, started August 29th.

The fourth picture that went into production during the week was "Man Crazy," from the Saturday Evening Post story, "Clarissa of the Post Road." Jack Mulhall and Dorothy Mackaill are featured.

Will Consult East'rn Heads About Story Material

According to an announcement from the studio, Edward J. Montagne, Universal scenario editor-in-chief, is departing on September 1st for New York to consult Eastern officials regarding the exhibitors' desires and to personally acquaint himself with the suggestions for certain types of stories made by Universal's salesmen throughout the world.

According to Montagne, it is possible that General Manager Henry Henigson will accompany him on this trip and take part in all these conferences.

While in the east, Montagne and Henigson will definitely conclude the negotiations with playwrights and novelists to supply material for next year's Universal program.

Wide Variety on Pathe Weekly Program

Pathe has a wide variety of short subjects for release the week of September 18. Included in the program are: "Should a Mason Tell?", the first Henry and Polly comedy; "Smith's Pony," a Mack Sennett two-reeler; a Will Rogers travel film; Topics of the Day, an Aesop's Film Fable, "Tackles and Touchdowns," a Grantland Rice sportreel; the fourth chapter of the Pathe serial, "Hawk of the Hills," starring Allene Ray and Walter Miller, and two issues of Pathe News.

John William Toone

Educational Treasurer Dead in N. Y.

John William Toone, treasurer of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., and Educational Pictures, Inc., passed away September 1st at the Polyclinic Hospital in New York City, where he had been confined two weeks ago. He had been in failing health since early in the Summer.

Mr. Toone had been treasurer of Educational for the past seven years. He entered the motion picture business with Famous Players-Lasky and was with that company for three years before becoming affiliated with Educational. Deceased was a native of Halifax, Yorkshire, England, and was in his fifty-sixth year at the time of his death. He is survived by a widow, who, before their marriage, was Sybil Hall, two sisters, Mrs. W. Dallimore and Mrs. Emma Rose, and one brother, Edward Toone, living in Yorkshire, England.

Funeral services were held at the family residence, 740 West End Avenue, New York City, September 3rd, with Rev. Dr. Arthur Judge of St. Matthew's Episcopal Church.

All-Woman Cast For Arctic Picture

Capt. F. E. Kleinschmidt, Arctic explorer and producer of Northland pictures, is now titling and editing a feature with an all-woman cast. The film was made in territory adjacent to the Bering Sea and is designed for state rights release beginning Sept. 15th. Kleinschmidt spent six months on it.

William De Mille Will Direct "Rip"

William De Mille has been requested by his brother, Cecil, to direct the immortal American epic, "Rip Van Winkle," which will be produced at the De Mille Studios for Pathe Exchange, Inc. Clara Beranger is at work on the adaptation of the story, which will go into production shortly with Rudolph Schildkraut in the role of "Rip."

"Big Boy" on Educational October Schedule

"Big Boy" is back on the release schedule of Educational Film Exchanges for the month of October, after an absence of several months caused by illness. He will be welcomed back with the first of the new "Big Boy" comedies, titled, "She's A Boy."

There are five two-reel comedies and eight one-reelers for October. Larry Semon's first release will be "The Stunt Man." The Lloyd Hamilton subject for October will be "New Wrinkles." "Seeing Stars," featuring George Davis, is the Mermaid comedy for the month, while Dorothy Devore will be seen in "Kilties."

Pat Sullivan offers three cartoon subjects. There will be two Cameo comedies, "Eats for Two," with Phil Dunham and Al Thompson, and "Shooting Wild," with Jack Lloyd in the principal role. Three novelty subjects complete the program—a Lyman H. Howe's Hodge-Podge, "Here and There in Travel Land"; a reel of Robert C. Bruce Outdoor Sketches containing two subjects titled, "Burning Timber and Rough Country," and a Walter Futter Curiosities release, "For Men Only."

Griffith Adds to Cast for "Drums of Love"

A number of principals have been added to the cast of "Drums of Love," which David W. Griffith will produce for United Artists. The newcomers to the cast are: Charles Hill Mailes, Eugenie Besserer, Sydney De Grey, Barbara Debozoky, William Austin, Rosemary Cooper and Joyce Coad. Mary Philbin, Don Alvarado and Tully Marshall had been previously announced.

"Drums of Love" was originally announced under the tentative title of "A Romance of Old Spain," an original story by Gerritt Lloyd.

Eight Companies Working at F. B. O. Studios

William Le Baron, vice-president in charge of production for F B O, makes the announcement that eight companies are now at work or will be within the next few days.

At the present time work is in progress on "Wizard of the Saddle," starring Buzz Barton; "Driftin' Sands," with Bob Steele; "The Desert Pirate," starring Tom Tyler, and "Coney Island," a Ralph Ince production.

Robert De Lacy is preparing for the production of "Red Riders of Canada," Leo Meehan is completing preliminary work on "Freckles," and Edward Luddy is preparing for "Her Summer Hero," glorifying the coast life guard.

Paramount Will Start Sequel to "Wings"

Paramount is to make a sequel to "Wings" under the title of "The Legion of the Condemned." Work on the production is scheduled to start September 15th. The story is by John Monk Saunders, author of "Wings" and William Wellman will again direct. Gary Cooper is to be starred in the new production.

Exhibitors Service Bureau

Big time exploitation supported the showing of "Rookies" (M-G-M) at Loew's theatre, Reading, Pa. The campaign, handled by Manager H. W. Forste, and Erle Homan, publicity director of the theatre, had as its leading feature a demonstration by an Anti-Aircraft Searchlight Co. of the U. S. Army. Photos above show the army truck with searchlight on display in front of theatre, and one of the window displays resulting from merchant tie-ups.

Stages Mail Campaign at Minimum Cost

Letters Exploiting "Tillie the Toiler" Printed by Business College—Addressed to Waco Stenographers

ADDRESSING letters tto 750 stenographers in local business concerns, proved a highly profitable form of exploitation for the presentation of "Tillie the Toiler" at the Hippodrome theatre in Waco, Texas. The campaign, planned and executed by Manager J. P. Harrison, of the Hippodrome, was carried out at a minimum cost.

The production cost of the 750 letters, planted on the stenographers' desks fully one week prior to the showing of the picture, cost $7 and a dozen passes. The $7 was paid to a local department store, which quoted the theatre man a special price on the paper, a high grade of correspondence paper, and the local business college got the 12 passes for addressing the envelopes and printing the letters.

Using a good grade of paper, Harrison got out 750 letters which he planted on stenographers' desks fully one week prior to the showing of picture—all at a cost of $7. One of the largest department stores quoted Harrison a special price on the paper and envelopes ($7.00) and the local business college got 12 passes for addressing the envelopes and printing the letters.

The business college has 350 students, and by the time the first fifty sheets were run off on the printing machine, the entire student body knew that "Tillie the Toiler" was coming to the Public Hippodrome. The students not only talked about the picture among themselves, but told their many friends as well.

The copy of the letter follows:

"Dear Matt:

"I sure need some help—quick. Can't you get me a job over in your office?

"The boss was gazing into my eyes yesterday and paid a man ten dollars he owed him and it won't be long now.

"I got the dear little Hoyt to take me out to that road house the other night because I knew Pennington Fish would be there and if the little 'Insignificant' had only stayed out of the picture a few more minutes I would have hooked Fish with all his money. It would have been wedding bells and the lap of luxury for me.

"Fish thinks I'm an heiress and I can't let him know I am just a poor innocent working girl trying to get along and with us girls having to have two pairs of garters now, one pair to hold up our stockings and the other to hold up traffic, expenses are terrible.

"Well, I'll see you Thursday at the Hipp—you know Marion Davies is my favorite and she'll be there doing her latest.

"Yours for more liberty,
"TILLIE—THE TOILER."

When Harrison told the newspaper editor about a letter contest, he fell for it in a hurry. A box on the front page invited stenographers to look on the Classified page to see how they could get free tickets to see "Tillie the Toiler."

All the stenos had to do was to write a letter to "Classified Editor" and tell how (within the last six months) a Want Ad in the Employment Columns of this newspaper aided them in finding a position as stenographer or secretary.

The newspaper tie-up cost the theatre 25 passes but the publicity derived was well worth the expenditure.

Haberdasher and Jeweler in "Popular Athlete" Tieup

A new version of the "most-popular-athlete contest," which has been used so successfully this spring in connection with the showing of "The Collegians," was worked out by Tom Blair, manager of the Rialto Theatre in Tonkawa, Okla. He took a full page in the Tonkawa News to tell his fellow townsmen that he, together with a local jewelry store and the Hart Schaffner and Marx dealer, were seeking to determine the most popular athlete in the three Tonkawa schools. The theatre was giving a silver loving cup, the jeweler a watch, and the haberdasher, a $35 suit of clothes to the winning athlete.

To make sure that the contest was well taken care of in the News, one of the judges was a member of the staff and the other two were faculty men from the schools. The jewelry store displayed the silver loving cup during part of the time and the contest was running against a background of lobby cards, "Collegians" pennants and tie-up cards, and the rest of the time the men's furnishing store used it in a window display of collegiate clothes. Here, too, pennants and cards plugged the Rialto and "The Collegians" series playing there.

Plan Increases Business for Opening Matinees

Manager T. R. Earl put over a stunt that is bound to increase the attendances at opening matinees. It was first tried when "The Unknown" was the feature film attraction at the Imperial Theatre, Asheville, N. C.

A number of merchants in the tie-up, give out passes with every purchase made. However, the passes are only good when accompanied with a paid admission—and at the opening matinee only.

The stores in the tie-up display one-sheet mats both inside and outside their places of business—giving forth information about the passes, how they can be procured and how and when they can be used

Brown Effects Profitable Tie-up In Raleigh

George E. Brown, manager of the State theatre, Raleigh, N. C., seems to carry a rabbit's foot in effecting tie-ups with dominant advertising mediums. His forte seems to be principally street car systems, his latest acquisition in this line being the Carolina Power & Light Co., of the Capitol city.

When Brown was in Memphis, he had his theatre's advertising placarded on the front dashes of that city and a visitor in Raleigh nowadays would think there was only one theatre in Brown's vicinity. With the use of some sound selling talk and three passes, Brown sold the idea to the street car company advertising the State theatre and thereby increased the revenue of the street car company. The argument went over and the State now has exclusive rights to the front and rear dashes of the entire city system of street cars and at no cost except cost of printing the cards.

In addition to selling the pictures which it is wished to emphasize, Brown uses the street cards to carry messages about the cooling system of his theatre.

Boy Scouts of Beaumont, Texas, who headed a parade staged there as exploitation for "The Gorilla Hunt" (F. B. O.) at the Liberty theatre. The exploitation was arranged by Manager F. W. Putnam, who entertained the Scouts at a special invitation performance

Displays Ice Cakes Tinted in Patriotic Hues

A display of red, white and blue ice in the lobby of the Victoria Theatre, Harrisburg, Pa., was a patriotic and seasonable method of exploiting "Alaskan Adventures," which was shown in that theatre, the week of July Fourth, as a companion feature with the Paramount Juniors in "Rolled Stockings."

Manager Lee Levy, of the Victoria, in cooperation with C. Floyd Hopkins, chief of the Wilmer & Vincent theatres of Harrisburg and Reading, was responsible for the unique stunt. Half a dozen 300-pound cakes of ice were used, specially made by the ammonia process by the Harrisburg Ice and Coal Company.

Wise-Crack Contest Introduces "Painting the Town" Engagement

A NEWSPAPER tie-up based on a wise-crack contest opened a lively and effective campaign for the showing of "Painting the Town" at the Alhambra theatre in Milwaukee. Four days previous to the opening the Milwaukee Leader announced prizes of 100 theatre tickets for the best lists of "wise cracks" turned in, and with all the smart sophomores and juniors, to say nothing of the seniors and freshmen vacationing at home from college, the latest thing in collegiate language was dished up for the edification of Milwaukee. The contest excited great interest, as evidenced by the heavy mail which flowed into the wise-crack editor.

Other stunts elaborated the drive. Pretty girls clad in scarlet stood at prominent street corners handing out peanuts in paper bags on which was printed the line "Nutty but Nice!" Also there was a mail campaign. Five thousand post cards were sent to names on the Alhambra's mailing list from Chicago. These read: "Dear Old Thing, Greetings from the bid city. Yesterday was a high spot in my vacation when I saw Glenn Tryon in a swell comedy, 'Painting the Town.' This Tryon is a real number, strong on looks and acting and the picture is something to rave about. I found out it is to play at the Alhambra, Milwaukee, Starting July 23rd. Wish you were here. Scotty."

Fifty paint stores displayed rainbow colored window cards on "Painting the Town" in their windows, and ten candy stores featured "Peanut Sundaes" during the run of the picture. Ten other shops drew special attention to their peanut and other nut candies.

Striking cutout which featured the frontal display at the Coliseum theatre, Seattle, for First National's "Three Hours."

Titian Blondes Guests at "Redheads Preferred" Show

One of the effective exploitation stunts put over by the manager of the Hippodrome Theatre in Oakland, California, during the engagements of "Redheads Preferred" was a Red Head Week. All during the showing of the picture red headed girls were admitted free. A most imposing array of titian-haired young ladies pounced upon the theatre for the free show.

This was preceded by the usual amount of newspaper advertisements and distribution of heralds.

Key City Reports

New York City

THAT many come to New York City to spend their holidays and that all Manhattanites do not scurry off to resorts was well demonstrated this last Labor Day week-end. In addition to these possible handicaps there was stormy weather during the middle of the week but with Saturday, Sunday and Monday just the kind of days to take people away. Despite all this the week was a good one, several houses keeping up to the high mark and one setting a record.

"What Price Glory" at the Roxy ended its three week run in a veritable blaze of glory, grossing over $400,000 during its stay. This record will probably stand for some time.

"Underworld," which graduated from the Paramount to the Rivoli made the latter house blink its eyes at the close of the week. Over $40,000 was taken in, breaking the house record.

Clara Bow's popularity made "Hula" a money picture at the Paramount in spite of the fact that general trade comment was not particularly flattering to the picture. But the box office indicated that Miss Bow has "IT" alright. "Hula" looks to be sure fire from this standpoint.

It looks as though "Mockery" with Lon Chaney was somewhat forced through its second week at the Capitol even though Chaney has a big following in this city. "Ben Hur" is in and will probably make up the discrepancy to some extent.

"Wings" and "The Patent Leather Kid" continue at a fast pace, both houses being sold out for several weeks. "The Way of All Flesh" is still holding up at the Rialto but will probably be taken out in a couple of weeks. The good-bye sign is up on the Astor front where the big letters spelled, "The Big Parade" for so long a time. Sept. 10 is the tentative release date.

"Smile Brother Smile" at the Strand did a nice business and comment on the picture was most favorable, and the little Cameo theatre demonstrated that "Chang" is still popular despite its long run at the Rivoli.

"The Garden of Allah," Rex Ingram's latest, opened last Friday at the 600 seat Embassy. It is probably good for twenty weeks for several reasons. One is that it a typically beautiful Ingram effort. "Les Miserables" continues to do well at the Central; likewise "The King of Kings" at the Gaiety and "Old San Francisco" at Warners. "Seventh Heaven" still plugs along at the Harris.

Detroit

TWO outstanding films, "Beau Geste" and "The Magic Flame," drew enormous attendance here this week. The first, playing at the Adams, was screened before packed houses every evening during the initial showings. Because Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky are a great draw in this city "The Magic Flame" did just as well. Both attractions are being held over.

"Hula," with Clara Bow made a good record on the Capitol screen, while the Michigan gross of "Adam and Evil" was fair. But the State pulled in better money than either of these shows with "The Desired Woman" and a Loew's vaudeville program.

Tabulations after a final week with "Old Ironsides" pleased Alton Warner, the New-Detroit manager, as much as any other road film he has billed. Three weeks of excellent business characterized its run.

The Miles photoplay, "White Pants Willie," was fair enough to bring in ordinary money and during the greater portion of the week the Colonial, presenting "Cheating Cheaters," rated highly.

Atlanta

GOOD theater weather swelled Atlanta box-offices on the whole last week.

The Howard walked away with the champion box-office gross with Clara Bow in "Hula." The "it" girl displayed more of her characteristic element than ever in her new production and drew the crowds each day.

Olive Borden in "The Secret Studio" followed close second in popularity at Keith's Georgia.

Loew's Grand had an average good week with "Mockery," Lon Chaney's latest. Although not the box-office winner, "Mockery" gathered in the laudatory passages from Atlanta critics' pens.

Dolores Costello played to an average house at the Capitol in "The Heart of Maryland," a picturesque civil war story.

The Metropolitan opened its "Greater Movie Season" with Corrinne Griffith in "Three Hours," and enjoyed an unusually good week.

"Judgment of the Hills," showing at the Rialto the first part of the week, proved a well liked bill, but "Snowbound" playing the latter half failed to come up to the average.

"Code of the Range," "When a Dog Loves" and "Strange Rider" shared equally in an average good box-office for the Tudor.

Baltimore

EVEN though "The Big Parade" has been shown in Baltimore twice before at the Auditorium, a legitimate house, at road show prices, during its first week at Loew's Valencia at popular prices, beginning Monday, August 29, the business done during each of the entire six days was tremendous.

Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle's reception at Loew's Century was very good but he did not do the business expected by the house management.

"Soft Cushions," was the feature attraction on the same bill with Arbuckle, with Douglas MacLean in the starring role.

"The Magic Garden," from Gene Stratton Porter's novel, went over very good at Keith's Hippodrome with five acts of family vaudeville on the same bill.

Very good business was done also at Whitehurst's New Theater where "The Country Doctor was the feature film attraction.

For its second week at Warners' Metropolitan "The Missing Link," starring Syd Chaplin did very good business. The Whitehurst's Garden Theater came along with pretty good business with "A Hero on Horseback" starring Hoot Gibson. Five acts of family vaudeville were given also on the program at that house.

"Old Ironsides" cannot be considered a good drawing card in Baltimore. It was shown for two weeks at Ford's Theater and during its second week, it only went over fairly well but the management held it for a third week. Fords is a legitimate house with prices for the picture ranging from 50 cents to $1.50 for nights and 50 cents to $1 for matinees.

"Lonesome Ladies" with Lewis Stone, Anna Q. Nilsson and Jane Winton went over only fairly well at the Rivoli.

Cleveland

EXCEPTIONALLY good business was reported all along Euclid Ave. last week, due, in large part, to the exceptionally good pictures which were on parade. "Hula" seemed to head the list of attractions if judged by the box office. It did a rushing business all week at the Allen. "Ben Hur" held up well during its third and last week at the Stillman where it was offered with the original tread mill chariot race as shown in New York. "Moon of Isreal" opened rather slow at the Cameo but grew steadily all week, bringing the receipts up to where it justified being held over a second week. The State did better than average business with "Dearie" which proved to be just an average picture. "Soft Cushions" was a big success at Keith's Palace where it kept the capacity audiences in roars of laughter. "The Secret Studio" made an average record at Keith's East 105th St. where it played all week, and did better than average at Reade's Hippodrome where it was presented for the first half of the week only. "Vanity" finished the week at the Hippodrome with satisfactory box office results. The Park did very well with a second showing of "The Better 'Ole." The Circle played a repeat engagement of "The Callahan's and the Murphys" and did well with it, considering it had played more than four weeks during its downtown showing. Neighborhood houses report a gradual improvement in business. Nothing startling, but a consistent improvement which promises a good season. Two legitimate theatres were offering competition. "The Desert Song" was at the Hanna and "The Ghost Train" at the Ohio.

Ottawa

ONE fine feature on the screens of Ottawa, Ontario, during the week of August 29 was "Twelve Miles Out," starring John Gilbert and Joan Crawford. This was at the Regent Theatre and both the flappers and the red-blooded young men liked it a-plenty. There were some censorship cuts in this film but the picture wasn't riddled.

"Man Power," with Richard Dix, opened to very heavy business at B. F. Keith's

Theatre and patronage stayed high all week because of the impression that it made on Keith customers.

Manager Don Stapleton of the Centre Theatre opened the football season by presenting "College Days" for the first half. There were quite a few who said they wished they had seen this one but it was only on for the three days. "Stolen Pleasures" held fair attention during the last half.

The threshold of the Imperial Theatre wasn't worn much by patrons during the presentation of "Heaven on Earth," a war story. The people just did not go.

The Francais was also quiet even though Manager J. T. Moxley offered a variety of bills. On Monday and Tuesday there was a double-feature program with "The Lily" and "Exit Smiling." The next two days it was "Just Another Blonde," while on Friday and Saturday Manager Moxley tried "The Death Trap." The latter worked a little better than the others mentioned.

"Beware of Widows" was a title which caught the eye at the Eden Theatre, Hull, and good patronage resulted. It was a very fair week.

There were practically no counter-attractions in Ottawa during the week, the exhibitors having things pretty much their own way.

Albany

IT rained nearly every day last week in Albany, Troy and Schenectady, with the result that the motion picture theatres in these three cities did exceptionally well. The weather had more to do with the business than the picture shown, with the possible exception of "The Rough Riders" at the Mark Strand in Albany. This theatre made more money last week than any of the others in town, playing to good crowds both afternoon and evening, although it took considerable in the way of exploitation and parades to attract attention. At the Leland, there was just about what might be termed fair business with "Snowbound." At the Mark Ritz, "For the Love of Mike" ran to good crowds throughout the week.

In Troy, "Barbed Wire" at the Troy theatre, split the week with "Alias The Lone Wolf." This was regarded as being rather unusual in view of the fact that "Barbed Wire" did a very satisfactory business a week or so before in Albany. At the Lincoln theatre, "The Stolen Bride" failed to attract much attention.

In Schenectady, "Camille" played to excellent business at the State theatre, holding up well throughout the entire week. All the first run houses in these three cities are using big features this week.

Milwaukee

THIS was State Fair week in Milwaukee, and consequently this was a week of good business for the down town theatres. It was generally felt that business was due to slump because of the come-back summer staged early in the week, but the Fair visitors saved the week.

Dorothy Gish was a popular drawing card in "Madame Pompadour" at the Alhambra and her re-appearance on the screen was greeted with enthusiasm. W. C. Fields in "Running Wild" was a strong attraction at the Wisconsin and brought in good business. "Barbed Wire" at the Merrill played to excellent houses. "The Heart of Maryland" was very well received by audiences at the Orpheum. The Strand playing "Hardboiled Haggerty" enjoyed unusually good business throughout the week. The Garden has been closed for a few days following the change in ownership, during which Milwaukee's first Vitaphone is being installed.

Business in the outlying theatres was fair, not as good as that of the downtown houses. "Man Power" at the Milwaukee drew good houses. "Rolled Stockings" brought in good business at the Oriental and "Framed" played to fair houses at the Modjeska. "Twelve Miles Out" did fairly good business at the Tower. The re-issued "Shadows" proved popular with patrons of the Venetian.

Boston

IF down town exhibitors expected to feel a falling off in box office receipts with the reopening of several of the legitimate theatres, they were agreeably disappointed, for the current week's business has been the best late summer week reported in years.

Owners who have theatres under construction and who had not expected such an outpouring of theatre audiences as have been the rule, are rushing construction work to early completion in order to cash in.

The Metropolitan started a big week's business Monday and patronage increased until by mid-week the house was well filled. "We're All Gamblers" was the feature, playing to heavy business all week. "Tokio Blues," was John Murray Anderson's Japanese presentation.

Loew's State continues to play to record breaking business for late summer.

"Adam & Evil" is the feature, establishing a new August-September record. The Parisian Redheads supply the presentation.

Added to the feast of good films which are being shown, Loew's Orpheum is showing "After Midnight" to new high record marks for summer time entertainment.

At Loew's Orpheum "The Callahans and the Murphys" is proving a big drawing card, possibly through the publicity which has been the result of many discussions of the feature.

"Dearie" and "Circus Ace" at the twin houses, the Modern and Beacon, report a good week's business. At the Fenway "Moon of Israel" which moved there from the Metropolitan, is playing to the largest audiences in several weeks.

"The Lone Eagle" is drawing good houses to the Keith-Albee Boston, while "Painting the Town" at the Lancaster, "Twelve Miles Out" at the Capitol and the Bowdoin Square, "Man Power" at the Exeter, "The Great Mail Robbery" at the Scollay Square Olympia report steady business throughout the week. "Not For Publication" established a new record for the August-September week at the University.

Seattle

WEST Coast's Greater Movie Season hapened in Seattle this week, and local picture business reached a new high total gross that bids fair to establish a record for all time.

Reaching the highest gross, due principally to capacity, was the Fifth Avenue Theatre which held up to its usual $20,000 business and played to large houses all week. Lon Chaney's "Mockery" was the film attraction, but in audience opinion this was far from being a satisfactory Chaney vehicle. The show was put over, however, by dynamic Eddie Peabody in his "One-Man Vaudeville Show" novelty and Fanchon-Marco's "Bugs Idea" on the stage.

Another tremendous box office success was "What Price Glory" which played at the Pantages Theatre at regular 50c admission prices for the first time in the history of the film. The film played to absolute capacity houses and goes into the second week with no signs of a let-up in attendance.

At Bob Bender's Columbia Theatre "Beau Geste" played its first local engagement at popular prices and attracted capacity houses for the entire week. The film was somewhat shortened from its previous road show form.

At John Hamrick's Blue Mouse Theatre, the fall season was opened with "The Missing Link" and a complete list of four new Vitaphone acts. The picture did a capacity business at every performance, aided by a personal appearance on the opening night by Monte Blue, Warner Brothers star. The Vitaphone subjects were weak.

"Camille" was the stellar attraction at the United Artists Theatre (formerly the Coliseum) which inaugurated its new policy this week. Norma Talmadge's popularity was responsible for large houses, but opinion was divided on the picture. Business was good enough, however, to warrant a second week. Manager Perutz, incidentally, has made some decided improvements in the appearance of his house and his presentations in the one short week that he has been in this city.

The weakest of the new season's attractions was "Three's a Crowd" at the Liberty Theatre, but which played to better than average houses anyway. This house has just returned to its former popular price policy, and business has shown a constant improvement already. One week is all for this film.

At the Embassy Theatre, Joe Danz offered "New York" and did a very pleasing business, aided by a stage show that was very well received.

The circus, in town for three days, was little competition for these pictures, and the week will long be remembered for its very large business.

Minneapolis

"CAMILLE" did a fine second week's business at the Strand theatre, although not quite good enough to warrant a third week. Two weeks at the Strand, though, means that the picture is certainly a box-office success. Pantages did another splendid week with "What Price Glory," but like "Camille" it was not thought advisable to hold it over for a third week. However, "What Price Glory" did such a tremendous fortnight's business that Pantages officials seemed highly elated over the house's new policy of an occasional "straight picture" week. Lon Chaney in "Mockey" didn't set any records at the State, but the receipts were up to average. The State program was supplemented by the Six original Brown Brothers and Senator Ford on the Vitaphone, and by an elaborate F. & R. ballet, in "The Slave Mart." Ben Lyon went over well at the Lyric in "For the Love of Mike" and Syd Chaplin continued to be a riot in "The Better 'Ole," which moved from the State to the Grand. The Hennepin-Orpheum crowds took a great liking to "The Country Doctor," and even went out of their way to applaud the film, which is something unusual. Buck Jones proved popular at the Seventh street theatre in "Whispering Sage." The Loring, Lagoon, Rialto and Lyndale—neighborhood houses—found business uniformly good, with such pictures as "Tillie the Toiler," "Rough House Rosie" and "Finger Prints." The Rialto revived "The Merry Widow" to good houses. The week was featured by exceptionally fine weather and by an almost complete absence of counter-attractions.

St. Louis

ST. LOUISIANS during the week closing on Friday, September 2, demonstrated forcefully, if not effectively, that real motion pictures do not have to take second place to any other form of entertainment.

Four or five high class motion pictures were on the screens of the leading theatres of St. Louis and combined they did a tremendous business—perhaps the greatest aggregate week in the history of St. Louis film theatres. The showing of the pictures is considered remarkable in view of the keen competition of horse racing and a couple of tracks of dogs.

At Loew's State that remarkable film "The Big Parade" was the attraction and it grossed (unofficially) more than $42,000. The final figures are not yet available but upwards of 100,000 cash patrons passed through the theatre's entrance during the seven-day run. One unofficial estimate placed the grand total attendance at 115,000 for the week. It was held over.

Just a few blocks from Loew's State at Skouras Brothers' Ambassador "Beau Geste" had a deservedly fine week. The record for this theatre is held by Paul Whiteman and his band when 113,223 persons paid during the week, which opened on Christmas Day. "Beau Geste" did not attain the popularity of Whiteman and his players, but its business was the best the Ambassador has had for many, many weeks.

"Metropolis" which was on the screen at Skouras Brothers' Missouri Theatre at Grand Boulevard and Lucas avenue, played to remarkable business on Saturday and Sunday, August 27 and 28, but failed to hold up but on the whole the week was much above the average for this house. "Metropolis" is a great picture from a technical point of view, but generally speaking held little interest for the average patron of the Missouri. In recent months this house has featured band shows of the jazz type and its general patronage is made up largely of the younger element.

"What Price Glory" in its third St. Louis run at the Grand Opera House stood 'em up all week.

Tampa

IT looks as though the "It" girl, Clara Bow, is taking the lead with Tampa fans, judging by the business done with her latest picture, "Hula." Of course there were a number of other features on the bill, provided by Manager Carroll. To relieve the Sunday crowds a midnight matinee was given Saturday night and the stunt clicked. The following three days registered very good. "After Midnight" was the feature.

The Strand opened the week with "Sin Cargo" and it pulled one of the largest Sundays of the summer, with a good Monday following. "The Night Bride," used three days, did very good and "Hard Boiled Haggerty" kept 'em coming for the last two.

The Franklin played in hard luck having a mis-out on Sunday. "Arizona Nights" was advertised and it brought the crowds for Thompson and his horse "Silver" are sure-fire cards here. An emergency show had to be put on and many turned away and the day's receipts were badly off. "The Swell Head" and "The Cyclone Cowboy" were used the last four days, two days each, and they did nicely.

Central Pennsylvania

FAIR weather, cooler than is usual for late August and early September, together with attractions with an especially popular appeal, made business exceptionally good for this time of year in the principal downtown theatres in Harrisburg.

Clara Bow appeared at the Victoria all Week in "Hula,' and Manager Lee Levy reports the box office made a killing.

Scarcely less successful were the appearances of Lew Cody in "Adam and Evil," in Loew's Regent, and "The Stolen Bride," with Billie Love and Lloyd Hughes, at the Colonial. All three of these plays seem to possess those qualifications of light entertainment which appeal strongly to summer audiences.

At the Russell Theatre, Harrisburg's newest neighborhood house, 1 o'clock matinees have been resumed with continuous performances until 11 o'clock. The principal attraction there was a revival of "The Thief of Bagdad," with Douglas Fairbanks, which has lost none of its popularity, judging from the way the cash register clicked in the box office.

The State, which is part vaudeville, had Rin Tin Tin in "Tracked by the Police," as its chief picture attraction in the first three days, and the last half of the week the film presentation was Douglas McLean in "Soft Cushions." There was no falling off in the good business the State has been doing all summer.

Tom Mix followers enjoyed "Outlaws of Red River," at the New Rialto, which entered upon its final month under Manager Hechard, who has taken over the Broad. In the latter theatre the main picture was "Flaming Fury."

Salt Lake City

EARLY Fall seems to be in evidence in Salt Lake and the picture theatres of the downtown district are enjoying a splendid improvement in business. The several heavy rain storms during the past week have done their share toward encouraging patrons inside the theatres.

Very good bills have been the rule throughout the city. "Metropolis" was shown at the Paramount Empress with splendid results. A stage attraction was also offered at this house, billed as "Paul's Juvenile Symphonators," which act seems to be very popular here.

Thomas Meighan and Marlette Millner in "We're All Gamblers" was a tremendous drawing card at the Victory with capacity houses being the result.

"Is Zat So?" proved to be a comedy attraction which was generally received with laughter and favorable comment.

Mae Busch and Marceline Day in "Fools of Fashion" drew full houses to the Gem throughout the week with big box office results being reported.

The American Theatre here reopened with "The Cat and The Canary." Results exceeded expectations it is announced.

"The Callahans and the Murphys" was shown as a second run at the Rialto Theatre where packed houses were had each night.

Exploitation has been rather exceptionally heavy recently on all big pictures.

New Orleans

WITH excellent productions at all downtown houses, New Orleans Theatres experienced one of the largest weeks of business in years.

Loew's State theatre set a record in theatre attendance during the week. The combination of Norma Shearer on the screen in "After Midnight" and a company of midget actors on the stage half of the bill was responsible, according to Rodney D. Toups, managing director. But the photoplay alone was enough to crowd 'em in.

Next in order comes the new Saenger Theatre. Lon Chaney in "Mockery" was the screen attraction, while a new Idea Publix show was given on the stage. The acts were weak and with Chaney so well liked in this city it is no wonder this beautiful playhouse shared in the profits.

The smaller houses too, came in for large patronage. "Metropolis" in its second week at the Strand, piled them in just as it did the first week. "The Heart of Maryland" did well at the Liberty and received excellent comments. "The Callahans and Murphys" was featured at the Trianon despite a storm of protests when it was shown at the New Saenger. Crowds seemed to like it very much.

"The Romantic Age" with George O'Brien and Alberta Vaughn, coupled with six big acts, was a big drawing card at the Orpheum. The acts were weak and the film sent them home satisfied.

Zane Grey's "Drums of the Desert" gave good satisfaction at the Saenger Crescent Theatre, where it shared honors with a snappy musical show.

"Man Power," with Richard Dix and Mary Brian, had its local premiere at the new Saenger, but it didn't seem to matter judging the way they flocked to see it at the Globe Theatre. This house equaled its biggest week with this picture.

The Lyceum played Eddie Cantor in "Special Delivery," and reported a fair patronage.

Neighborhood theatre managers report business better than usual.

The weather has been ideal for the past few weeks and this can partly be credited with the large amount of business done.

Kansas City

THERE was very little difference in the attendance of this week and that of last week at first run theatres of Kansas City. Business, considering the fact that the weather was much warmer, was good.

"The Rough Riders" at the Royal played its second week to good crowds, while Pola Negri in "Barbed Wire" at the Newman played to a good week's attendance. "The Blood Ship" at the Liberty held up fairly well, although it was slightly below last week's business.

"What Price Glory" marked the anniversary week at the Pantages and business was good, even better than last week. "The First Auto," with Barney Oldfield and Patsy Ruth Miller in a Vitaphone production at the Globe drew large crowds all week, much money having been spent in exploitation and advertising. "Three's A Crowd" at the Mainstreet played to normal crowds.

San Francisco

AS the past week was the boosting of the "Greater Movie Season Week," the additional advertising, etc., helped to greatly increase the box office receipts in the theatres, in spite of the fact that weather conditions drew many to the outlying districts and the beach in San Francisco.

"The Big Parade," was kept over for a fifth week at the California Theatre as the box office reports continued large. Every attendance record of motion pictures in this city, since the year 1917 or any time, in fact, has been broken in San Francisco by this picture, because in three weeks alone over 160,000 attended the California Theatre and many were turned away.

"Beau Geste," was shown at the St. Francis Theatre for a second week and it was crowded. Lon Chaney, in "Mockery," shown at the Loews Warfield Theatre, crowded that house most of the time, but the Fanchon & Marco act was considered poor, and this injured box office reports.

In the Granada Theatre, "Hula" drew a fair, but not too large a crowd. The stage presentation was considered good. Frank Lacey of the Cameo Theatre showed a Griffith's Week, as he called it, by having "Dream Street," "One Exciting Night" and the "White Rose" on the screen, which attracted many.

"Broadway Nights" together with the wonderful mental telepathy stunt of Joseph Mendez, known as Mercedes, filled the Golden Gate Theatre, every performance. The Pantages Theatre did well with "Cameo Kirby" and the act of vaudeville. The Wigwam, a residential house, did very well with "Silver Comes Through" and Nat Holt's musical comedy. The Casino Theatre reported good business with "For Alimony Only" and "Old Shoes."

Oklahoma City

"HULA" went over well with the Criterion audiences last week on the strength of Clara Bow. "The Missing Link" did an average business at the Empress. "The Covered Wagon" played a return engagement at the Liberty this week, and altho the comments were all good, still the business was not as good as was expected. "Soft Cushions" did well the first part of the week at the Capitol. But "Dearie" the last was rather disappointing.

Los Angeles

PATRONS are rushing to see "Seventh Heaven" at Carthay Circle as word is going around that the present attraction will soon give way to "Loves of Carmen."

"King of Kings" with a prologue of two hundred people on the stage at Grauman's Chinese showed a small gain in box office receipts.

The Metropolitan showed Richard Dix in "Shanghai Bound" and had a very good week as a result. "Moonlit Waters," Fanchon & Marco presentation, was particularly good.

"Swim, Girl, Swim" was a splendid box office picture at Loew's State last week.

The large crowds told the story of the successful showing of the "Magic Flame" at the Million Dollar in its second week.

"The Big Parade" has just seven more days to run at the Criterion. It has been drawing heavy attendance at each performance since it opened there for its second run in Los Angeles. Three of the other theatres screening second run pictures did satisfactory business. "Metropolis" was played at Grauman's Egyptian, "Underworld" at the Uptown and "The Way of All Flesh" at the Rialto.

San Diego

INAUGURATING "Greater Movie Season," fostered by the West Coast Theatres, Inc., Manager H. L. Hartman of the local houses in the company's chain, secured considerable publicity for "Firemen, Save My Child," at the New California. The picture drew full houses during its week's run.

At the Balboa "The Covered Wagon," on a return showing in this city, did an excellent business, following the Menjou film, "Service for Ladies," which had filled the house at every show.

Pantages Theatre, a vaudeville house, found "The Big Parade" a good drawing card as the film feature of a recent weekly program.

The Plaza, showing "The Missing Link," as the film feature of the week beginning August 20, had packed houses as the result of the installation of the Vitaphone.

"The Heart of Maryland," shown at the Superba, proved a specially good attraction for the matinees, according to the house manager. It also enjoyed a good evening patronage, as does almost any picture which carries an impersonation of Abraham Lincoln in its cast.

Belle Bennett's interpretation of "Mother," has drawn well at the Mission during its week's showing.

Ottawa

THE exhibitors of Ottawa, Ontario, had the annual Ottawa Fair to contend with during the week of August 22 and, as the exposition drew 275,000 paid admissions during the six days, the theatres were glad to get what they got.

The outstanding screen feature of the week was "The British Clipper" at B. F. Keith's Theatre, this being an Anglicized form of "The Yankee Clipper." The picture was an immediate hit with all classes of patrons and should go well anywhere.

Another picture that aroused wide attention was "Firemen, Save My Child" at the Regent Theatre, and the Beery-Hatton team pleased everybody as of yore.

The Centre Theatre did some smart business with "Lonesome Ladies," with Anna Q. Nilsson and Lewis Stone, during the first half, a large percentage of the crowd wearing skirts. "Let It Rain," during the last three days registered steady patronage.

"Hills of Kentucky" started off at the Imperial Theatre with a dog show and parade, with good, bad and indifferent dogs because of the presence of Rin-Tin-Tin in the picture. Business was fair after the first splurge.

The Francais Theatre offered plenty during the week and the response was fair. For two days it was "The Auctioneer," followed by "Faust" for two days, and then a double bill comprising "Notorious Lady" and "Family Upstairs" for Friday and Saturday. "Faust" and "Notorious Lady" proved to be the best attractions.

At the Eden Theatre in Hull, Quebec, "Captain Salvation" did not create a sensation with French-Canadian patronage.

Studio Briefs

Dorothy Archer, woman director, has been given the direction of "Red Hair," Clara Bow's next starring picture for Paramount.

William Collier, Jr., will play opposite Dolores Costello in her first light comedy for Warner Bros., "The College Widow."

Neil Hamilton will again be seen with Esther Ralston in her next Paramount stella vehicle, as yet without a title. Miss Ralston has just finished "Figures Don't Lie," with Richard Arlen.

Except for "The Jazz Singer" unit, the entire Warner Bros. studio abandoned work for one day to listen to Al Jolson record the Vitaphone sequences of the picture. These Vitaphone sequences will take several more weeks to complete. Cantor Joseph Rosenblatt is also heard in the sound episodes of the story.

Clara Horton has been added to the cast of "Sailor Izzy Murphy," George Jessel's next screen appearance for Warner Bros. Audrey Ferris has the first genuine lead, Miss Horton the second. Henry Lehrman is directing.

Tiffany Productions, Inc., has signed Patsy Ruth Miller to play leading roles in several of the new Tiffany pictures now being produced for the 1927-28 program.

Molly Malone has the feminine lead in a new Mermaid comedy starring George Davis. Miss Malone is taking the place of Lucille Hutton, Educational commedienne, who is confined to her bed because of a severe illness.

Louise Dresser has been signed for one of the principal roles in Corinne Griffith's "The Garden of Eden," the star's first picture for United Artists which went into work Monday, August 15, under the direction of Lewis Milestone. Hank Mann, Maude George and Lowell Sherman are also in the cast.

Floor space at the Educational studio will be materially increased with the completion inside of three weeks of the new stage building which is now under construction. The new structure is to be a two-story affair with stages on the upper floor. The total floor space at Educational, with the addition stage, will be 60,000 square feet.

Pathe began production last Monday at the Cosmopolitan studio in New York on a new Pathe serial, "The Mark of the Frog," which Oswald Brooks is producing and Arch Heath directing. Margaret Morris and Donald Reed head the cast.

Recent additions to the cast of First National's "A Texas Steer" are Mack Swain, Otis Harlan, Arthur Hoyt, Hedda Hopper, William Orlamond, Lucien Littlefield and Cornelius Keefe.

The next George Fitzmaurice production for First National will be "Louisiana," with Billie Dove in the starring role and Mary Astor as one of the featured players.

"Baby Mine," the stage farce, is to be made into a picture by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer with Karl Dane and George K. Arthur co-starring. Lew Lipton will direct this picture as his first directorial assignment.

Anna May Wong has been signed for "The Devil Dancer," starring Gilda Gray, Sojin, Michael Vavitch, James Leong, Anne Schaeffer, Martha Mattox, Albert Conti and Barbara Tennant have also been engaged for the picture which Sam Goldwyn is producing.

Laura La Plante is to play the leading role in "Has Anybody Here Seen Kelly?" This announcement was coincident with another regarding Miss La Plante's future plans. She will start "Thanks for the Buggy Ride," her next Universal film within ten days, the Irish comedy to follow later.

Louise Lorraine has been cast for a role in "Baby Mine," a new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer film with Karl Dane and George K. Arthur.

Princess Neola, portrayer of Indian characters for the screen, has been added to the cast of "Rose-Marie," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer film which William Nigh is directing.

Director Frank O'Connor is ready to start work on a six-reel comedy at the Fox Films studio on the West Coast. In the picture are Sammy Cohen and Ted McNamara. Supporting players will be Elinor Flynn, a new Fox discovery, Jack Pennick, John Batton, E. H. Callvery, John Stepling, Marie Shotwell, Frances Dade and John Hilliard. No title has been announced.

Ralph Ince has completed exteriors for "Coney Island" and is now in Chicago, en route to the Coast, shooting scenes for "Chicago After Midnight," which follows "Coney Island." On the other side of the continent Jerome Storm is directing "Ranger of the North," starring Ranger, the dog actor.

B. F. Zeidman, editor-in-chief of all of Paramount's Westerns, will in addition serve in the same capacity for Richard Dix's starring pictures. He is already working on preliminary steps towards the filming of the star's "The Gay Defender."

James Bradbury has filled the place vacated by Ford Sterling in Bebe Daniels' "She's a Sheik." Other players added to the Daniels picture recently are Paul McAllister and A. W. Fremont. Clarence Badger is to direct the farce, which has Richard Arlen and William Powell as featured players.

Sterling Pictures has already set the production wheels in motion on "Pretty Clothes," the second of the Sterling pictures for the new season. Peggy Gaddis is the author of the story of "Pretty Clothes;" the continuity was prepared by Frances Guihan. Joe Rock has begun casting.

Ford Sterling has been relieved of his role in "She's a Sheik" to be in readiness to play the part of Gus Eisman, the button king, in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes." Louise Brooks will be seen as Dorothy, Lorelei's girl friend in Paramount's picturization of the Anita Loos story. The Lorelie has not yet been decided upon.

"Lightning," a Tiffany production, has been completed and is now in the course of editing and titling.

Afred Rabach has been engaged as director for "The Devil Dancer," Gilda Gray's first starring vehicle for Samuel Goldwyn. Rabach has just finished "The Coward" for F B O.

"Gun Gospel," Ken Maynard's next picture for First National, is to be started within the next few days. Maynard has just completed "The Red Raiders."

Upon the completion of "Broadway After Midnight," Bud Barsky will place "The King of Clowns," an adaptation of Charles De Vry's play, into work with James Kirkward in the starring role. "The Girl God Forgot" will also be started shortly by Barsky, who is producing for Krelbar Pictures.

Two sisters will play the leading feminine roles opposite Lupino Lane in his next comedy for Educational. They are Charlene and Minniella Aber, ingenues who first appeared in pictures in child roles.

Alan Hale has again temporarily deserted the megaphone for reappearance before the camera. He will play an important role in "The Wreck of the Hesperus," one of the Pathe-De Mille specials. Virginia Bradford and Frank Marion are also cast.

Johnny Mack Brown, a football player, will make his cinema bow as the masculine lead in "The Fair Co-ed," Marion Davies' forthcoming vehicle for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Jules White, brother of Jack White, has been signed by Educational to direct Cameo comedies. The first to be put into work will star Phil Dunham.

Fox Films has acquired the right to screen "Tuning in on Lincoln High," a juvenile novel by Joseph Gollomb. The story has been selected to give an opportunity to the several newcomers whom Fox Films has under contract.

Gotham has signed Claire Windsor for a picture to go into work at an early date under the supervision of Sam Sax. The star will probably play in Josephine Quirk's "Blondes by Choice." However, the Gotham scenarists already are engaged in ferreting out a story for Miss Windsor.

For Your Theatre—
The Glamour of New York!

THE real New York at last, a theme your patrons will love, a "big" picture having a rare combination of many charms — that is what "East Side, West Side" means to you as a buyer of entertainment.

FOX bid high for this best-seller among the year's novels, gave Allan Dwan all the leeway he wanted in the making, gave him George O'Brien, Virginia Valli, J. Farrell Macdonald —and lots of others—waited for them to shoot scenes all over New York City—in the air, in the water, on the streets, on the roofs, and underground — and now brings to you THE picture of New York life at last, all sides of it! It is truly "East Side, West Side," the New York of to-day for the theatres of the world! Love story, fight story, adventure, big business, little people's business, city building, man-building—just, in a word, that seething maelstrom of human activities that is New York. One of the two FOX DE LUXE Specials for this year. As fresh and alluring as a new bank-note!

A GOOD story forms the foundation for this Tuxedo comedy, which is also strong in laugh material and in acting, it having Johnny Arthur in the role of a striving young reporter and Anita Garvin as a Queen of the underworld. This latter role is very ably portrayed by Miss Garvin, who easily runs away with the picture; but Johnny is not far behind. A lot of notoriety was attached to the feminine gangster who was going to prison to serve her sentence. The paper on which Arthur worked desired an interview with her and sent him to cover the assignment. It is not very long before the reporter has seen his subject and is handcuffed to her by the sheriff, who takes this means of safeguarding the fair prisoner while washing his face. While the sheriff is thus preoccupied, the female crook gets away, dragging Johnny after her as if he were a poodle. She brings him to a hotel and makes him register as man and wife. Poor Johnny! He's in a terrible fix., wanting to communicate with his paper and balked because of the bit of steel that links him with this tremagant. Eventually—it is the nature of such things—he does get his paper on the wire, gets the police on the scene in addition, and captures the raging Amazon and her fat husband who was always tagging after. There are some good gags used in some of the scenes, the one where Johnny applies shaving lather to the jowls of a harmless Scotch terrier and frightens everyone away from the telephone booth by the cry of "Mad Dog!" being especially good. Fred Spencer is the third member of the cast and Charles Lamont directed; he kept things going in this one and consequently it has lots of pep.

"The Winning Five"
(Universal—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

QUITE a snappy and pleasing comedy is this one of Universal's second Collegians series. It fairly sparkles with the atmosphere and humor of the campus, and is well done by a competent cast. The basketball game as the climax, with the hero absent until the last minute or so, lends a good element of suspense.

Ed Benson and Don Trent, of the Calford basketball team, are rivals for the affection of June Maxwell, the college beauty. Trent frames various ways to embarress Benson. During an initiation he makes him visit the girls' dormitory and then takes June around where she can see him. A break ensues. He makes Ed believe that the coming of the latter's uncle is to break up his romance with June. Ed masquerades as the girl and greets the uncle, who detains him until the all-important basketball game is nearly over. He arrives in time to win the game, however, and to square things with uncle and the girl. It is a bright little comedy, and should go well anywhere.

ASSUMING that an audience will be lenient to the endeavors of a bunch of youngsters to amuse we would say that the latest McDougall Alley Kids comedy will get by safely in the neighborhood and similar type of house where it is shown, even if it does possess an abundance of flaws. Personally, we consider the McDougall Kids to be patterned to too great an extent after a more well known group of child players, and that this similarity lends an air of imitation to their vehicles which is decidedly out of place. An obvious imitation is a detraction in comedy production as in other things.

The kids here decide to have a circus of their own when they find they cannot see the real stuff without paying. They are kicked out of an empty house which they decide to utilize for their circus, lose their motley collection of dogs (make-believe elephants, lions, horses and other animals), and share a general dismal feeling when they face the prospect of their talents going to waste for want of a place wherein to stage a show. But all their worries are dispelled when one of the gang invites them into his house, empty of older folk who have gone to town shopping. There they put on their show with an audience of boys and girls from the neighborhood. A free-for-all finally comes about and the interior of the house is literally wrecked.

"Custard's Last Stand"

QUITE unusual is it to see a comedy in which all of the principals are in black face. This one concerns some colored Southern gen'men and, while it is hardly up to the humorous calibre of the stories of colored folk down South by Hugh Wiley and Octavus Roy Cohen, and is but fair in audience appeal (a clue to this type of comedy is the first word in its title), it is of a different hue, at least. It will not hurdle any of the movie-wise in winning pleasant thoughts. A majority of the audiences will probably view it with compassionate good nature. As the scenes are laid in one of those open air, ramshackle sort of restaurants, one can readily perceive that possibilities for humor lie in the mixing up of food stuffs and drinks, the endeavors of a customer to hoodwink the proprietor with bogus money, etc. The operator of this southern feeding station is a huge fellow and to him comes a shrimpy sort of darky to buy a meal. The shrimp wins the big man's disfavor, having tried to fool him with a bad quarter; he gets punished with the job of washing the dishes and waiting on the heavier man. A few old gags or wheezes are introduced around this time and, while they are not exactly new, they help to alleven the tedium. This comedy cannot be graded as a top notcher; rather it is an average affair.

"Batter Up"
(Educational—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

A GOOFY hero who thinks he knows how to pitch, a mischievous kid with hand grenade, a dumbbell umpire and huge bats, are all mixed up in the hilarious game of baseball that is the climax of this Mermaid. George Davis is the goof and the contest in which he pitches will not be recognizable as the national game; it is not often that we see baseball nones burlesqued; in this one the goings on afford plenty of amusement. Davis is possessed of a real comedy face and plenty of talent for comicalities. He is an adoring swain for pretty Lucille Hutton, in whose eyes he shines resplendent when he volunteers to substitute for a pitcher taken ill with fallen arches, and leads the home town team to victory. In the ball game every confounded thing happens, the most amazing plays occur and seem to be legitimate. The players use huge bats which look more like battering rams than the regular ball clouter. Kewpie Morgan is dolled up in a ball player's uniform and looks like a Babe Ruth. The whole game ends in a fiasco when the grenade gets mixed up with the balls and is hit by Davis with his bat. So ends a merry game which the spectators should enjoy. It has plenty to commend it.

"Two Arabian Sights"
(Bray—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

A TRAVESTY on sheiks and desert shebas that is not so good. Only mildly amusing, this Sunkissed Comedy features Victor Potel as a drummer who peddles his wares upon the African deserts using a disreputable auto as his camel. There's a scarcity of really good gags, most of the comedy consisting of Vic's miraculous work upon the harem of a desert sheik upon whom he had stumbled. The sheik is away searching the city's market for more wives and during his absence the goofy Potel transforms the colorless females from drabness and listlessness to up-to-date bobbed haired modernness. The sheik comes back raging mad to find the secrecy of his harem disturbed and catching the hapless Potel commands that his head be cut off. At this critical moment the turbaned one catches sight of his wives emerging from their tents regalled becoming costumes and charmed with their change he orders the execution deferred, even going so far as to bestow his ugliest and most neglected wife as a gift upon the released Victor. The final fade-out sees the drummer abandoning the scene with his newly acquired wife pursuing him over the desert sands. The Sun Kissed bathing girls lend a great deal of feminine pulchritude to these desert scenes. Even so, the comedy is weak as a laugh getter. Insufficient direction is probably the cause of this detriment.

"With Love and Hisses"
(Pathe-Roach—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THE Hal Roach star comedy certainly has quality in its cast. When three extra good comedians like Stan Laurel, Jimmy Finlayson and Oliver Hardy are in a cast you naturally look for a higher grade of comedy than is to be found in this opus of the training camp. This trio is competent enough to put any gag over with plenty of gust, but the humor here fails to click because gag material is too weak.

Finlayson is a Don Juanish captain, Hardy a hard-boiled sergeant and Laurel an atrociously dumb rookie. The latter "doesn't know he's supposed to know anything," but he certainly gets the sergeant in dutch with the captain by reason of his stupidity. It's the foolishness, silliness of any particular comic that brings an uproarious response from the general run of audiences and Laurel possesses this "dumb" quality in large quantities. There's a scene where the captain is reviewing his collection of ungainly recruits and his attention is attracted by Laurel's unmilitary attitude. Stan doesn't seem to know or care what it's all about and assumes that "I won't play" attitude when bawled ou. This is one of the good moments in the film. There are others in the Pullman sequence and the incident where the awkward squad have to walk back to camp clotheless.

"The Non-Stop Fright"
(Educational-Cartoon—One Reel)

FELIX the cat has a timely subject in this Pat Sullivan animated cartoon, which offers some comedy well above the average for late cartoon releases. Felix learns of a prize for a non-stop flight to Timbuctoo and he hastily contrives himself an aeroplane, with which he executes some funny maneuvers. Clouds and sea impede his progress, but he successfully battles his way through them after thrilling encounters with all sort of monsters. There is considerably more humor to this one than is usual to these cartoon subjects.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

Hula

An Old Timer But Saved By The "It" Girl

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

T having been established that Clara Bow is the "IT" girl of the screen what could be sweeter or neater than having her demonstrate that appeal in a romance of the South Seas—one of the type of pictures where the girls go native? Which means they are decorated with beads and shredded wheat costumes. As a story it doesn't invite much praise, nor on the other hand does it call for much censure. The piece just happens to be an ordinary bit of screen fare—no better nor worse than dozens of its stripe.

Clara plays a sort of wild island rose in a plot which hinges on a love triangle. She goes by the name of Hula and is the primitive daughter of the aristocratic Calhouns. After considerable "give-and-take" she finally conquers a young engineer who is already married. This is the single twist in a film which travels very familiar ground in its incident and situations. The domestic riff is hardly plausible—and had it been treated more convincingly it would have uplifted the story.

The picture is nothing more or less than a vehicle to project the leading "IT" girl of the screen. It has its moments. Miss Bow sees to that. Her support is competent, particularly the portrayal effected by Clive Brook, who injects a deal of sincerity into his acting. Some of the sets are atmospheric enough.

The Cast: Clara Bow, Clive Brook, Arlette Marchal, Arnold Kent, Maude Truax, Albert Gran. Director, Victor Fleming.

THEME: Romantic drama with triangle tendencies. Heroine falls in love with married man and wins him after complications are eliminated.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Miss Bow's spirited acting. The atmospheric settings. Episode where heroine gets her man. The captions.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Might tease the title. Play up Clara Bow as the "It Girl" of the screen. An atmospheric prologue would help.

DRAWING POWER: Personality of star should attract them. Suitable for average houses.

Produced and distributed by Famous Players. Length, six reels. Released, September, 1927.

Another tale of a girl with a slim bank roll and Hollywood, is Sterling's "Stranded."

The Irresistible Lover

Don Juan in Modern Dress and Farce Mood

(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

A MODERNIZED and—owing to the lack of sufficient incident to carry its story the allotted distance in celluloid footage—somewhat devitalized Don Juan occupies the center of the picture in this feature comedy from Universal. In its utter frankness as unpretentious farce, concerned solely with shooting straight at the laugh, the picture has its most winning quality. The plot of this episode—one could not accurately call it a "play"—concerns the embarrassments of a wealthy idler, blessed, or cursed, with many, many lady friends, whose loveless but affectionate past tangles up the present, in which there are both love and affection. The picture takes its course through expository scenes in Gray's bachelor apartment, where there is repetition, and more repetition, brings him to a meeting with the "one and only girl," and follows up to a time when a "climax" becomes absolutely necessary, at which time the climax is conveniently introduced.

Norman Kerry as the hero to this reviewer seems badly miscast. Kerry is altogether too robust, too substantial a figure, to beconvincing in comedy based on romance and love of this gushing, juvenile type. Lois Moran is engaging as the policeman's daughter who wins the heart of this rich Romeo.

The Cast: Norman Kerry, Lois Moran, Gertrude Astor, Lee Moran, Myrtle Stedman, Phillips Smalley, Arthur Lake, Walter James, George Pearce. Directed by William Beaudine.

THEME: Farce involving a rich Lothario deeply in love with a policeman's daughter, and beset by his lady friends of the days before he really thought of love.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The acting, and the staging of the piece.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Best selling point is the cast, which lists several well known and favored names.

DRAWING POWER: Should draw on strength of cast and prove satisfactory as a routine offering.

Produced and Distributed by Universal. Length, 6,958 feet. Released, December 14, 1927.

The Desired Woman

A Stirring Tale of the Desert

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

ROMANCE that burns with desert heat, is the way the Warner press sheets describe this somewhat stirring, and also somewhat depressing tale of the desert. It is a desert not without its oasis, for Irene Rich, the star, weeps copiously throughout. In fact, for a woman so much desired she has a tough time of it. Judging by the actions of her hard-hearted soldier husband, a role played well by William Russell, she is not as much desired by him as she is by the youthful lieutenant, played by William Collier, Jr. or the heat-crazed Lieutenant Kellogg, as capably portrayed by John Miljan.

As a whole the story is fairly interesting, if not too convincing. The screen reeks with sand and tears throughout the action and is a little too depressing to be really entertaining. Miss Rich has a part that does not show her to the best advantage. She seems to be somewhat out of her element in the coarse raiment of the desert, and with her continuous depression one wonders slightly why she is so much desired.

William Collier, Jr., is a somewhat youngish lieutenant to be so much enamoured of a woman who, in the role at least, is so much his senior. He is also guilty at times of acting a little too strenuously.

The Cast: Irene Rich, William Russell, William Collier, Jr., Douglas Gerrard, Jack Ackroyd, John Miljan, Richard Tucker.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: The battle between the madman and the young lieutenant; the terrific desert sandstorm; the many dramatic climaxes; the name of the star and the good supporting cast.

DRAWING POWER: Should do fairly well.

THEME: Romantic drama of the desert. Soldier's wife, bored by surroundings, rejects love of two young lieutenants, wins freedom from hard hearted husband and finds happiness in London marriage.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The splendid desert scenes; the sandstorm on the desert; the uprising of the Arabs.

Produced and distributed by Warner Bros.
Length, 6,408 feet. Released August 27, 1927.

Some of the comedy incidents which feature "The Irrisistible Lover" (Universal).

Stranded

An Oft-Repeated Tale of Hollywood

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS is the oft-repeated tale of the small town girl on whom the slim family bank roll is spent to make a star of her in Hollywood. It is neither better nor worse than the same screen stories that have gone before, nor does it vary any in the telling. It is the stereotyped story that has always been more or less appealing because perhaps it rings of truth. Doubtless Hollywood is overrun with girls of the type portrayed.

Shirley Mason is the Sally Simpson of the story and she does her work very acceptably, even though at times she tries too hard to do it well. She has William Collier, Jr., as the small town genius playing opposite her and it is he who makes her realize, as he always insisted, that she was not made to star on the screen. And so she returns to her home to wed him after he has put over a profitable deal with the railroad on some property he has acquired.

John Miljan is the villain, with access to the studios, who for a consideration would make a star of the small-town girl.

The Cast: Shirley Mason, William Colliler, Jr., John Miljan, Florence Turner, Gale Henry, Shannon Day, Lucy Beaumont, Rosa Gore.

THEME: Drama of the studios in which small town girl tries for stardom in Hollywood, only to meet disappointment after disappointment. As she is about to go to her ruin she is induced to return home by her sweetheart, who has suddenly become rich through a real estate transaction with the railroad.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The shots of the different studios in Hollywood; scenes showing the actual shooting of pictures.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: The dangers a young girl encounters with the wrong people in Hollywood: the fight between the young lover and the villain: the scenes in the dressing rooms.

DRAWING POWER: The story seems to be a popular one and should go fairly well.

Produced and distributed by Sterling Productions.
Length, 5,404 feet. Released, September 1, 1927.

A Man's Past

Tensely Dramatic and Well Done

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS Universal Jewel with Conrad Veidt fairly teems with drama that is very well acted and very well directed. It has one climax after another that lends plenty of suspense and as the action is fairly continuous it is bound to hold the closest attention from start to finish. Little time is lost in getting right into the thick of the story, with a murder and near murder in the first reel.

Conrad Veidt as the prisoner in the French garrison, where he is held for ten years for humanely putting to death one of his patients who was suffering an incurable malady, does some exceptionally good work both in the prison scenes and later when he impersonates his closest friend, who is a great surgeon.

There is a splendid climax when the hero, who is posing as the brother of the girl he loves, is called upon to ask her hand for the rival, who has recognized him as an escaped convict.

The Cast: Conrad Veidt, Barbara Bedford, Ian Keith, Arthur Edmund Carew, Charles Puffy, Corliss Palmer, Edward Reinach.

THEME: Romantic drama in which a famed surgeon is sentenced to serve ten years for humanely ending the life of an incurable. He escapes, impersonates his closest friend who is a surgeon, cares for the friend and sister, with whom he falls in love. Recognized as an escaped convict by his rival, he saves the latter's life through a delicate operation, is pardoned and wins the girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The many dramatic incidents; the beautiful desert scenes; the colorful and dramatic prison scenes. The good work of the cast.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: The intensely dramatic story; the question of the justice in sentencing a reputable doctor for taking the life of a patient suffering agony and incurable. The prison scenes. The desert scenes.

DRAWING POWER: Will please them equally well in the small as well as the largest houses.

Produced and distributed by Universal.
Length 6,135 feet. Released, December 18, 1927.

Swim, Girl, Swim

Just a Vehicle for Bebe Daniels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THEY'VE come a little late with this one. Had it been made during the first mad rush of the Channel swimmers it would have been more timely—and might possibly have served up better entertainment. There is nothing in this picture which would recommend declaring a holiday for it. Bebe Daniels has had far more interesting material. Since the star has gone in for different characterizations (those which make her out some sort of an ugly duckling), it can't be accepted as anything other than a vehicle.

In "Swim, Girl, Swim" Bebe has another ugly duckling role—who discards her old maidish modes and manners and develops the necessary S. A. (particularly when the young men come around). She wins the Channel swim and, guided by no less an authority than Gertrude Ederle (the real Channel conqueror), she manages later to win a college swimming contest.

The piece is acceptable if you don't take it too seriously. It's the typical yarn of its kind—and doesn't vary from dozens of others which have preceded it on the screen.

The Cast: Beebe Daniels, Gertrude Ederle, Josephine Dunn, Wm. Austin, James Mock. Director, Clarence Badger.

THEME: Romantic drama of ugly duckling who develops personality at the opportune moment and becomes exceedingly popular.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The swimming episodes. The incident attendant upon the greasing of the swimmers. The characterization by Miss Daniels. The atmosphere. The acting by William Austin.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Feature Miss Daniels in the grease worn by Channel swimmers. Use stills. Play up the Channel accomplishments of Gertrude Ederle, who appears in the picture. Tease the title.

DRAWING POWER: The title and popularity of star should draw good patronage. Suitable for all types of houses.

Produced and distributed by Famous Players.
Length, six reels. Released, September, 1927.

The Life of Riley

Slapstick Comedy Has Its Moments

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IF one is looking for obvious humor which springs from slapstick then this picture is the spectator's spinach. The fun isn't so spontaneous inasmuch as the high jinks furnish evidence of being worked over considerably. The effort here is to bring the laugh from deep down in the diaphragm. And, thanks to the antics of George Sidney and Charlie Murray, it will tickle the ribs of the majority.

There isn't very much of a story here. It looks as if the director shot the sequences as the action progressed—without benefit of script. All of the old familiar gags are in evidence—and some are still capable of rousing a chuckle. But the chuckles are gathered more from the "business" put over by George and Charlie than from any monkey shines of the director.

The idea features the rivalry of a fireman and a policeman for the heart of a rich widow. The background is a small town—with all of a small town's usual exaggerations. It smacks a good deal of "Friendly Enemies" and also of the Irish-Jewish complications. The customary arguments and fights are projected—until the men get together to combat the common enemy in the shape of a slick promoter. The picture is acted breezily enough—and the characterization is sound. But these comedy teams need stronger material than what is being made for them these days.

The Cast: George Sidney, Charlie Murray, Sam Hardy, Myrtle Stedman. Director, William Beaudine.

THEME: Comedy-drama of rivals who quarrel constantly, but who become reconciled to fight a common enemy.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The comedy of Sidney and Murray. The bickerings of the two men. Some of the gags. The captions.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Tease that title. Play up the new comedy team and bill as a fun-maker, etc.

DRAWING POWER: Suitable for average houses. Title should draw patronage.

Produced by E. M. Asher. Distributed by First National. Length, six reels. Released, September, 1927.

Paramount's "Swim, Girl, Swim" is a typical Bebe Daniel vehicle.

The Garden of Allah

Beautiful Production But Lacks Drama and Movement

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE much-heralded picture of Rex Ingram's "The Garden of Allah," does not come up to expectations. True it carries gorgeous backgrounds which have been collected along the Riviera and in Africa, but its story and treatment fail in presenting anything that grips the imagination. Probably because so much is expected from the director one looks for a masterpiece every time his name decorates a film. To sum it up the picture is a photographic delight, but lacks movement and novelty otherwise.

Mr. Ingram has labored many months over the Hichkens story, but he has failed to catch the spirit of the original. The externals are captured sure enough; it is the substance of the tale that is missing. The plot of the young monk who relinquishes his religious vows through the call of the flesh—and whose conscience leads him to confess his sin to his wife, with the result that she sends him back to the monastery to do penance—this plot contains strong dramatic fiber. But Ingram hasn't taken the best advantage of it.

Where the director triumphs is in the atmosphere and incident. The episodes of the Arabs are finely executed. And he has guided the players so that they feel their roles.

The Cast: Alice Terry, Ivan Petrovitch, Marcel Vibert, Armand Dutertre, Mme. Paquerette, Michael Powell, Gerald Fielding, Ben Fadour. Director, Rex Ingram.

THEME: Drama of monk who surrenders his religious vows for the call of the flesh only to return to them and pay penance when he realizes his sin.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The beautiful settings. The scenes with the Arabs. The fine acting by Petrovitch. The renunciation. The tone and quality of film.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Smile, Brother, Smile"—First National, Strand Theatre, New York City

Graphic: "Has plenty of pep and is amusing. Snappy tempo holds throughout."

"Smile, Brother, Smile"—First National, Olympia Theatre, Boston

Advertiser: "John Francis Dillon's brilliant direction keeps the whole affair moving at a hilarious pace. He dresses it up, pokes sly fun at it, and fairly keeps the film spinning along."

Traveler: "For real entertainment you can't afford to miss 'Smile, Brother, Smile.' Another delightful light comedy. Pep is the keynote of this picture and it keeps moving along at a fast rate with the laughs coming often. John Francis Dillon, First National's star comedy director, shows himself to be original and expert in constructing comedy situations."

Herald: "Delightful comedy, splendidly played by Jack Mulhall and Dorothy Mackail. . . . Miss Mackaill contributes a characterization equal to Mulhall's expert handling of his semi-farcical role."

Post: "Light comedy, splendidly played. Without a dull moment."

American: "Will afford you delightful entertainment."

"What Price Glory" — Fox Tauentzien Palace, Germany

Berliner Tageblatt: "This picture is a great and genuine accomplishment. There is no fault to be found with it. You must see it and then think, think and think. And it can never be thought out to a finish."

Berliner Zeitung am Mittag: "A person may think what he will of the advisability of war pictures, this work (What Price Glory), which had sensational success in the United States as well as England, will, with its thrilling openness, fulfil in every way the aim of its pacific tendency, throughout the entire world. It might be objected to on principle that the full cruelty of war cannot be even approximately reproduced in pictures, and yet it must be recognized that battle pictures like these bring the entire insanity of wholesale murder most vividly before one's eyes . . ."

Berliner Morgenpost: "This Fox picture (What Price Glory), is a very great film treat. A war picture. Of course, there are a good many people who object to this stupid war playing on the screen just the same as the bloody reality. As a warning, an accusation, an emphatic protest of an excruciated human world against self laceration, however, this picture is so impressive and so arousing that it is to be wished that everyone should see it. . . . the picture called forth most enthusiastic applause."

Uhr Abendblatt: "This is a war picture and yet not a war picture. It is a cruel picture and a human picture. It is a picture which has a peculiar thrilling effect and touches on hidden, deeply concealed remembrances. . . . The director, Raoul Walsh, has herein created a masterpiece which is in no manner impaired by a few little discrepancies here and there."

Berliner Bersen-Courier: "Just at a time when a new Heidelberg picture is being turned out in Germany and mawkish sentimentality and stupid beer humor is overflowing the movies, a picture comes from America which is so true, so to the point, so powerful that public which has long since grown apathetic goes wild in applause. 'What Price Glory?'"

"Twelve Miles Out" — M-G-M, Cleveland and Detroit

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "Here is a rousing melodrama for you. . . . A play laden to the gunwales with excitement, romance and both nervous and honest laughter. . . . A better show than the legitimate theatre offered. . . . The ending is as sound as a dollar. . . Is a gem for entertainment. . . . Torrence and Gilbert swing through one escapade after another, reaching for the laughs as I have never seen any pair do before. . . . As perfectly as the most finicky fan can demand. . . . Highly recommended."

Cleveland News: "As fine a film as was ever screened. . . . Without qualification 'Twelves Miles Out' is one splendid picture."

Detroit News: "Everything to be desired in the way of movie entertainment, beautiful women, sparkling subtitles, brawny fights, and spell-binding intrigue."

Detroit Times: "Somehow 'Twelve Miles Out' sneaked into the Madison Theatre without anyone knowing of its goodness. At any rate it is bound to stir a lot of interest and draw attention to the Madison during its stay."

"The Swell-Head" — Columbia State Lake, Chicago

Tribune: "It has been well staged and most intelligently directed by Mr. Graves, who, I hope, will in the future shed the light of his presence on films less few and far between than they have been in the past."

Herald and Examiner: "It's a very well staged and fought. Bebusy, entertaining picture and you oughta like it. The fight proper is sides directing and sheiking, Mr. Graves handles himself well in the ring. And the contrast between the crowded arena . . . and the quiet home scene . . . is very dramatic. The acting is excellent."

"The Magic Flame" — United Artists, Million Dollar, Los Angeles

Examiner: "'The Magic Flame' is the best picture Samuel Goldwyn has ever made. In it Ronald Colman is a player of exceptional ability, and Vilma Banky is superlative."

Times: "'The Magic Flame' is an event. Very good entertainment and offers the finest acting in Ronald Colman's career. Vilma Banky is radiantly lovely."

Record: "'The Magic Flame' is a vivid romance. This is a program not to be missed. There is no better pair than the Colman-Banky team."

Herald: "'The Magic Flame' holds interest to the very end. Ronald Colman's portrayal is well defined and carefully drawn. Vilma Banky is the personification of eternal womanhood."

"The Desired Woman"—Warners, Hippodrome, N. Y.

Telegraph: "Of the week's new pictures, 'The Desired Women' is by far the most meritorious. It might rate well among productions superior to the usual run of the cargo. 'The Desired Woman' is a most desirable photo-drama."

Journal: "An intelligently handled bit of film entertainment. The settings are very effective, the Arabian revolts are colorful and al of the actors do good work."

Telegram: "Michael Curtiz has done a respectable job. The desert scenes possess rare beauty."

Evening Sun: "Most interesting. Mr. Curtiz has treated it with his customary photographic skill. 'The Desired Woman,' indeed, is exceptionally pleasing."

American: "A highly interesting story of the desert. The story has a surprise ending, the players are all well nigh perfect in their various roles, so, taken all in all, one cannot go wrong by spending an hour with 'The Desired Woman.'"

Daily News: "Well directed and excellently acted. Irene Rich plays Lady Diana and does her work well."

Morning World: "Some excellent trouping and a scenic panorama of desert stuff of extraordinary quality go into the making of this Warner Bros. film starring Irene Rich. Her Lady Diana is one of the most spirited and engaging performances in New York."

Herald-Tribune: "Michael Curtiz has directed it with a feeling for the pictorial values. The acting is competent."

"Hula"—Paramount, Paramount, New York

Graphic: "The cinema situation around 6th Avenue and 43rd Street is considerably brighter this week, the reason being that the current celluloid entertainment provided the Hippodrome patrons, is a noticeable improvement on past pictures, which have unreeled at the Keith house."

Graphic: "Clara Bow, in the best role of her career, occupies the featured film place at the Paramount Theatre this week. . . . It will most certainly add to Clara Bow's screen laurels and will emphasize the value and importance of Clive Brook's work as one of the ablest leading men on the Paramount payroll."

American: "Clara Bow amusing as Hula . . . the young lady truly possesses an unique sense of humor. . . . The story has an original twist. . . . Miss Bow looks lovelier than ever."

News: "Clara Bow, that very vivacious little lady who is simply smothered with sex appeal, romps all over Paramount screen this week, in 'Hula,' her latest picture. . . . 'Hula' ought to prove a knockout."

World: "The snappiest of all the Paramount comediennes, Miss Clara Bow, exhibits some easeful horseback riding, much spunk and a pretty hot dance in the new film, 'Hula.'"

'Soft Cushions" — Paramount, Oriental, Chicago

Evening Post: "The production is comparable to Douglas Fair banks' 'Thief of Bagdad' . . . It has the same fairy tale beauty, whimsical humor and swift action. . . . The settings are exquisite. . . . it is a distinctive production among screen comedy dramas and is one of the best offerings of the Summer."

Daily News: "'Soft Cushions,' a story of the Orient, is a rich burlesque on some of the things the more famous Doug (Douglas Fairbanks) has done."

Daily Journal: "I think you'll like 'Soft Cushions.'"

"Underworld" — Paramount Metropolitan, L. A.

Times: "If the baby has to go barefooted this winter, if the roof leaks like a sieve, and even if the lizzie needs gasoline, dig down into the jeans and go see 'Underworld.' It is bound to be one of the significant pictures of the year."

Examiner: "It is a corking crook drama with enough story, thrilling situations and enough background to awaken any lethargic summer audiences. . . . Evelyn Brent, who has long been hiding her light under a bushel of unworthy screen plays, steps forth into a revealing role in 'Underworld.'"

News:"'Underworld' is a stark drama of those strange people who live in the shadow of the law—a people who have through circumstances been forced together against their common enemy—the police. . . . 'Underworld' moves with a swiftness, a sureness of purpose and with plenty of drama!"

Express: "Unheralded though 'Underworld' may come—burst upon us is perhaps the phrase—it will not depart unsung. . . . 'Underworld' deserves a run. . . . some of the finest acting seen on the screen this year, plus an unusual story.

A. W. Holbrook, of the Empire Theatre, Palmer, visited Boston during the week to make fall bookings for his theatre.

William O'Loughlin, salesman for Fox in Vermont, had his Dodge sedan stolen, but recovered it a short time later in a most unusual manner. He was in Enosburg Falls, Vt., calling on a customer when the car was taken. It had disappeared when he went to get it. Shortly afterwards customs officers at St. Albans, Vt., saw the car approaching the Canadian border. It seems that O'Loughlin frequently stopped to chat with the customs men and they recognized his registration number. When the car did not slow down as it neared the boundary they thought O'Loughlin was in the machine and was bluffing. They stepped into the roadway and ordered the machine to stop and were themselves surprised to find two strange men in the machine instead of O'Loughlin. They took the pair into custody and started to investigate and a few minutes later received a telephone from the Enosburg Falls police that the car had been stolen.

Last week was farewell week for the Poli Players at the Palace Theatre, Hartford, where a season of stock has been operated. The theatre will resume its regular policy of pictures and vaudeville next week.

Suit in equity has been entered at Boston by attorneys representing some of the bondholders of the Atlantic Theatres Corporation, the Melrose Operating Co., which operates the Melrose (Mass.) Theatre, the Coolidge Operating Co., which operates the Coolidge Theatre in Watertown, Mass., and Edward M. Dangel of Brookline, asking for the appointment of a receiver.

The bill alleges that in October, 1925, a mortgage was executed to secure an issue of bonds, that the property of the Coolidge Theatre was represented to be free and clear of all encumbrances and was responsible for the payment of the bonds and interest. The plaintiffs state that Dangel has refused to pay two coupons on these bonds and further declines to pay the third coupon until the other two are surrendered. The plaintiffs allege that at the time the indenture of trust was made there was a mortgage of $50,000 on the Coolidge theatre property.

Allegation is also made that the Atlantic Theatres Corp. has made a lease of the Watertown Theatre to the Melrose Operating Co., and alleges there is danger of a sale of the theatre being made. They ask the court to order the mortgage made by the Atlantic Theatres Corp. to be cancelled and the bonds secured thereby to be made due and payable; that a receiver be appointed and that Dangel be enjoined from collecting the assets or disposing of any of them.

Minneapolis

THE Saxe interests have placed Louis B. Christ in charge of the Strand, Colonial, and Grand theatres in Green Bay, Wis., to succeed Earl Connelly, who was drowned recently in a lake near Green Bay. Christ was formerly manager of the Pantages in Minneapolis and recently has been connected with a chain of theatres in Detroit, Mich.

The Tiffany distributed Ernst Lubitsch production "Passion," has just been sold to 23 Universal theatres located in Iowa, Nebraska, Missouri and Kansas by Eph Rosen, formerly manager of a Minneapolis exchange. For the last year Rosen has acted as branch manager for Tiffany at Kansas City.

The redecorating and building of a new entrance to the Grand Theatre at Northfield, Minn., will be completed about the middle of the month, according to E. Dilley.

Fred H. Knispel, special representative for Pathe-DeMille in Minneapolis and Milwaukee, is spending some time at the home offices in New York, where a meeting of the sales executives is being held.

A permit for the building of a theatre at 4944 Thirty-fourth avenue south has finally been granted O. A. Lee. The community was divided on the subject and there has been quite a controversy concerning? An unofficial election resulted in favor of the theatre and the permit has just been granted. The building will be a one-story brick and reinforced concrete structure. It will cost about $17,000 and will probably be ready for opening about November 8.

Bids for the new Ironwood Theatre were turned in by eight contractors in Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth. The figures submitted ran about $100,000. COL. E. A. SCHILLER, vice-president and general manager of Loew's, Inc., was in Kansas City this week inspecting the $4,000,000 Midland Theatre of that company. He was accompanied by Joe Vogel, his assistant, and Emil Milnar, of the Thomas W. Lamb firm of architects of New York. The new theatre will seat 4,000 persons.

"The theatre will open early in October," Mr. Schiller said, "although I believe it is unwise to announce a definite date. The purpose of my visit to Kansas City is to speed up construction. We are eager to begin the operation of the Midland, which will be one of the most elaborate and largest first-run house of the Loew circuit."

Mrs. Ruth Dirk, secretary to W. E. Truog, Universal sales director, has resigned and will move to Wichita, Kas.

Capt. V. E. Sutton-Mattocks, of the Missouri Theatre, Kansas City, fell heir to some unsolicited and unexpected publicity this week. A newspaper reporter of the Kansas City Star, noticing that the ropes of the flagpole atop the theatre had become so tangled that the flag could not be flown properly, wrote a story about it. An editorial, not of criticism, but merely of good natured fun, followed. The result was that Capt. Sutton-Mattocks was "swamped" with offers—free offers—from novice steeplejacks to put the flagpole aright and an abundance of publicity followed.

For its annual charities campaign this year Kansas City civic and charity organizations are planning the production of a motion picture, the cast for which is to be selected in a few days. The picture will be shown gratis at most down-town theatres, telling the story of needy families of the city.

Exhibitors of Kansas City are having a laugh "up their sleeves" this summer. Amusement parks have been having a difficult time of it. As an inducement to attract more patrons, Fairyland Park this week is offering prizes for the best motion picture star costumes worn at a dance to be staged at the park. The fact that an amusement park, which is trying to attract business from the theatres, should use the movies as a vehicle to increase its business is causing a cynical smile on the face of more than one exhibitor.

Humor and cussing aplenty there was as Kansas City exhibitors trounced exchange representatives, 14 to 4, in a baseball game at Muehlebach Field last week. Some one "framed" Bill Warner of First National and procured a negro policeman to arrest Bill for holding stakes on the game, but the negro cop couldn't hold a straight face long enough and the deal was off. Benny Taylor of Universal was the lone star of the exchange men, while the glory on the exhibitors' team was widely distributed. A return game between the two teams was planned for Friday.

The Mullikin Theatre, Springfield, Mo., has been re-opened by S. E. Wilhoit, who recently purchased the theatre. The Midland Theatre, Hutchinson, Kas., also has been re-opened, after having been redecorated. The Strand Theatre, Emporia, Kas., has been closed for new decorations. The Rivoli Theatre, Girard, Kas., has been redecorated, according to E. L. Valentino, manager.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market this week were: Ben Levy, Hippodrome, Joplin, Mo.; Walter Wallace, Orpheum, Leavenworth, Kas.; C. M. Pattee, Pattee Theatre, Lawrence, Kas.; G. L. Hopper, Orpheum, Topeka, Kas.; Frank Weary, Farris Theatre, Richmond, Mo.

A 1,900-seat house is being erected in North Adams, and the brick and steel work has just about been completed. J. F. Sullivan is erecting the house.

Mrs. G. M. Briggs, who runs the Tyler theatre in Pittsfield, has built for herself a beautiful new residence and has already moved in.

William Kennedy, of Champlain, is back from his camp at Chazy Landing, and the theatre is now operating three nights to the week.

Abe VanDusen resigned last week as booker at the F.B.O. exchange and has been succeeded by Joseph Wilson, of New York city.

Morris Silverman, of the Rivoli in Schenectady, announces that the new organ being installed will not be ready until some time in October.

George Adams, one time manager of the Pathe exchange in Albany, and who is now handling the company's branch in New Haven, called on his many friends in Albany last week.

There will be a special election in Massena the latter part of this month which will settle whether or not Sunday movies will be held in that village.

John Garry has completed the work of re-seating the Clinton Square theatre in Albany. Joe Saperstein, manager of Harmanus-Bleecker Hall in Albany, was in New York during the week. Much of the equipment has been removed from the Eagle Theatre in Albany, and there is little to indicate that the house will reopen.

Lightning struck a transformer some blocks distant from the Rose Theatre in Troy one night last week, causing about $1,000 damage in the operator's room at the theatre. An audience of 1,500 persons, calmed by the presence of two policemen, filed quietly from the theatre, pausing only long enough to receive "rain checks" that could be used at some future show.

Florida

THE De Luxe shows of the Tampa Theatre, Tampa, are broadcasted daily now. Every afternoon between 1 and 2 o'clock, Edgar Ford's organ music is sent on the air, and each evening between 7 and 8 o'clock the Symphony Orchestra is broadcasted. In addition to this each Tuesday night, starting at 11 o'clock, the station gives a "John Ingram Hour," when the orchestra go on the air under the direction of their leader, John Ingram.

Cecil A. Ross, owner of the New Theatre, Apopka, spent Sunday and Monday in Tampa. Mr. Ross gave the show-shops the once over, and expressed a wish that he could line 'em up and make 'em wait as he had to do at the Tampa Sunday night, where he stood in line for 45 minutes trying to get in to the 9 o'clock show.

Sulphur Springs, a suburb and amusement resort just north of Tampa, is to have a new theatre. Construction has been started by S. E. De Rosier on a lot directly across from the amusement park. The building will be 50 by 105 feet, of brick and concrete. The contract for the building was awarded to Paul Laveirently, a Tampa contractor. Sulphur Springs has one house now, The Loop, which is operated by Stewart Brothers.

The Victory, Tampa, which has been closed all summer, will be reopened the 2nd of October. The house has been newly decorated, and will be ready for the big business, which is sure to come, for super features will be used, each given a full week, at popular prices. George Peck, the genial manager, who has been holding the fort at the Strand all summer, and put it over to the biggest summer business in it's history, will move, with his staff, over to the big house about a week ahead.

Denver

DENVER has a new neighborhood amusement house. Saturday night the new Hiawatha first opened its doors to the general public. The new theatre is distinctly Indian in design throughout. The walls are of a light bronze tone. Around the upper portion of the wall are designs taken from Indian blankets, each being an authentic Indian symbol. Using Indian pottery, Ashworth has installed an indirect lighting system which is a novelty in itself. The theatre contains 800 comfortable seats. It is in an excellent location at Sixth and Downing and is the cause for a sort of celebration in the neighborhood.

Denver is one of the twelve large cities in the United States which will use educational pictures as a part of the school program this year, according to word received from the Eastman Kodak Company this week. One of the outstanding educational pictures which will be sent is a history of the cattle industry in the west.

Up to this time Denver has not been affected by the controversy now raging in Chicago and other cities between theatre owners and their employees. Everything thus far seems to be in complete harmony here.

Word is received in Denver that the Seibert Theatre, Seibert, Colorado, was completely destroyed by fire Friday night, burning up several reels of film. The theatre was operated by F. J. Flannigan.

M. J. Weisfeldt, western district manager for Film Booking Offices, is due to arrive in Denver Monday from Salt Lake City. He will remain in Denver for an indefinite period.

J. H. Ashby, First National manager, is back at his desk after spending a week's vacation on a fishing trip up in the mountains near Deckers.

Gordon Ashworth is using an airplane to let the people know about his new Hiawatha Theatre out at Sixth and Downing. He will fly over the city today dropping circulars, numbered, which will entitle finders to admission to the new house and an airplane ride. Ashworth is an ex-lieutenant, learning to handle a plane during the World War.

New Orleans

SAM CITTADINO, manager of the Liberty Theatre, Independence, La., was severely burned on the arms and hands when a roll of film caught fire during the showing of a motion picture before a packed house. Through his leadership none of the patrons suffered injuries. Children predominated in the audience watching the picture. Some of them became panic-stricken when the flames broke out of the projection booth, but all left the theatre in safety. The fire was extinguished with only small damage being caused.

Part of the roll of blazing film was dropped out of a window at the rear and fell on the back of an adjoining bank building, threatening that structure. An official of the bank beat out the flames with a wet blanket.

The Palace Theatre, which formerly featured in addition to motion pictures five acts of junior Orpheum circuit vaudeville, reopened for the new season on September 3, after being closed all summer. During that time the house was remodeled.

Cleveland

THE Opera House at Mansfield, recently leased to W. N. Skirboll, H. R. Skirboll, of Cleveland; I. Lipson, of Cincinnati, and John and Denny Harris, of Pittsburgh, has undergone a complete change, including a change of name. Henceforth it will be known as the Madison Theatre. It gets its name from the township in which it is located. The house is being renovated and redecorated. New carpets are being laid, new furniture purchased; new Simplex projection machines are being installed, and a new 26-foot electric sign and traction board is being erected over a new 32-foot marquee, which is being provided with 500 electric lights. The house will open next week with a combination policy of feature photoplays and Keith vaudeville. Ivan Francisci, one of the leading musicians of Ohio, will direct an instrumental quartet called the Vienna Quartet. Messrs. Skirboll, Lipson and Harris have gradually been acquiring theatres for the past two years. Between them they now control the Opera House and Strand Theatres at New Philadelphia; Grand, Massilon; Strand, Youngstown; Majestic, Findlay; Sixth Street Theatre, Coshocton, and the Madison, Mansfield. It is reported that they are now negotiating for a site in Galion, Ohio, on which to build a new motion picture theatre, plans for which are said to be completed.

William Allman, engineer at Loew's Theatre, Canton, did not die as a result of an explosion in the refrigerating system installed in the house as reported several weeks ago. Allman, it is explained, fell off a ladder while doing some repair work on the plant. He struck his head in the fall, causing concussion of the brain, from which he later died. It had been stated that Allman's death was caused by escaping gas due to faulty installation.

Eddie Catlin, for several years head booker at the local First National exchange, is now in charge of the booking department of the Warner Bros. Cleveland office. J. D. Mooney succeeds Catlin as First National booker.

Edward Vanderhof, better known as "Van," has graduated from an inside to an outside job. After a period of several years as Warner Bros. head booker, he is now on the road for Warner Bros.

Bob Mochrie, Pathe division manager, has moved his headquarters from Pittsburgh to Cincinnati. Mochrie has the Cincinnati, Pittsburgh and Indianapolis offices, and Cincinnati is more centrally located in relation to the three exchanges than Pittsburgh.

M. B. Horwitz, general manager of the Washington Circuit, spent most of the week in New York looking at the new pictures.

The Strand Theatre, Canton, under the management of Joe Calla, has discontinued its Summer policy, and is back again playing Vitaphone specialties.

Clarence Ernest has been appointed manager of the Imperial Theatre, one of the new houses belonging to the Universal-Brody circuit.

Scoville, Essick & Reiff last week sold their Lucier theatre, Cleveland, to Meyer Fine. This was a personal transaction, and had nothing to do with Variety Amusement Company, a theatre circuit in which Fine is heavily interested.

Abe Chapman, Pathe district representative, is spending several weeks at the Pittsburgh Pathe office. He has just brought his Cincinnati visit to a close.

"Hank" Simmons, Pathe publicity man, was in New York last week gleaning new ideas, which he is preparing to spring on the unsuspecting exhibitor as soon as the opportunity offers.

Max Laronge, of the Loew's Ohio Theatres, Inc., was vacationing in New York last week.

Sadie Voss, of the Loew's Ohio accounting department, took last week off to get married to Ray Booth. Congratulations and best wishes!

Virgil Moore and his band opens an extended engagement at the Park Theatre this week. The Park is in the process of having its stage enlarged so as to present combination vaudeville and feature picture programs.

Sammy Kahn, of Chicago, is now at the Allen Theatre in the capacity of entertainer-at-large. Kahn is introducing new methods of playing host to visiting artists who appear on the program. Angelo Vitale and his musicians will continue to make their home at the Allen, so Allen patrons will have both quality and quantity on their theatrical bill of fare.

Loew's Ohio Theatres, Inc., held their annual golf tournament August 31st at the Spring Valley Country Club. Twenty members of the organization reported themselves present at the opening of the festivities, and remained until closing time, which took place some time after dinner, which was served at Daniel's Inn. Bill Haynes, manager of the Allen Theatre, walked off with the first prize, which was a leather jacket. His son, Ronald, followed him with second prize, namely, a mid-iron. Then followed L. C. McDougall, Allen stage, with third prize, namely, a putter; Kenneth Reid, manager of the Doan Theatre, with fourth prize, one dozen golf balls, and Mickey McCafferty, State Theatre stage, with fifth prize, a half dozen golf balls. For those to whom the tournament was not so profitable the day was voted 100 per cent enjoyable.

One of the big events of the day was the baseball game between Carvon's Centipedes and Pank's Maulers. The Centipedes beat the Maulers 24 to 14. The line-up was as follows:

Carvon's Centipedes—M. A. Malaney, William Haynes, Roland Haynes, L. A. Morris, Mickey McCafferty, Tom Carvon, Tommy Canton.

Pank's Maulers—Bonb Pank, Kenneth Reid, Harland Fend, Wallace Allen, L. C. McDougall, Fred Clary, Fred Coddington.

The Grand Theatre, Mingo Junction, changed hands last week, when John Lisle and L. Mark sold the house to L. W. Lisle.

Sam Barck and J. V. Wolcott, both of Cleveland, last week purchased the Webber Theatre, Dover, from the Standard Film Service Company. Wolcott is also interested in two houses in Lisbon, O., namelq, the Opera House and the Grand.

Des Moines

F. M. MERTZ, exhibitor in northern Iowa, where he has a number of theatres, recently added another house to his string. He bought the Opera House at Winthrop, which is being remodelled and will be ready for opening in two weeks. Winthrop is an enterprising place of 800 and has not had a motion picture house for two years. The theatre will show pictures on four days of the week, while the house will be used also for dances and local performances. Mr. Mertz, who makes his headquarters at Waterloo, Iowa, has the Burg Theatre at Fredericksburg. The manager of his theatre there is Mrs. Muyr. At Jessup, Iowa, the Grand Theatre there has been under the management of George Burnett, who will go to Winthrop to take the management of the theatre there when it is ready for its opening. Miss Mary Hess, who is cashier of the Grand atJessup, will take charge of the house there. Mr. Mertz has also the theatre at Coggon, Iowa, which is under the management of Merle Maine. Mr. Mertz has had considerable success in the operation of theatres in the smaller towns.

Mr. Beatty of the First National office, where he acts as booker, is now on his vacation. He spent part of his time at the Iowa State Fair.

Mr. and Mrs. George Meisner of the Grand Theatre at Greenfield were in at the Universal office. Joe Gerbracht was another caller. He flew down to the fair with his brother in their seven-passenger sedan air flyer.

Two new salesmen have been added to the staff of Pathe. Howard Gould, who comes from Minneapolis, has been added to the staff, while Low Morgans, who was most recently with Famous Players, will take the territory covered by Sam Sosna, who is now traveling for the First National office.

F. S. Livermore, of Garner, was a visitor in Film Row last week.

George Naler, manager of the Universal office, was in Chicago last week for conference with the general manager of the organization.

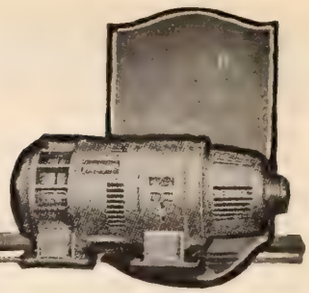
The Rex Theatre at Grand Junction, Iowa, was bought by W. B. Frank. It was previously owned by K. D. Wilcox.

The Majestic Theatre at Seymour has changed hands. A. Madison sold to Z. E. Hook.

Leona Mathews is the new secretary and treasurer of the Des Moines Film Board of Trade, a popular young lady who is also efficient and should prove of real service to the board as a diplomat. Miss Mathews was with A. H. Blank, having served with this organization for seven or eight years in various capacities. She was most recently booker for the theatres of Blank's independent chain. She follows at the Film Board office Miss Lytell, who came to take the position temporarily after Mrs. Mary Benjamin, who had been on the board for some time, resigned from service.

The biggest number of exhibitors that have ever been in were here for the state fair in Des Moines this year. Among the prominent men from over the state who were here and who called also at the film exchanges were A. E. Drury of Dows, J. G. Fair and his family from Lorenz, F. F. Madden of the Masonic Theatre at What Cheer, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Holscher of the Crystal Theatre at Earlville.

Belle Miller of the office of First National, while on her vacation in Chicago, was taken suddenly ill and was operated upon at St. Luke's Hospital there. A bum appendix was her difficulty. She will spend about a week yet convalescing at the Chicago hospital.



Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Holscher have taken over the theatre at Earlville, Iowa. They bought the house from E. J. Kuehnle and took possession three weeks ago.

Visitors at the office of Famous Players were Latta and Youngclass of the theatres at Perry, Iowa. They have recently taken over the Grand Theatre there and will make it a business rival of their other house, the Rex, recently opened up. The Grand Theatre is now closed while changes in equipment are made. Mr. Kramer of Mt. Ayr and Mr. Robertson of Mehrville were also callers at the office of Famous Players.

Inquiries and Comments

Limit of Reflector Arc

A CHAP in Richmond, Indiana, who does not wish his name to be given, writes in and asks if it is true that reflector arc lamps, as used for motion picture projection, are limited to a useful current of 25 amperes. He says different people have told him the same thing, but that no one has yet been able to give him a satisfactory explanation as to why this should be so.

He writes as follows:

"Dear Sir:

"Would you be so kind as to inform me whether it is true that reflector arc lamps do not give appreciably more light when the current is raised above 25 amperes?

"I have been told this by several people at different times, and just a few days ago a salesman from the supply company with whom we do business dropped in to see me and he made the same statement. The salesman claims that he recently visited the factory which makes the lamps we are now using, and while there saw a practical demonstration which proved that very little additional screen illumination is obtained after the 25 ampere point is reached, so that must settle the argument.

"When I asked him for an explanation of why this should be so, he was unable to give me one, and neither were any of the other men who told me the same thing. So I am writing to you to see if you can explain this thing to me.

"I would also appreciate it if you did not use my name in connection with this matter, as I would like to surprise this salesman some day."

Due to Magnification of Crater

Yes, Friend Richmond, it is true that 25 amperes of current just about represents the limit of the average reflector arc lamp, and this in turn is due to the fact that a high magnification ratio is used in the lamp. By this is meant that the mirror (in a lamp using the elliptic mirror), or the mirror and condenser lens combined (in a lamp used in such a combination), will magnify the arc crater six times and this, in combination with the size of spot required to completely cover the film, will indicate the maximum diameter of crater which can be used.

Let us take a practical example in order to illustrate this more clearly. Now it is more than likely that the magnification ratio of the reflector arc lamps you are using is six—meaning that this lamp will give an image (at the aperture), which is six times as large as the real crater.

In order to completely cover the film with light, from corner to corner, a spot of about 1½ inches diameter will be required on the aperture.

The size of this spot, in turn, we know to be six times as large as the crater of the arc, since we have just said that the arc lamp will magnify the crater six times.

The size of the crater, accordingly, must be ¼ inch, because

Magnify Crater for Economy

The reason for all this talk about "magnification" lies in the fact that it is possible to take a light source of small size (such as the ¼-inch crater mentioned above), which does not require much power for its operation, and, by magnifying it the proper number of times, obtain just as much screen illumination as can be obtained by using a much larger light source magnified but a smaller number of times.

As the magnification ratio is increased, however, it is necessary to use a higher "pick-up" angle in the condenser and since glass condensers are strictly limited in this way, the mirror arc can do on 25 amperes what the old condenser systems require 80-90 amperes for the same performance.

The "pick-up" angle with the old plano-convex condenser system, for example, is about 60 degrees, whereas that for the mirror arc is 120 degrees, as commonly used. This fact, in combination with the higher magnification ratio of the mirror really explains its greatly superior operating efficiency.

If no mirrors or condensers were available so that it was not possible to obtain the effect of source magnification, then a light source larger than the size of the aperture would be required so that when the eye were placed in the position of the objective lens, it would see the entire aperture opening completely covered with the arc crater.

Under these conditions the smallest size of crater which could be used would have to be somewhat larger than the aperture opening and this crater would have to be placed right up against the film. Of course, this is an impracticable condition because the crater could not be placed there in the first place and, even if it could, the heat would destroy the film instantly.

If the crater were placed, say, about four inches behind the aperture, the size would have to be such that many hundreds of amperes would be required to operate it so that this condition, too, becomes impracticable, not to mention the excessive cost of operating such an arc.

Fortunately, no such conditions must be met in practice—or rather, they are met in a much simpler and less costly manner by taking a small crater requiring little electrical energy and then increasing its apparent size by magnifying, by means of either lenses or mirrors, to give the same effect as obtained from the much larger crater.

Smaller Magnification can be Used

It is possible, of course, to extend this line of reasoning still further and use even smaller craters and correspondingly higher magnification ratios. It is quite possible to do this but it should be remembered that a higher "pick-up" angle is also required and, since the crater of electric arc operates over only 180 degrees (or over a hemisphere), the "pick-up" angle even with mirrors is strictly limited. In fact, 140 degrees about represents the maximum and while considerable light is still to be found beyond this angle, it becomes rather impracticable to attempt to use it.

Reflector Arc Mazda?

The question has also been asked quite frequently, Friend Richmond, why the Mazda lamp has not been used in connection with the reflector arc and the answer, logically, is that the results produced are less satisfactory than what can be obtained with the present methods.

This is so for a number of reasons. In the first place, the reflector arc is essentially a proposition for a light source having but one side (such as an arc crater), and the Mazda lamp, to be used effectively, must make use of both sides of the filament.

In the second place, the loss in light, which results from passing the light from the filament to the mirror and then back to the aperture is quite large, since the walls of the lamp bulb interfere greatly with the free passage of this light.

Effect of Increasing Crater Size

With any given magnification ratio, if the crater is already of such a size that the entire aperture is covered with light, no appreciable increase in screen illumination will result if the crater is increased beyond this (say to 30 amperes with present systems), because the aperture sport will grow larger. But this added light will not pass through the aperture.

It is true that the brightness of the arc will increase as the carbons are loaded to a higher working density, and any increase which results can be explained in this manner.

Schine Circuit Opens 125th House; Others Recently Rebuilt

IN 1917 two men who were formerly interested in a business in Ohio sojourned to New York and cast their lot of success in the theatrical industry. These two men were J. Myer and Louis W. Schine. They purchased a small theatre in Gloversville, N. Y. Within two short years their company, which became known as Schine Enterprises, Inc., began to obtain outstanding recognition throughout the entire film industry.

The new Schine Ohio, Sidney's most modern and up-to-date theatre acquisition, is the 125th theatre in the great chain owned and controlled by Schine Enterprises, Inc. In the ten short years of their existence they have grown rapidly and solidly until they now enjoy a high rank among the theatre chain of the world.

Up until two years ago they reached a total of 50 theatres and Schine Enterprises, Inc., by which name the company is known, took its place as one of the most powerful independent theatre circuits in all America. The number of theatres which have been added and built since that time have brought the total number of this chain to well over the century mark.

Almost simultaneously with the tenth anniversary of the origin of Schine Enterprises, Inc., of Gloversville, N. Y., the Temple Theatre of Fairport, their latest acquisition, opened its doors to the public. A few years ago Schine Enterprises, Inc., operated a small theatre in Fairport, and, since their lease expired, had planned the time when they would give this community a theatre structure for which they could be justly proud. A brief talk was made by Buddy Hooton, Master of Ceremonies, for the occasion, who introduced the mayor.

The theatre is considered one of the finest to have been built recently in this part of the state and cost approximately $175,000. It exemplifies the most modern ideas in a comfortable theatre construction. The design of the building is along the plans of Italian Renaissance and is absolutely fireproof in every particular. Arrangement of the opening was in charge of J. A. Carrier, Managing Director of Theatres, for Schine Enterprises, Inc.

Myer Schine, Pres.; Louis W. Schine, Gen. Mgr., and Max Milder, Booking Agent, were present at the first show.

The Hippodrome Theatre, which was really the first up-to-date movie house that Gloversville could boast of, was entirely rebuilt and refinished, and opened its doors to the public on September 5th, Labor Day, as Fulton County's leading cathedral of silent drama. This theatre holds a very warm spot in the hearts of J. Myer and Louis W. Schine, as it was with this theatre that they founded the great chain of theatres now operated under the name of Schine Enterprises, Inc., with houses in nearly every important city in New York State.

Sentry Safety Control Corp. Speeds Up Production

THE executive offices of the Sentry Safety Control Corporation, Philadelphia, Pa., were recently removed to 13th and Cherry Streets of that city. Growth of factory production necessitated closer liaison between factory executives and the factory proper, and it was decided to house the entire executive staff in one of the factory units.

Two separate factories are now in operation, and both of them are in process of enlargement in an effort to speed up production so that new business can be taken care of almost immediately.

Commenting on some recently received letters from exhibitors who had expressed their appreciation of the device, Joseph E. Cohen, chairman of the board, said:

"Nearly every week the newspapers and trade journals carry items of a projection room blaze in some theatre, somewhere. Usually these items are treated with inconsequential carelessness; they are reported as a mere incident. Happily, they usually are what they are reported to be—mere incidents. But in every one of them lurks the possibility of real tragedy, and that is what we aim to prevent with Sentry Safety Control.

"In our view, 'Safety' is the fundamental requirement in theatre-operation. Basically it is a moral requirement, but time will show it to be as strong an economic factor as it is a moral factor."

"Theatres which have installed the Sentry Safety Control are making capital out of it by telling their patrons what a marvelous safety quality it lends to their enjoyment."

While the main offices of the Corporation are in Philadelphia, offices are also maintained in New York and Sentry service is available at every branch of the National Theatre Supply Company.

"After Midnight"—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Loew's State Theatre, Los Angeles

Record: "Film absorbing. . . . Proof of enormous drawing power was seen yesterday when several hundred people lined up outside during hottest part of day waiting for seats. . . . One of the best I have seen. . . . I do not think there is a feminine star tonay who has greater possibilities than Norma Shearer. In 'After Midnight' she has a rôle that fits her like a glove. . . . Fwen Lee and Lawrence Gray both excellent. . . . Picture of absorbing interest—dramatic story, good photography, and above all, Norma Shearer."

News: "Plot steps right along, Norma has opportunity to wear fine clothes, and bright light environment gives sparkle and speed to film that makes it especially entertaining. . . . Battle between two girls, Norma Shearer and Gwen Lee, poignantly intriguing. . . . Film takes audience into private life of butterflies who play abolt flame of Broadway, and performance very well done. Miss Shearer does splendid work. . . ."

Express: "Norma Shearer has a part which gives her opportunity to justify complimentary things that are being said about her. Lawrence Grey makes firmer place for himself in hearts of fans. . . . Clever handling of story in general."

Herald: Norma Shearer fans going to like her. Personality radiates in full warmth. . . . Plot moves rapidly. Gwen Lee scores in rôle of Mazie. . . . Flavor of one who knows his locales in picture."

Times: "Not even sweltering day had any effect on box office. Norma Shearer beautifully photographed."

Examiner: "Norma Shearer an adaptable actress, surprising one; Lawrence Grey most acceptable and Gwen Lee excellent."

Evening World: "Good picture, with good acting and rather better than good story. Worth seeing. Barthelmess as Kid gives as good performance as one could possibly ask for. Manages to catch spirit of East Side youngster, that is little short of inspirational."

"Smile, Brother, Smile" — First National, Loew's State Theatre, Los Angeles

Times: "Epic of traveling salesman has arrived; is impression of him that will be remembered. It is entertainment. You'll find it reason for smiles and also for laughs. Hits rapid pace of mirth Many good situations and well drawn characters. Mulhall does very ssympathetic portrayal, and is responsible for many of laughs by his adroit work. John Francis Dillon directed and did an excellent job."

Examiner: "Charles R. Rogers did no mean job when he decided to glorify traveling salesman in motion picture. Audience at Loew's State laughed at every gag and at every situation. John Francis Dillon has turned out pleasant little comedy. ' Is Mr. Mulhall's picture. He is excellent. Miss Mackaill gives performance that registers. Will have a great following among the knights of the grip and their friends."

"Hard-Boiled Haggerty"—First National, Strand, New York

Post: "The best picture Mr. Sills has played in for a long time. Molly O'Day seems quite as pleasant as she did in 'The Patent Leather Kid.'"

American: "Mr. Sills is well cast as the hero. He is always interesting and genial. An entertaining picture and the Milton Sills fans will undoubtedly like their idol in this type of part."

Evening World: "The airplane scenes are quite remarkable."

World: "Presents a series of thrilling and glamorous shots."

the rules are changed

¶Yes, football rules are changed this year. Goal posts moved back. More leeway for forward and lateral passes. Greater rewards for enterprise and daring. Public demand changed the rules. Demand for a faster, more dashing game. ¶The same public demand is dominant in the motion picture game. The rules are changed for 1927. Paramount and Paramount showmen, playing the game with the new rules, are rolling up record scores. With smart, dazzling plays like "Chang", "Beau Geste", "Way of All Flesh", "Underworld". With plunging hits like "Metropolis", "Barbed Wire", "Firemen, Save My Child", "Hula", "Swim, Girl, Swim", "Rough Riders", "Service for Ladies". With star players like Harold Lloyd, Clara Bow, Emil Jannings, Richard Dix, Daniels, Menjou, Meighan, Negri, Fred Thomson, Beery-Hatton, Bancroft, Fields-Conklin, Vidor, Ralston, Zane Grey.

¶Sweeping through for long runs. Kicking the opposition for a goal. Because they're different, brighter, smarter. Paramount saw the rules had changed and developed its material accordingly. Paramount has produced brilliant, consistent winners week after week.

¶By the time other producers get wise the old rules won't work, the season will be over. Don't you be content with the old stuff and a licking. Play the new rules with Paramount's 100% Program and be a champ!

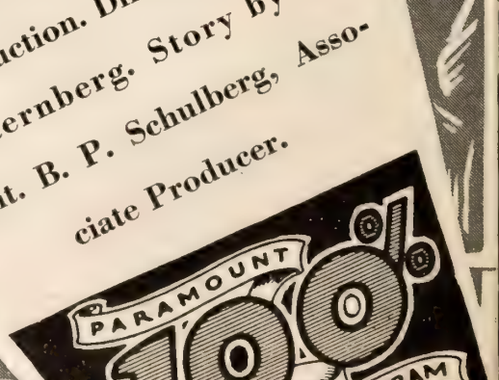
¶ Fame of Paramount's giant melodrama has spanned the country. Even with special midnite performances, Paramount Theatre, New York, couldn't hold crowds. Moved to Rivoli, New York, for long run, and smashing records there! In San Francisco, in Los Angeles, everywhere, the same box office story! ¶ The hit of the year has arrived. A fierce, raw-red, blood-tingling thrill drama. Made different from any picture you've ever seen. Made in the 1927 Paramount manner. And how the 1927 public loves it!



UNDERWORLD

HOW MUCH MONEY DO YOU EXPECT TO MAKE NEXT YEAR?

Whatever it is, it will be more than you figured!

M-G-M exhibitors are making the money this year!
PICTURES like "Tell it to the Marines," "Slide, Kelly, Slide"
"TWELVE Miles Out"
"ROOKIES," "After Midnight" and the rest
ARE cleaning up, no mistake.
HOW about next year?
WE'RE in a position to state that
M-G-M exhibitors will have
THEIR Biggest Year in '27-'28.
A Star name on every picture you show!
WE'VE got that for next season.
AND our budget for stories and production is PLENTY!

GILBERT the next, and Garbo, Haines, etc., etc.
RIGHT down the line—
NOT to mention M-G-M's Great Specials—
THEN you'd better quit strutting your stuff
AS a showman.
ANY theatre is strongly intrenched with M-G-M's
BIG Parade of Stars plus
M-G-M's equally high quality program of JUNIOR Features—
M-G-M offers you only those short subjects
THAT add drawing value and class value

GREAT Events in Technicolor—M-G-M Oddities—
THOSE are the cream, boys!
AND M-G-M News will give other newsreels
SOMETHING to think about—
WE urge all exhibitors to EXAMINE the facts of all products for '27-'28.
TAKE your time, there's no hurry.
WE know that when all is said and done
YOU'LL go with the company that offers you
THE chance to make the most money

"Magic Flame"

HOLLYWOOD is rolling up a sweet percentage of box-office pictures these days. We have just seen one that hits squarely in the bull's eye. It is "The Magic Flame." Sam Goldwyn produced. Henry King directed. United Artists will distribute.

Clear out a handy cubbyhole and file a notation on this one. And when the salesmen lands in your theater with both enterprising feet, give him a hearing. If you don't and thereby let the fellow around the corner nab "The Magic Flame," well—remember later that, like the popular ballad, you'll have yourself to blame.

How and Why It's "In"

The picture is full of "IT." Yes, the Elinor Glyn brand and another brand as well—the "IT" that spells "Increased Tills." King, always way up front in the ranks of directors, had an extremely interesting and well-knit story. You get several surprise twists that carry all the more kick because after you have figured out the yarn, it doesn't develop that way at all.

Look these ingredients over: Circus atmosphere,—splendidly handled —a mythical kingdom, soft nights on the shores of the Mediterranean, amorous lovers, hefty battles, gorgeous sets all in one formula that has been mixed by expert hands.

The production reeks of audience appeal. In a few weeks it goes into the Rialto here in New York. Then watch it go.

Short Feature Show

RECENTLY we viewed a program of short subjects which afforded a complete show in itself. The program consisted of a group of Educational Pictures presented by Mr. E. W. Hammons at a private exhibition in Wurlitzer Auditorium, New York City. This exhibition came to us as renewed evidence of the splendid type of entertainment which short subjects, of good quality and proper selection, afford. This program as presented by Mr. Hammons was a thoroughly good show—so good that we believe it would be able to contend successfully against the usual type of program offered by leading picture theatres.

This program had in a full measure the extremely valuable element of variety. From the opening cartoon novelty to the closing two-reel comedy the program moved swiftly, without limp or pause. It contained a lot of unfailing comedy, together with considerable material of general interest. It would have offered stiff competition to any average program of the usual kind and we have seen many programs built around even so-called specials which afforded considerably less real entertainment.

This exhibition also impressed us with the very fine progress that is being made in the betterment of short subject quality. The pictures individually and collectively reflect much credit upon the producers and upon the distributor.

DRAMATIC SCREEN NARRATIVE

SIMBA

THE KING OF BEASTS

Produced and Photographed by MARTIN and OSA JOHNSON

This production, now in preparation by Mr. Johnson with the editorial assistance of Terry Ramsaye, presents an adventure tale of thrills without parallel in screen achievement.

It is a drama of desperate realities, picturing indisputably wild beasts of jungle and veldt and the wild savages of Africa in the lives they live and the deaths they die--naked men against tooth and claw.

"Simba" portrays, incidentally, the adventures of the famous Mr. Johnson and his intrepidly courageous wife, Osa, on the safaris by which they recorded this amazing story.

The story itself is interwoven with the high excitements of a river crossing amid hundreds of hungry crocodiles, encounters with the giant rhinoceros, native spearmen pursuing the great hippopotamus. High climax is reached in the

THE LION WAR of a LUMBWA TRIBE

A savage king and his warriors fighting for the lives of his tribe and herds against an invading wave of murdering lions—a story of wild black life, a strange marriage, barbaric society, spears and desperation.

The Johnsons' cameras take you there, a-foot, alongside and into the thick of it—a terrific adventure, tremendously told.

"Simba" is the culminating achievement of a career of twenty years on danger trails, in a life story going to the millions in forthcoming issues of:

from Los Angeles News - Aug 27

IT ISN'T proper to begin a story with the word "if," but in this case it is a necessity.

If you were one who thought "McFadden's Flats" was just about the funniest comedy that Charlie Murray has ever appeared in, you're wrong. Not that this picture wasn't a "wow." But you're wrong, because "The Life of Riley" at Loew's State this week has "McFadden" backed into a corner.

We don't hesitate a bit in shouting out from the one-yard line that "The Life of Riley" is the funniest picture Loew's State has presented to the expectant public of Los Angeles in some time.

The story isn't unusual and occasionally you laugh so hard at the comedy antics of Charlie Murray and George Sidney that you forget about the theme, but who cares about that

When we say laugh, we mean it and the finest thing about the picture is that, in spite of the fact hat you laugh so hard you perspire and cry, Charlie Murray makes you cry, legitimately, in his scenes with June Marlowe, who plays a young waif seeking shelter from a torrent in Riley's racket store. These scenes tend to make one ashamed for laughing so hard at the comedy directly preceding.

What Price Economy?

Hanging the Family Skeleton on the Front Porch Continues

By William A. Johnston

IT is proverbial with this business to indulge in bad publicity; we go right along, hanging the family skeleton on the front porch.

What, for instance, can be said in defence of the account published recently in which two producing executives are said to have signed up for salary and bonus guarantees of $800,000 and $500,000 a year?

* * * *

Most people, trade paper editors included, have been laboring under the impression that after an orgy of extravagance the industry had gone in for downright economy. We not only told ourselves so, but we megaphoned the news to the wide world. As a matter of fact, stringent economies have been put in force, notably in the selling end, and in theatre management salaries.

And now we walk right back to the roulette wheel and plunge a millionaire's ransom on the double o.

* * * *

The same week in which the bad publicity appeared, we were in the throes of what threatened to be a nation wide closing of theatres. The newspapers told of the seemingly outrageous demands made by the operators in Chicago. But we can now readily imagine the operators, stage hands and musicians telling themselves and each other that a business which can pay one man $800,000 a year can also pay them most anything they ask.

* * * *

Then there's the exhibitor. What is his reaction?

This year every distributor is asking for an increase in rentals. A dozen big selling machines are sending forth two thousand salesmen to get these rentals. It is do or die, with them. Hollywood is spending a hundred and twenty millions a year. Some how, some way, it must come back.

Two weeks ago, it would seem, the salesman had a good argument with the stubborn exhibitor. Yes, there had been production extravagance. But that was all changed now.

Witness the many meetings held in Hollywood, all duly announced in the newspapers. There had been a ten percent cut in the wages of carpenters, electricians, stage hands, stenographers, etc.!

And then, directly, comes the announcement of two colossal salaries!

* * * *

One wonders what the Hollywood employees think about it.

In fact, what do all the employees, of all the industry think about it? Why should anyone work for—no, not a $100.00 a week but for so little as $1000.00 a week if the production end pays two employees what virtually amounts to the yearly profits of large corporations.

Also, in the very same week, in which the announcement of these fabulous stipends appeared, the largest company in the industry made public its earnings for the current quarter. This company claims the huge sum of gross assets of over $147,000,000 and has a majority interest in the profits of a large chain of theatres. Yet its total net profit for the quarter year was little more than the $1,300,000 total of the two salaries.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

The Mirrors of Filmdom

A GREAT deal has been written about the "yes-men" of Hollywood. They still occupy a fairly good position. But there is another individual now who is a very important member of the film colony. He may have been in existence before the ten-per-cent-cut-fiasco, but since that worrisome era he has increased until today his number is legion. He is the "no-man." And Hollywood in its present uncertain state of mind as to the future is of one opinion—that the "no-man" is a great fellow.

The duty of a "no-man" is to say no to anything that will cost money. He is sometimes dignified by the title of business manager and works along similar lines to the free lance agent in this way: he sells the idea to several people to handle their affairs, plan their expenditures and keep their accounts straight. His selling argument to the important personages is that he can reduce their expenses and save them much money. Thus, paying for economy is the latest Hollywood wrinkle.

THE "no-man" has breezed into Hollywood's life on the wings of a panic over the future—a feeling that as far as huge salaries for stars, directors, etc., are concerned—well, it won't be long now.

The ten per cent cut did not go through as planned. But the idea of reducing salaries will be put into force in another way. When a contract expires, the new one offered may not call for as high a salary. But, what are you going to do about it? No other company will offer you a better one. As a matter of fact, you will receive no offer at all if the company for whom you have worked desires you to continue in their employ. It's part of the agreement formulated by the producers, according to reports. A sort of "that's what you will work for or you won't work."

This has been denied, but the fact remains that contracts have expired, and people who could be used by a number of companies—and used to advantage—have received no offers from these companies.

ANOTHER system is to take younger players, give them long-term contracts at a low rate and build them up. The "new faces" argument has been a great help on this arrangement. As an instance: two of the younger players who have made hits in recent pictures have received five-year contracts. A few months ago, one was getting $100 a week; the other $75. Their present salaries are stated as $150 and $100. Formerly, either of these players could have stepped out after the hit they made and jumped right into big money. Now it's different; there is no place to step.

AL CHRISTIE sees a new world in picture comedies. He points out that plots have to be kept up to date and deal with subjects that are interesting the public.

"We have found our best ideas lately right in the newspapers because the things people are reading in the papers are the new things that people are talking about and are interested in," said Mr. Christie. "Airplanes are everywhere. The air is full of flying things as well as radio waves. While no claim is made that aero-stuff in a movie comedy is something new, as we have done them many times, yet for the current season we make an air-thrill comedy with the latest stuff in stunts, and bring it out at the peak of interest in flying.

"Another thing people are reading in the newspapers is all about flag sitters. So we are having Billy Dooley do his stuff as a champion flagpole sitter, which tricky position is rich in comedy material. I wonder what will be next; a couple dancing from Maine to California, or a fellow sleeping for a week in a basket on a radio aerial. Anyway, whatever it is, the comic possibilities will be taken into consideration."

The influence of the feature on the comedy was also discussed by Mr. Christie: "The comedy has always had to fall into step, more or less, with the modern trend in feature pictures. A few years ago, when feature-length comedies first became popular, the makers of the short two-reel comedies took the hint and geared up their action in short comedy to keep pace with the feature. They had a job on their hands, because to get laughs the funny stuff in the two-reeler had to be just twice as funny as the high spots in the feature comedy or it was passed up without a giggle."

HUGO RIESENFELD has returned to Broadway and brought with him polished, pleasing picture entertainment. When the Colony reopened as a Universal house last week under the managership of Dr. Riesenfeld, it offered individuality and charm—and skillful showmanship.

The personality of this very able musician and showman permeated the program. And the whole theatre took on an air of intimacy and hospitality which, unless we are greatly mistaken, will make its mark at the box-office in no uncertain terms.

The Riesenfeld method of conducting a house is the much-talked-of "local touch" personified. The audience is at once put at ease. It is in a warm, friendly atmosphere, and, because of this, participates directly in the proceedings. Making the audience feel that it has an important role to play in the program is the climax of showmanship.

THE initial feature under the Riesenfeld regime at the Colony is "The Cat and the Canary," Paul Leni's master mystery picture for Universal. Reviewing it some weeks ago in a cold projection room, we hazarded the thought that it is the best mystery film ever made.

Further back than that, we heard about it last Spring in Hollywood; heard how Leni had, in an atmosphere of horror, made furniture talk and hallways tell a story.

Seeing it in the fine, intimate surrounding of the Colony, with a typically effective Riesenfeld score, amply vindicates cold projection room estimate and Hollywood forecast.

THE wider meaning of the recent Chicago strike should be fully understood by the industry. We wonder whether it is. The Chicago picture theatres were closed for several days. The favorite entertainment of thousands was denied them. What happened? Did any other form of entertainment fill the void?

No. The great majority of picture fans did not go anywhere else. Legitimate theatres got some of them; in fact, were filled to their capacity, but this was anticipated. But, of course, the legit houses could have accommodated only a small percentage of the moviegoing thousands even if the spoken drama were a wholly satisfactory substitute, which it was not.

This ought to be evidence aplenty of the soundness of the motion picture. And, just as unerringly, it shows what a heavy responsibility this industry carries.

THE Brooklyn Eagle, in an editorial entitled "City Life Without Movies," touches on an important point in this connection. Says The Eagle:

"Chicago has just gone through a strike of workers employed by motion picture theatres sufficiently effective to close most of the movies for days. No doubt there are plenty of persons who fail to see anything alarming in a situation of this kind, but that is a superficial view. To eliminate movies from city life without putting something in their place would be serious in the extreme.

"Much has been said about the demoralizing effect of motion pictures, especially upon the young. Now and then some youthful crime is traced directly to a picture in which acts of violence have been suggested by scenes depicted on the screen. Yet these are isolated cases. To balance things one has to consider what the millions of persons who now spend their time in the comparatively harmless movie theatres might be doing if they lacked that diversion.

"That Satan finds mischief for idle hands is not an obsolete maxim. Idle minds, as well as hands, easily become restless. Lacking some form of popular diversion, the idle minds of city people who live a more or less dull existence, despite the high tension of modern civilization, would become a profound problem. The movies are a logical provision for a human weakness that has become more marked as life has become more complex. In a carefully regimented existence the demand for some form of vicarious living is imperative. Nero provided the masses with bread and circuses. Modern industrialism provides the masses with bread, but that is not enough. It remains for the movies to provide not only the thrills of the circus but the emotional outlet for unromantic and undemonstrable city life."

IN view of so big a responsibility for the public welfare, the leeches and the parasites; the politicians and bunk-artists; all those who gamble with the fate of a great medium of expression for their own selfish ends, should be driven out of the industry.

That would be as constructive a piece of work as was ever done in behalf of the motion picture.

ANNOUNCEMENT that 160 new theatres are being built in Europe this year shows definitely that expansion there is under way. There will be more in the coming years.

Bear in mind that the Ameican picture industry right now gets forty per cent of its total gross from abroad. Forty per cent! The foreign relations of this industry are one of the few matters of first-rate importance which concern it. This fact cannot be stressed too often. What, for instance, do you suppose would happen if that forty per cent from abroad were stopped? Or seriously curtailed?

And remember: Europe is producing pictures on a scale unprecedented since the war. Taking "the foreign market" for granted is poor policy for the American industry.

What Price Economy: Editorial

By Wm. A. Johnston

A banker called my attention to the above fact.

So one wonders just what all bankers think about it.

And what the intelligent investing public thinks about it.

I would say that both viewpoints are highly important to an industry with 11,000,000 shares of stock owned by the public.

Perhaps the published report of these salaries is a gross exaggeration.

Let us hope it is; very, very, gross.

But if so, a statement to this effect cannot come forth too quickly.

* * * *

And, another thing: if the contracts were secret agreements and not destined for the public ear and eye, and if such secret agreements prevail to a considerable degree in the industry's high places, then the meetings ought to be held in soundproof vaults and the records left in the vaults.

The New York Times had an editorial on "Wasted Movie Money," and The American Mercury an article on "Mad Movie Money."

If the madness persists and the news gets out of the asylums so carelessly there will be a recoil from all quarters that will result in some intelligent supervision of the movie mad house. That's certain.

U. A. Completes Chain of Twenty Theatres

Original Plan Announced Year Ago Concluded Within Time Specified

LOU ANGER, vice-president and general manager of United Artists Theatre Circuit, Inc., is back in New York after a three months' tour of the United States and announces the completion of organization and actual operation of the planned twenty pre-release United Artists theatres. This feat was accomplished, as it was originally announced it would be, within a single year.

Joseph M. Schenck planned the United Artists Circuit in May, 1926, and Anger started negotiations in August of the same year for property in several cities. According to Anger's statement there are now seventeen United Artists theatres in operation in the United States and he will soon announce three additional ones in as many cities.

The feat was accomplished, according to Anger, to the faith the public has in aligning its money behind Mary Pickford, Norma Talmadge, Gloria Swanson, Douglas Fairbanks, Joseph M. Schenck and other owners. He cited as proof the fact that not only had the original issue of United Artists Theatre Circuit units of preferred and common stock been over-subscribed, but all subsequent local bond issues for theatre building also went over the top. He declared that in Los Angeles the bond issue was over-subscribed by $200,000 in an hour and one-half.

Mr. Anger announced the complete list of seventeen United Artists Theatres as follows:

New York City—United Artists Rivoli. In association with Publix Theatres.

New York City—United Artists Rialto. In association with Publix Theatres.

Hollywood—Egyptian Theatre. In association with West Coast Theatres.

Baltimore, Md.—United Artists Valencia. In association with Leow's.

Chicago—Apollo Theatre. Only the four walls were retained. Soon to open.

Los Angeles—United Artists Theatre. Building nearing completion.

Detroit—United Artists Theatre. Well advanced in construction; to open early in the new season.

Baltimore, Md.—Loew's Century. In association with Loew's.

Portland, Ore.—Majestic. In association with West Coast Theatres.

Columbus, Ohio — Loew's - and - United Artists' Ohio. In association with Loew's.

Seattle, Wash.—United Artists Theatre (Coliseum). In association with West Coast.

Hollywood—Chinese. In association with Sidney Grauman.

Pittsburgh—Loew's-and-United Artists' Penn. Just constructed and opened. In association with Loew's.

Columbus, Ohio — Loew's - and - United Artists' Broad. In association with Loew's.

Seattle, Wash.—Liberty. In association with West Coast.

Baltimore, Md.—Parkway. In association with Loew's.

Columbus, Ohio—Broadway. In association with Loew's.

Mr. Anger said that associations with Publix, Loew's, West Coast and Sid Grauman in various theatres had been arranged in accordance with Mr. Schenck's prior announcement of decision to affiliate in various territories with principal theatre owners in those sections.

"U" Wrongly Involved in Fight Films Story

STORIES of the Federal District Attorney's investigation of the illegal transportation of the Dempsey-Sharkey fight pictures which have been published currently in newspapers place Universal in the wrong light, says R. H. Cochrane, the Universal vice-president. The fact that the Universal treasurer, E. H. Goldstein, visited the offices of the Assistant United States Attorney, seems to be the reason why Universal's name is brought into the newspaper versions of the investigation. The published stories place a false interpretation upon the visit of Mr. Goldstein, which was of a purely cooperative nature, and made solely to assure the Federal authorities of Universal's willingness to aid in the investigation and to further inform them that Universal has had nothing to do with the pictorial record of the fight in question.

As handlers of the International News, the Laemmle organization distributed, in New York state only, the newsreel issue containing pictures of the fight. This distribution was entirely lawful; the International Newsreels distributed in states other than New York did not contain episodes of the pugilistic encounter.

Mr. Cochrane declares that an inaccurate inference is drawn from the printed stories and the very fact that these stories are in existence puts Universal in a defensive attitude; thus his statement. "As wide and emphatic a denial of this inference as possible" is the request made by Mr. Cochrane.

Rise in Exports from United States of Projectors

Exports of motion picture projectors from the United States during the first six months of 1927 totaled 1,420 valued at $285,251, a gain of 446 from the 947 projectors valued at $272,559 exported during the same period of 1926, according to the Motion Picture Section of the Department of Commerce, Washington, D. C.

Japan was the best market, buying 284 projectors with a value of $38,128, as compared to 29 projectors valued at $11,798 in 1926. Canada was second, buying 235 projectors valued at $41,912 as against 247 projectors with a value of $38,166 in 1926.

Third leading market is the United Kingdom which shows a gain of 57 projectors over 1926, importing 179 projectors valued at $42,781 as against 122 projectors valued at $44,589 in 1926. From point of revenue the United Kingdom still remains our best market.

During the entire year of 1926 there were but 1943 projectors of all kinds exported. According to the first six months' exports for 1927, which totaled 1,420 projectors, total exports for 1927 may reach 2,500 projectors.

Protest Misrepresentation of Church People to Hays

A protest against films depicting church pastors as "weak-faced, sanctimonious, pious frauds," boards of deacons and elders as "exaggerated aggregations of Pecksniffs," and congregations as "selected groups of alabaster-faced spinsters and widows, and grouches and men who are utterly intolerant of any opinions not sanctified by the board of stewards, elders or deacons" was sent to Will H. Hays September 12 by the Men's Bible Class of the Wallace Memorial Presbyterian Church, Washington, D. C.

Expressing a lack of prejudice against films in general, the letter of the Class pungently criticised "deliberate screen perversions" as a libellous ridicule which ought to be resented.

The class will seek the cooperation of the Ministerial Association of the District of Columbia in its protest.

"Blue" Element Victorious in Sutherland, Iowa

A special election was held at Sutherland, Iowa, to decide upon Sunday shows with the result that the Blue Laws now hold there. Although Manager Charles L. Nott of the Sutherland Theatre paid the cost of the election, which was a special one presented to the townsfolk by the city council, he did not press the question very hard and there was very little interest expressed in the decision one way or the other. The vote, however, was close with a decision of 96 against the Sunday show and 93 for.

It is the contention of several that the Sunday shows would have won out had a greater effort been made by that side. Also some doubt is now expressed as to whether this decision will be accepted as final or whether it will not soon be again contested.

Param't News Laboratory in Atlanta Opened

Situated in the heart of Atlanta's film row and directly opposite the Paramount offices, the Paramount News laboratory in Atlanta was this week opened under the personal supervision of James B. Buchanan, Southern representatives of the Paramount News. Robert B. Strickland, former general manager of Graphic Film Corporation of Atlanta, is laboratory manager, his assistants being Victor Lambert and Claude Sulzer. The laboratory began functioning this week, all equipment having been installed.

Banker Succeeds McGuirk As Head of First National

Latter Will Devote Entire Time to Stanley Theatre Interests; Negotiations for First National—Pathe—F B O Pool Reported

AT a meeting of the Board of Directors of First National held September 14, John J. McGuirk resigned as President, and Clifford B. Hawley, banker and member of the executive committee of the Stanley Company, was elected to succeed him.

Mr. McGuirk, who continues as a member of the First National Board, will devote all his time to the expansion of the Stanley theatre interests.

Mr. Hawley, who has been a member of the Stanley Board of Directors for 15 years, is a partner in E. B. Smith & Co., Philadelphia and New York bankers, who have been identified with all of the major moves of Stanley.

First National is controlled by Stanley and West Coast Theatres, Inc., through a financial arrangement between E. B. Smith & Co., representing Stanley, and Hayden, Stone & Co., representing West Coast.

Mr. Hawley announced that he would resign from E. B. Smith & Co., to give all his attention to First National. No changes in the policy of the company are contemplated.

Previous to the announcement of the election of Mr. Hawley, it had been widely reported that Joseph P. Kennedy, President of F B O, would head First National. This report arose from the discussions which have been going on looking to the pooling of First National, Pathe and F B O, together with their affiliated theatre interests.

Mr. Kennedy is a member of the Hayden, Stone group through his participation in the Richard Hoyt Syndicate, which controls West Coast Theatres. Richard Hoyt is a member of the First National Board.

It will be recalled that when the First National-Pathe deal first came to light months ago, it was reported the post of President had been tendered to S. R. Kent, of Paramount, but it became evident later that Mr. Kent would remain with Paramount.

It has been understood for some months that Richard A. Rowland would retire as First National General Manager at the expiration of his three-year contract in August, 1928. Mr. Rowland is said to have signified his intention of holding his post of General Manager only for the duration of the three-year contract, and that he would not seek a renewal of the agreement.

It is believed that he will not retire wholly from the industry but after next August desires to relieve himself of executive duties for any organization.

To many observers the proposed merger seems to proceed from the theatre end rather than from the production-distribution affiliations of the companies concerned, except, of course, in the case of F B O which owns no theatres. First National is owned by the Stanley-West Coast group; and Pathe's big theatre affiliation is with Keith-Albee.

These two circuits, it is understood, have had a working agreement for some time, but the deal now in contemplation involves a definite pooling of interests.

Some of the reports are to the effect that the production chief of the new First National group would be William Le Baron, who is at present in charge of production for F B O.

On the theatre side, the contemplated pooling of Stanley, allied with West Coast, and K-A-Orpheum would bring 500 houses into what would virtually amount to a single circuit. According to the records of Motion Picture News, Stanley and West Coast now have 426 theatres.

Thus would be created a gigantic national theatre chain, fortified with feature production interests, including Cecil B. DeMille, and the Pathe short subjects.

Trade Practice Conference Oct. 10

137 Delegates Will Vote at Parley with Trade Commission on Ruling of Alleged Unfair Tactics

THE views of the various branches of the motion picture industry regarding block booking, theatre ownership by producers and other trade practices held by the Federal Trade Commission as unfair will be expressed October 10, that being the date set by the commission for the trade practice conference to be held in New York.

Commissioner Abram F. Myers, who has taken great interest in the films cases before the commission since his appointment to that body and who was an important figure of the Department of Justice in the film patents cases, has been selected to act as chairman of the conference.

All branches of the industry are to be represented at the conference. Exhibitor representation has been arranged by the theatre owning members of the zone boards of arbitration in conjunction with the theatre owners' organizations in each zone. Each of the 32 zones will have two delegates, one representing the chain theatres and the other the independent operators of from one to five theatres.

The producers will be represented by 36 agents, each of whom will have a vote. The distributing branch of the business will be given representation in the form of not more than 32 proxies, and in addition there will be one theatre manager representing each of the five producers who are in the theatre business. This will make a total of 137 voting delegates, which number, however, may be slightly increased by the date of the meeting.

A large number of film officials and theatre owners are expected to attend the conference, in addition to the accredited delegates, but will, of course, exercise no voting privileges.

In order to keep all branches of the industry separate and thus register the ideas of each group separately, the commission will require that all exhibitor delegates shall be fre from any affiliation with producers or distributors.

With the present make-up of the conference, the exhibitors, with a little aid from members of other groups, will be able to provide a majority vote on any subject in which they are interested, their 64 votes needing but five others to make such a majority. It is more than likely, however, that the exhibitors will not vote unanimously on any of the important subjects which are to be brought up, in view of the fact that in many instances the representatives of he chain theatres may hold different views from those of the independents.

Officials of the commission are highly pleased over the response to their suggestion that the industry itself "clean house," which came as an aftermath to the long and bitterly contested Paramount case in which orders to cease the practices which will be brought up at the conference were issued by the commission July 9. If the conference agrees with the commission that the practices it condemned in that case are unfair, and goes on record to that effect, and Paramount agrees to abide by the results of the conference and abandon such practices, no further action will be required with respect to the order of July 9. Similarly, it is anticipated, obedience of the respondents in the West Coast Theatres cases to the code of ethics to be drafted at the conference next month, would result in the commission's dropping the proceedings.

Nation Pays Tribute to Marcus Loew

All Phases of Film Activity Halt During Period of Burial Ceremonies

THE motion picture industry in all of its various phases was practically at a standstill in the United States and Canada for a brief period during Thursday afternoon of last week while all paid reverent and affectionate homage to Marcus Loew during funeral services in New York. The Hays office received wires from all over America and Canada saying that theatres remained dark until after the funeral at 2 p.m., New York daylight saving time. Programs opened with "Lead, Kindly Light," favorite hymn of the deceased.

Exchanges in all of the various cities ceased operations temporarily and devoted five minutes to silent prayer. In some instances the exchanges remained closed during the entire afternoon of the funeral. An impressive memorial service was held at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios in Los Angeles with thousands of screen celebrities and studio employees showing their respect and esteem for Mr. Loew. Newspapers throughout the country carried editorials and film boards of trade passed resolutions commending Mr. Loew and his successful career. Condolences were received at the family residence in Glen Cove, L. I., from all parts of the world.

Butterfield Circuit Acquires 17 F-M Houses Located in Michigan

WITH the annexing by the Butterfield Circuit of seventeen theatres of the Fitzpatrick & McElroy chain in Michigan, the Butterfield holdings were brought up to 75 theatres operating in 27 Michigan cities. The merger was effected by Kenneth S. Fitzpatrick and W. S. Butterfield, presidents of the two circuits. Butterfield is associated with Paramount, and only Michigan houses were included in the deal.

The houses acquired by the Butterfield chain include the following: the Croswell and Family at Adrian, Maltz and Lyric at Alpena, Liberty, Bell and Bijou at Benton Harbor, Colonial at Big Rapids, Lyric at Cadillac, Lyric and Kozy at Indington, Lyric at Manistee, Caldwell at St. Joseph, Lyric and Opera House at Traverse City, Riviera and Rex at Three Rivers.

Fitzpatrick & McElroy operate houses in Illinois, Wisconsin and Indiana, but they are not included in any way in the Butterfield deal.

Six New Firms Secure New York Charters

The first week of September brought the incorporation of the following motion pictue companies in New York State at Albany: Willmac Poductions, Inc., $50,000, William J. Wilson, Ivie MacCarthy, Sydney A. Sanders, New York City; S-R Theatre Corporation, capitalization not stated, E. Patt Keiner, J. Guy Selmser, George V. Krangel, New York City; Northport Amusement Corporation, $7,500, Henry Liman, Maurice Feldman, Leslie Lester, New York City; Lockport Enterprises, Inc., Lockport, capitalization not stated, Sam Dembow, Austin C. Keough, New York City; J. Meyer Schine, Gloversville.

Counselman Promoted to Post of Supervisor

A contract by which he is bound to the Fox Film company for two years and by the terms of which he will work as supervisor in close association with Fox directors in the preparation of their stories has been assigned by William Counselman, newspaperman and co-author of "Ella Cinders," the comic strip.

Counselman has been working for Fox Films for the past year and a half, and during that time has written originals, titled a number of productions and prepared the continuity for various Fox directors. He was chief comedy constructionist for Murnau during the filming of "Sunrise."

Tiffany Starts First of Jack London Sea Stories

Tiffany Production, Inc., now has in the course of production "The Ghost Ship," the first of four sea stories by the late Jack London, which Tiffany has acquired. The titles of the other three are "Stormy Waters," "The Devil Skipper" and "Sea Prowlers." A cast of well known screen players will be seen in "The Ghost Ship," reports M. H. Hoffman, Tiffany president.

"Over the Andes" New Title of Fairbanks Film

Short Features Advertising Ass'n Disbanded

THE Short Features Advertising Association, Inc., at a meeting on Friday, September 9, at the Hotel Seymour, New York City, voted to disband its organization due to the change of conditions in the short subject field. The members believe the continuance of their activities in the field of short subjects to be inadvisable as the representation of distributors in the organization has been lowered because of the increase in the number of distributors of the short feature. The association was formed two and one half years ago; it then represented 90 per cent of the short subject producers and distibutors.

The members present also believe they achieved the objects for which the association was founded: attention from exhibitors and press and the practice of devoting a reasonable proportion of newspaper advertising space to the short subject on the part of exhibitors.

Several of those present expressed the hope that the Hays organization would find it possible to carry on the work thus far done by the association, particularly that of "Laugh Month" which has amply proved its worth.

P. A. Parsons of Pathe, President of the association, presided at the meeting.

Opening of New Orpheum Gives Seattle 3,000 Seats

Seattle had 3,000 more first run seats added to its downtown quota last week when the New Orpheum Theatre threw open its doors with an entirely new policy of feature pictures and vaudeville, the first time that such a type of show has been attempted by the Orpheum circuit in the Pacific Northwest.

Under the New Orpheum's policy, there will be two performances of vaudeville and four feature pictures daily. On Sunday, there will be three complete vaudeville shows and the picture will be shown five times.

Warner Bros. Finish "The Jazz Singer"

What the Warner Bros. regard as the biggest cinematic achievement of their organization—"The Jazz Singer"—was completed this week at the Warner studio in Hollywood after four months of work. The last month of the production, which stars Al Jolson, was devoted to the filming and recording of the Vitaphone sequences. The remainder of the time was taken up with shooting exteriors and in allowing Director Alan Crosland and several of the principals to make a location trip to New York.

"The Jazz Singer" is to have its premiere this fall at the Warner Theatre in New York City.

Michigan M.P.T.O. Meets in Jackson Oct. 11 and 12

H. M. Richey, of the M. P. T. O. of Michigan, has sent out word that the Michigan Convention will be held in Jackson October 11th and 12th. The show opens on October 10th with a golf tournament.

Europe Is Busy Building de Luxe Houses

160 New Theatres with Seating Capacity of 200,000 Planned During Year

EUROPE is in the midst of an extensive theatre building program that will add 160 houses with a total seating capacity of 200,000 during the current year, according to late advices received in Washington. These new houses are of the de luxe type, which is rapidly supplanting the smaller houses.

These new theatres, most of which are to be used exclusively for motion picture showing, are going up in nearly all parts of Europe, though there is little construction work in Greece or Turkey.

Great Britain and Germany are showing the most advancement in the erection of new theatres. Germany is the real leader with the reports showing that plans are under way or building has been started on about eighty new houses, practically all of which are to be used for pictures exclusively.

In Great Britain it is estimated that twenty new houses will be in course of construction during the present year and that they will have an aggregate seating capacity of 50,000. Most of the new houses will seat 2,500 and in some instances they will go as high as 3,500.

Approximately sixteen houses are planned for Sweden, while Roumania proposes the construction of a number of theatres, three of which will shortly be under way at Bucharest, the capital. Each of these houses will seat about 1,000. Four new ones are to be built in Transylvania and others are to be scattered in different sections of the country.

Austria has issued licenses for the construction of eight theatres and applications for three more are still under consideration. These, as a rule, will be small houses to seat not more than 400 each.

Finland proposes the construction of four new ones, each to seat about 1,500. Holland has built two new theatres during the year, one in Hague seating 1,500 and the other in Amsterdam, seating 1,750. In Italy five new houses are contemplated with seats ranging from 1,000 to 2,000 each.

Others of the European countries are well supplied with theatres, but many of them are undergoing improvements. Spain has an abundance of theatres, in most of which will be installed modern improvements. Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Jugo Slavia, Bulgaria and Poland are well equipped as to numbers but improvements are planned for many of the houses before the end of the year.

Fans Save Half Million Through Tax Relief

OFFICIAL announcement has been made by Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Prime Minister of Ontario, that the amusement tax relief provided in the amendment to the Provincial Statutes passed at the Provincial Legislature last Spring will become effective Tuesday, November 1.

This means that the so-called war tax on all theatre admission tickets up to and including 25 cents will be abolished outright. The estimate has been made by Hon. J. D. Monteith, Provincial Treasurer, that the tax change will mean a saving to the people of $500,000 annually, based on the amusement tax returns for 1926. The amendment will exempt about 60 per cent of Ontario theatre-goers from amusement tax payment. Patrons of 62½ per cent of the theatres in Ontario will be relieved, it is also pointed out officially.

The exemption from the tax as applied to entertainments of a religious, charitable or patriotic nature is to be continued.

Paramount News Dinner Tendered S. H. McKean

The Paramount News staff in New York City gave a testimonial dinner to Sidney H. McKean, assignment editor of Paramount News, at Joe Leoni's Restaurant, 239 West 48th Street, New York City, on Tuesday evening, Sept. 13.

Mr. McKean has occupied the Paramount News assignment desk since last May. The dinner was a token of esteem and affection from the Paramount news staff.

Among those who gathered to do him honor were: Lou Diamond, David Sussman, Stanley White, Albert Richard, Gene Laroche, C. T. Chapman, Les Roush, Emmanuel Cohen, Sidney Cohen, Fred Sykes, Ludvig Geiskop, Bill Park, Jake Coolidge, Robert Denton, Williard Vanderveer, Urvine Santone, Bill Clark, Douglas Dupont, Arnold Belcher, Henry De Siena, Bill Kuntz, G. Bartone, Ed. Nagle, Ray Fernstrom Frank Fox, W. F. Gerecke, Harry Cuthbertson, Stephen Early, Edmund Bascomb Carl Wallon, Miles Gibbons and Harold Flavin.

Epidemic Closes Theatres of Many Ohio Towns

Many theatres in the state of Ohio are reported closed for a two week quarantine period for infantile paralysis. Among the towns known to be closed are New Philadelphia, Powhatan, Newcomerstown, Dover, Cadiz, Marion, Geneva and Findlay. While the epidemic is not virulent, every precaution is being taken to stem it.

Orders City of Quebec to Grant Building Permit

Some days ago the City of Quebec refused to permit the construction of a neighborhood moving picture theatre in Belvedere Ward, thus holding up the building for which contracts had been let.

On Spetember 9 the city was ordered by the court to issue the desired permit and, at the same time, a writ of injunction was granted which restrains the city from passing a by-law prohibiting the erection of theatres.

Pantages Eastern Invasion Given Impetus by Change of Policy

WITH the return of Rodney Pantages to San Francisco following a tour of the principal cities, it was indicated that the invasion of Pantages in the east would be given considerable impetus because of the circuit's change of policy, under which pictures predominate Pantages' bills.

The change in policy came with the closing of the 100 per cent contract with Fox, and Pantages are now endeavoring to close with a number of chains through which their pictures would be given first run consideration in several eastern cities, as well as subsequent runs and showings in suburban houses.

It is said negotiations are on between Pantages and the Miles holdings in Detroit, and the Arthur S. Friend theatres in New England. The Miles chain would give Pantages splendid representation in Detroit and suburban houses. Included in the chain are the Miles, Ferry Field, Orpheum, Regent and Oriental. The Friend holdings are located in a number of New England towns.

Colony Theatre Reopens

Broadway Welcomes Return of Reisenfeld as Managing Director—Policy Stresses Pictures

AN enthusiastic reception, reflecting a tribute to a popular personality and hearty endorsement of the presentations he arranged, greeted the return to Broadway of Hugo Reisenfeld as managing director of the B. S. Moss Colony Theatre, now operated under lease by Universal, on Friday night, September 3.

The presentations as well as the conduct and atmosphere of the house in which they were offered evidently fulfilled the greatest expectations of patrons of the inaugural and subsequent performances at the Colony. Reisenfeld had established a large popular following during his several years as managing director of the Rialto, Rivoli and Criterion Theatres, and the applause which marks his appearance on the conductor's stand at the Colony makes it evident that he has not been forgotten by his admirers, though he has been absent from Broadway for over a year.

The intimate air which he has developed, and which fits so well into the surroundings, and the program which he built up around Universal's screen version of "The Cat and the Canary" received the enthusiastic approval of public and the newspaper reviewers. His pronouncements in advance of the Colony opening that he would place the emphasis upon motion pictures with music properly fitted into the important place it rightfully has earned for itself in the cinema were not misleading, for the current program at the Colony is "motion picture," with assistance but not attempted competition from a fine orchestra and divertissements.

The current program starts with an organ prelude with a trio of feminine singers, garbed as pages, who sing from the orchestra pit. Their song is a bit of prologue in which they announce that "Yes, we have no prologue." This is followed by the overture. The elevating orchestra platform is used. At the conclusion of this "Classical Jazz" number presenting "When Day Is Done," Reisenfeld faces about and introduces the following musical novelty, a presentation of an old instrument—the Pipes of Pan, played by generations of Roumanian gypsies, and heard on Broadway for the first time.

This interesting and generally pleasing feature is followed by an amusing stage presentation in which a Tony Sarg marionette plays a piano solo in the accepted Paderewski manner, with an off-stage piano rendering Rachmannioff's "Prelude in C Sharp Minor." This also is introduced by Reisenfeld from the stand.

The Colony pictorial is the next offering, about twelve minutes being devoted to this feature. A special reel called "The Maestro" follows. This is a cartoon done especially for the Colony by Max Fleisher, in which a versatile dog leads the orchestra

Next on the program is a stage feature called "The New Ford." It is a ballet on pantomime in the impressionistic or expressionistic style. At any rate the presentation attempts to achieve an audible and visual impression of a huge factory swinging from idleness, during preparations to manufacture a new model automobile, into violent activity. There is a backdrop showing a veritable forest of smoke stacks, with a factory exterior and a maze of pulleys and belting fitted into the picture. Before this is a corps of a dozen or so dancers clad in metal cloth costumes to represent mechanical units of this amazing scene. There are orchestral effects to accompany the action, and create in the mind's eye an impression of automobiles bustled into being from scraps of metal, wood, and whatever else the new Ford will have in its makeup. The number is winning a hand from Colony audiences, and the newspaper critics mentioned it as of special interest in their reviews of the show.

The presentation of the program is nicely timed, and runs smoothly from its novel opening up to the flashing on the screen of the leader to the feature picture. The orchestra is a well-balanced concert organization, and, under Reisenfeld's direction, makes a noteworthy addition to the worthwhile features allied with motion picture presentations in New York. His pictures are scored in a most expert fashion, Reisenfeld's superiority in this field being most noticeable in his accompaniment for the newsreel scenes, which, of course, supply the most obvious basis for comparison.

Another outstanding feature is the intimate note he has achieved. The ushers are young women well schooled in their work, and successful in being polite and efficient without the pompous formality now so frequently encountered from house attendants at the cinema palaces. The ushers wear dressy frocks, uniform as to design, but of different colors. Reisenfeld's remarks from the stand introducing some of the numbers is another great factor in bringing the patron into a closer contact with the theatre and the show.

Production Progressing on Two Fox Comedies

"A Silly Sailor," an Imperial, and "Four Faces West," a Van Bibber, are two new comedies on the Fox Films lot on which production has been under way for some time. In addition, four other two-reel comedies for the fall season have been completed by Fox Films in advance of schedule.

The leading roles in the Van Bibber comedy are played by Tyler Brooks and Dione Ellis. The cast includes Howard Truesdale, Sidney Bracey, Albert Roccardi and Bob Kortman. This subject, which Orville O. Dull is directing, is scheduled for release on November 6.

Subcommittee Named on T. O. C. C. Demands

At a meeting held at the Hays office last week, a subcommittee was named to endeavor to find a solution on demands of the Theater Owners of Commerce for allocation of product and revision of arbitration procedure.

The subcommittee is composed of Charles L. O'Reilly, J. Arthur Hirsh, J. J. Murdock, Joseph P. Kennedy and Nicholas M. Schenck.

De Mille Spends $400,000 on Construction

IMMEDIATE new construction at the De Mille studio is the result of an expenditure of $400,000 by Cecil B. De Mille to make up for the loss of time due to the recent $200,000 fire and to avoid any delay in meeting release dates.

The De Mille studio will have the largest film studio stage in the world, 315 feet long, 143 feet wide, with 43,680 square feet. This stage is already half constructed, the foundations having been laid 48 hours after the ashes of the burned stages had cooled. Expansion and new buildings, including offices for writers and directors, projection, cutting and dressing rooms, are among the items that the $400,000 will bring forth. What is claimed to be the largest motor generator set ever manufactured for a film studio is now under construction in the East, and will be delivered at the De Mille studio within 90 days.

The construction work is under the supervision of A. G. Volnick, a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, and assistant general manager of the De Mille studio.

"U" to Merge Chain and Picture Corp.

NEGOTIATIONS have been taken to consolidate Universal Pictures Corp. and Universal Chain Theatres Co. The picture corporation directors voted to enter into an agreement under which their corporation will guarantee for a period of two years, starting August 15, 1927, and under certain conditions, dividends on the first preferred stock of the theatre company. This move was in consideration of the acquisition by the picture company from Carl Laemmle and others of a substantial majority of the management stock of the theatre company. The directors of Universal Chain Theatres accepted the proposal. Further details regarding the guaranty are to be mailed to stockholders in connection with the payment of the September dividend.

A further substantial improvement in the theatre company's earnings was intimated by Daniel Michalove, general manager of Universal Chain Theatres, who told directors of Universal Pictures that the earnings of his company had improved materially during the summer.

Fourteen F B O Releases During October

Six feature length productions, including two which played Broadway, and eight short subjects, are scheduled for release by FBO for the month of October. "The Gingham Girl," with Lois Wilson and George K. Arthur, will be released on October 2. October 9 will inaugurate the distribution of "Ranger of the North," starring the dog, Ranger. On October 16, "Jake the Plumber," starring Jesse Devorska, will be issued and on October 19, "Shanghaied," in which Ralph Ince is featured, will be shown. "The Boy Rider," the first of "Buzz" Barton's Westerns, will be in the exchanges on October 23, while on October 30 another Western, "The Gambler's Game," starring Tom Tyler, will culminate the month's releases.

The short subjects include three one-reel "Newslaffs" travesties, on the 2nd, 16th and 30th respectively; "Mickey's Pals," on the 3rd; "The Beloved Rouge" on the 5th, "Tanks of the Wabash" on the 10th, "New Faces For Old" on the 12th and "She Troupes to Conquer" on the 19th.

Columbia Studios Reach Production Peak

The studios of Columbia Pictures on the West Coast have reached their highest peak of activity for the new season. Seven of the new pictures for the 1927-28 season have been finished and several others—"Isle of Forgotten Women," "Say It With Sables" and "The College Hero"—are in work.

Leo McCarey Supervisor-Director Roach Studios

Hal Roach has appointed Leo McCarey supervising director of the Roach studios where for the past four years M. McCarey has been a comedy director. He takes up his new position with an entire year's work mapped out for him.

Film Golfers in Tourney

Successful Event Is Again Won by Christy Diebel with Best Gross Score

THE Film Daily golf tournament luck in the matter of fair weather, second only to that of Tex Rickard, held good for the 13th semi-annual event held Tuesday, Sept. 13th at Larchmont, N. Y.

A representative crowd of film people, most of them dyed in the wool golfers, fought for the large and small prizes offered and enjoyed thoroughly all the events.

The actual golf play was not all of the big day. There were two meals, a certain amount of convivialty, a putting contest, acting for the camera, and a large amount of renewing of old friendships.

Prizes were offered for both morning and afternoon rounds, with some specials thrown in. For instance, Henry King received one for being the best dressed golfer.

Nat. Rothstein officiated as master of ceremonies with Jack Alicoate as an able aid. The speeches were few, short and mostly to the "I thank you" effect.

Christy Diebel, the Youngstown, O., veteran again and again conquered in both the low gross and exhibitor low gross, but he took an eighty in the afternoon in spite of a 34 for nine in the morning round.

A number of the old standbys were absent detained elsewhere by business. Among these were Elmer Pierson and Felix Feist, both sending wires, however.

In the putting contest, Pat Campbell, the first man to go in action, nearly broke up the match by trimming the cup with his first ball. Five contestants finally achieved a two and then rolled three times before William Masse won with a two!

Low net—Leg on the Film Daily cup and the Arthur W. Stebbins trophy—Tom Gerety. Score 68.

Low net runner-up (Pathe cup)—Jerome Beatty. Score 70.

Second low net runner up (John J. McGuirk cup)—J. V. Ritchey, Jr.

Third low net runner up (J. P. Muller cup)—H. S. Tierney. Score 72.

Low gross (M. P. News cup)—J. V. Ritchey, Jr.

Low gross runner up (Al Ruben)—Sumner Taylor.

Eagle (Jules Brulatour trophy)—Stearns.

Birdie (FBO cup)—W. B. Frank.

Low exhibitor score (Jules Mastbaum Memorial Trophy)—Chris Deibel. Score 80.

Driving contest (Jack Cosman cup)—Cy Fields. 295½ yards.

Runner up (Eastman Kodak)—N. C. Stearns. 287 yards.

Putting contest. William Massee.

Booby prize, H. Eysman. Score 134.

MORNING ROUND—NINE HOLES

Low gross (Morning Telegraph cup)—Chris Deibel. Score 34.

Runner up (Columbia Trophy)—Ed Curtis. Score 36.

Low net (National Theatre Supply cup)—Arthur W. Stebbins. Score 29.

Runner up (Hedwig M. P. Lab. Trophy)—Paul Gulick. Score 30.

Stanley Company Acquires Three New Houses Around Philadelphia

THREE new theatres, each with a seating capacity of approximately 1,500, have been added to the Stanley Company's chain in and about Philadelphia within the past few days. These bring the Stanley total to 211 houses. The new Manor Theatre, located on Chester Pike, in Norwood, is a consolidation of the Marcus Benn and Stanley Company interests. The building is 138 x 82 feet, and is of English design, half timbered, with gable roof. The interior of the main auditorium, lobby and foyer is Spanish, with decorated ceiling and beams. A $50,000 Kimball organ has been installed.

The other two theatres are the Egyptian in Bala and the Waverly in Drexel Hill. Herbert Effinger is interested jointly with the Stanley Company in these houses. The Egyptian is a radical departure from the usual design for theatre construction. It is of dinstinctly Egyptian character throughout. Its dimensions are 147 x 185. It is generally conceded to be one of the most unique motion picture theatres in the East.

The Waverly, at Drexel Hill, occupies a plot 100 x 175, and is of Spanish design with wainscoting in buff and gray. It is Spanish in architecture and. in addition to the theatre, houses four stores. The houses will all be devoted to a straight picture policy.

Theatre Strike Halted

Labor Troubles Rapidly Drawing to Close as Settlements Are Reached

STRIKE settlements have been effected in most of the principal cities where trouble loomed a week ago and the situation has returned to normalcy. Los Angeles, one of the storm centers, narrowly averted a strike a few hours before it was scheduled to go into effect. A new three year agreement granted wage increases to theatre unions, but only the musicians won their demand for a six-day week, which was granted only providing the musicians individually pay for a substitute. Wage increases of 7½ per cent the first year, 2½ per cent the second and none the third were granted musicians.

Three hours after non-union operators had been placed in the booths of three Publix houses, an Interstate house and a tabloid theatre in Houston, Texas, a wage settlement was reached between the theatres, union operators and stagehands. Union operators immediately replaced the non-union men.

Under the new scale granted in Houston, operators at the Publix houses and the Interstate houses will receive $65 a week. Stagehands at the Interstate will receive $65 a week and their assistants $60. The raise in salaries is approximately 12½ per cent.

Settlements have been reached with motion picture theatre machine operators in St. Paul and Fargo, N. D., by the theatre owners, represented by Theodore L. Hays of the Finkelstein and Ruben organization and in Fargo by Ben Friedman of the American Amusement company.

In St. Paul the contract is the same as last year in most cases but a slight increase in wage scale was granted the workers in legitimate houses and in some of the suburban theatres.

Chicago's movie strike spread to Missouri towns, but thus far the unions have been decidedly defeated in their efforts and demands. At Springfield, Mo., a city of 65,000, operators, stage hands and musicians demanded an increase of $5 weekly. The exhibitors flatly refused. Then followed a lockout, with the theatres being picketed. As it became apparent that the exhibitors did not intend to yield, the union demands dwindled to $1.75 for two operators. That, also, was refused by exhibitors.

As a result of the Springfield strike, theatres of that city are operating successfully on a non-union basis under police protection.

Sterns Have 4 Months' Comedy Supply

A FOUR months' supply of two-reelers has come out of the studios of Stern Bros., producers for Universal, and is now on hand in exchanges for pre-viewing and pre-releasing. Talking of the new product, on which release dates have been set clear up to January, Julius Stern, the president of Stern Bros., emphasizes the fact that all of the new comedies are based on popular newspaper comic strips. In addition, twelve of the comedies are Junior Jewel releases.

The Stern release schedule for the next four months follows: "The Newlyweds' Troubles," Sept. 5; "The Newlyweds' Surprise," Oct. 3; "The Newlyweds' Mistake," Nov. 7; "Rushing Business," Aug. 31; "Keeping Trim," Sept. 7; "Buster, Come On," Sept. 14; "Dancing Fools," Sept. 21; "George Steps Out," Sept. 28; "Society Breaks," Oct. 5; "Buster's Home Life," Oct. 12; "All for Uncle," Oct. 19; "Picking on George," Oct. 26; "Passing the Joneses," Nov. 2; "A Disorderly Orderly," Nov. 9; "Buster, What's Next?", Nov. 16; "Oh, Mabel," Nov. 23; "On Deck," Nov. 30; "Showing Off," Dec. 7; "Run, Buster," Dec. 14; "There's a Will," Dec. 21; and "Model George," Dec. 28.

Fox Films Releasing Eight Features During October

Eight new feature productions will be available at the Fox exchanges during the month of October. The first releases, on October 2, will be "Silver Valley," starring Tom Mix, and "Publicity Madness," co-featuring Lois Moran and Edmund Lowe. October 9 is the day when Fox Films offers "East Side, West Side," with George O'Brien and Viginia Valli in the leading roles. "St. Elmo," a John Gilbert re-issue, is also set for this date. Bessie Love is the feminine lead in the Gilbert picture.

A comedy of youth entitled "The High School Hero," will be issued on October 16. Making his debut as a megaphone wielder, David Butler has diected Sally Phipps and Nick Stuart in the principal roles. "Pajamas," the release for October 23, has Olive Borden as the star. Two pictures are scheduled for October 30. They ae "Very Confidential," featuring Madge Bellamy, and "Truxton King," the second John Gilbert re-issue for the month. Ruth Clifford appears opposite Gilbert.

M-G-M Lion Flight Starts Sept. 27 from California

The non-stop transcontinental airplane flight, in which will participate Leo, the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lion, and Pilot Martin Jensen, has been set for next Saturday, September 17, and the take-off will be from some Southern California flying field yet to be selected. B. F. Mahoney, builder of Lindbergh's "The Spirit of St. Louis," is the constructor of the M-G-M ship.

The plane is to land at Roosevelt Field, New York, from where Leo will be transported via truck to receive the plaudits of Broadway, Manhattan. Jensen will return to the Pacific Coast, where he is scheduled to participate in the Spokane race.

Schottenfels Joins Staff of Billboard

Clarence C. Schottenfels, well known trade paper man, has joined the advertising staff of The Billboard.

JAMES B. LOWE, who is the Uncle Tom of Universal's "Uncle Tom's Cabin," arrived in New York from Universal City De Grasse for the American Legion Convention in Paris and a tour of Europe.

WILLIAM M. VOGEL, general manager of Producers International Corporation, foreign distributors of Cecil B. De Mille pictures, returned Monday, September 5, from Europe, where he spent two months visiting his company's offices in London, Paris, Berlin, Stockholm, Brussels, Prague and Geneva.

J. H. SEIDELMAN, assistant manager of the Paramount foreign department, returned to New York Friday, September 16, on the Aquitania, following a business trip lasting several months to the European offices of his company.

ARRIVING in New York on the French liner, The France, Wednesday morning, September 14, from Havre, Henry Ginsberg, president of Sterling Pictures, is again at the home office following a stay of six weeks abroad. Mr. Ginsberg was accompanied by his wife, the former Miss Mildred Adler of New York.

Fox to Present "Sunrise" on Sept. 23 in N. Y.

"SUNRISE," F. W. Murnau's production for Fox Films, and a Movietone record of a speech by Benito Mussolini, premier of Italy, will be presented by William Fox at the Times Square Theatre in New York, on the evening of Friday, September 23.

"Sunrise," described as "a song of two humans," is said by Fox to be the most artistic and costly film that he has ever produced. Its expense was twice that of "What Price Glory," and thrice that of "The Iron Horse."

The text of the other feature—the Mussolini speech in which the premier will be both seen and heard—has been copyrighted by the Fox Film Corporation.

Following the premiere next Friday night, performance will be given twice a day, at 2:30 P.M. and 8:30 P. M.

Changes at Indianapolis

First Run Situation Takes on Different Aspect With Opening of Fall Season

INDIANAPOLIS is undergoing many changes in the first run field and there will be additional ones effected before the Fall season is in full sway, according to rumors that are going the rounds. Several houses have passed to new management within the past few weeks.

The Palace, which for the past five years has been operated by Keith interests under the name of the United Theatres Corp., again became a Loew house on the 1st of September. It was originally a Loew theatre, and has been closed since July 1st. No plans for the re-opening have been announced, nor has the future policy. Before closing it operated with five acts of vaudeville and a feature picture.

E. G. Sourbier, who operates in Indianapolis and at Toledo, Ohio, has purchased from the Central Amusement Company, of which Charles Olson is president, the Lyric and Isis Theatres. The Lyric is a combination vaudeville and picture house and the Isis is playing westerns and second run features. No change of policy has been announced for either house. The B. F. Keith Theatre, occupied by the Stuart Walker repertory company and playing two-a-day, will reopen on a grind policy September 18th.

The Berkell Players, another stock company, will move from English's Theatre, a legitimate house, into the Colonial for a Winter season of stock. The Colonial has been operating as a picture house.

A number of changes have been announced for the Indiana, Circle and Ohio, operated by the Circle Theatres Co. Starting September 10th all three houses changed their openings from Sundays to Saturdays. The concert orchestra was moved back to the Circle from the Indiana, and Charlie Davis and his jazz band, for the past two seasons at the Ohio, moved into the Indiana to work with the new Publix units booked. It is said that at least twelve weeks of the season at English's will be devoted to the showing of road show films.

Fox Installs Movietones

Production Being Rushed to Accommodate Houses by End of Month

FOX is reported as making rapid progress with the installation of equipment to display the Movietone subjects that will accompany pictures. It is said that the houses in the chain will all be equipped with the synchronization machines by the end of this month, and will be ready to take on the regular service.

The company at the present time has six trucks in different parts of the United States and Europe searching out the best Movietone subjects. These trucks have been given roving assignments, and are scouting material for Fox News, as well as other Movietone releases.

Three theatres in the Fox chain are already functioning with the Movietone, and many others are anxiously waiting its installation. The Academy of Music, on Fourteenth Street, New York, is running "What Price Glory" with full Movietone accompaniment. The Terminal, in Newark, has the same picture with the synchronized musical score, and at the Locust in Philadelphia, "Seventh Heaven" is playing with the full score.

Within the next few weeks the following houses in New York will display Movietone in connection with either "What Price Glory" or "Seventh Heaven:" Crotona, Jap Garden, Folly, Ridgewood, Nemo, Jamaica, Star and Audubon; the Washington, Detroit; the Liberty, Elizabeth, N. J.; and the American, Paterson, N. J.

Included in the Movietone numbers ready for release are four song numbers by Raquel Meller, and subjects by Charles Sale, Ben Bernie and his orchestra, and Gertrude Lawrence. Additions will be made to these as rapidly as possible so that the various houses may have Movietone subjects regularly.

"Student Prince" Premiere at Astor, Sept. 21

"THE BIG PARADE" finally departs from the Astor in New York after its record-breaking run of 97 weeks to give way, on Wednesday evening, September 21, to "The Student Prince." "The Big Parade" closed its run at the Astor on September 16 so that the house could be prepared for its Heidelbergian successor. Its stay of more than 22 months smashed every existing Broadway feature picture record. This first of the big war pictures was seen by more than 1,800,000 people, innumerable persons coming back to see it again. The astounding total of more than two million dollars was realized during this period.

"The Racing Romeo" a Special on FBO Program

"The Racing Romeo," an automobile story which has "Red Grange and Jobyna Ralston in the cast, will be released by F B O as a special on their program of pictures for 1927-28. Sam Wood produced and directed the story. Frank Lockhart, race-track driver, schooled the players on how to burn up the roads, acted as technical advisor and played a role in the picture as well. Twelve seasoned speedway veterans were engaged for the auto racing sequences. The story is an original by Byron Morgan.

Franklin Signs Jolson For West Coast House

HAROLD B. FRANKLIN, president of West Coast Theatres, has signed Al Jolson to appear on the stage of a motion picture theatre for the first time. He will be seen for one week at the Metropolitan Theatre in Los Angeles, starting September 8th. It is said that Jolson for his one week's work will receive the highest salary ever paid an artist for a similar engagement.

Arrangements for the signing of Jolson were made by Walter Meyers, of the William Morris Agency, which only recently established a Los Angeles office. It is said that Jolson will not appear at any other theatre on the coast, but will return to New York soon after completion of his contract at the Metropolitan.

S. Stone, M-G-M Agent, Killed in Auto Tragedy

Seymour Stone, M-G-M special representative, was killed last week when his automobile fell over an embankment. Stone and Sam Berger, also a special representative for M-G-M were on their way to French Lick Springs from Cincinnati, where both had been working. Near Carrolton, Ky., their automobile went over the embankment, the gas tank exploding. Stone was burned to death. Berger escaped with his life, but a nervous breakdown is said to have resulted from the accident. Stone had been in temporary charge of the Cincinnati M-G-M exchange during the protracted illness of Carl Sonin, also the victim of an automobile accident.

"Patent Leather Kid" Opens at Woods, Chicago

On the night of September 18, "The Patent Leather Kid," the First National attraction, will open at The Woods Theatre, Chicago, for an extended run. The following Monday was originally selected as the date for the Chicago premiere, but instead the 18th will start the run at The Woods. It will show twice daily at the $2 top scale of tickets.

Universal Will Roadshow "Les Miserables"

OFFICIALS and sales executives of Universal have decided to put out "Les Miserables," the Universal Film de France, as a road-show attraction. The film is now playing at the Central in New York, and at the new Montmartre, in Brooklyn. Negotiations are now pending for a Shubert house in Boston, which will probably house the film for the first time outside of New York. Philadelphia, Washington and other principal cities will then follow in the picture's wake.

The decision to release the attraction as a road shw is due to the business done at the Central, where "Les Miserables" opened on August 22. Some time in October, it is thought, "Uncle Tom's Cabin" will replace it at the Central.

Production Activities Prevail at Universal City

When camera work started on four Jewel productions and preparations were completed for the start of several more, this week saw the last half of the Universal schedule for the coming year begun in earnest.

Hoot Gibson completed "The Rawhide Kid" under the direction of Del Andrews on Monday and on Tuesday started "Western Suffragettes" with Reaves Eason directing. Georgia Hale is the feminine lead in both films.

Reginald Denny commenced working on "Watch My Speed," in which Fred Newmeyer is directing both him and Barbara Worth, leading lady. "Thanks for the Buggy Ride," a Laura La Plante vehicle, was started under the direction of William Seiter with Glenn Tryon in the leading male role. The week also witnessed the starting of "The Symphony," Svend Gade's story with Jean Hersholt starring under the direction of F. Harmon Wight. Marian Nixon and George Lewis are also co-featured.

Roach Comedy and "Rarebits" Head Pathe Program

Ten reels, ranging from the serial and the cartoon to the newsreel and the comedy, compose the Pathe program of eight short subjects for the week of September 25.

"Sailors, Beware!", a Hal Roach two-reeler, and "The Weaker Sex," one of the new "Rarebits" subjects, are the principal offerings for the week. In the Roach comedy are Stan Laurel, Oliver Hardy, Anita Garvin, Frank Brownlee, Lupe Valez and Viola Richard. Hal Yates did the directing. The "Rarebits" issue plays up the feminine in sport.

Other numbers on the Pathe list include the Pathe Review, No. 39; "The Danger Trail," fifth chapter of the Pathe serial, "The Hawk of the Hills"; Topics of the Day, No. 39; "The Human Fly," the weekly Aesop Film Fable, and Numbers 80 and 81 of the news reel. The three items in the Review are: "Burglar-Proof Jewelry," "Flowers of Hawaii" and "Words and Music By———."

Two Stories Definitely Set for Colleen Moore

With Marshall Neilan preparing for the direction of Colleen Moore's final picture for the current season's group, John McCormick, her producer, is already launching plans for the cycle of screen stories in which the star will be seen during the new season. Two of these stories have been definitely decided upon and one more will be selected from several stories now under consideration.

The first 1927-28 production, and probably the most important Moore vehicle on the new schedule, will be "Lilac Time," Jane Cowl's stage success, which George Fitzmaurice will direct. Winifred Dunn is handling the screen adaptation. Following "Lilac Time" will be "Baby Face," adapted by Marna Tully from "Synthetic Sin," the stage play by Frederic and Fanny Hatton. Benjamin Glazer will prepare the screen continuity.

"U" Rushing Building of 2 Wisconsin Houses

A RAPID headway is being made by Universal Chain Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., on the construction of the two new theatres being built in the State of Wisconsin. The steel skeleton for the $1,000,000 Racine house is beginning to rear itself skywards while the evacuation for the $600,000 Sheboygan house has been completed. Universal has also remodeled the Gladstone Theatre, in Kansas City. The house which has just opened has been thoroughly remodeled, equipped and brought up-to-date.

First National Scenarists Work on Nine Adaptations

Thirteen scenarists and continuity writers are engaged upon the screen adaptations of nine forthcoming First National productions. More writing assignments will be handed out by Al Rockett, West Coast production manager, within a few days.

Gerald Duffy is finishing the new Colleen Moore picture, temporarily titled "Tell the World," and Barney Glaser is at work on the script of "The Barker." James O'Donohue is advancing in his preparation of the continuity for "The Noose" while Bess Meredyth has been assigned to adapt "Sailors' Wives." Philip Bartholomae is now writing the screen adaptaion of "The Butter and Egg Man," Mort Blumenstock is adapting "Once There Was a Princess" and John McDermott is working on the adaptation and continuity for "Down Went McGinty."

Pathe Buys Packard Story as Prospective Serial

"The Devil's Mantle," a Liberty Magazine story by Frank L. Packard, has been purchased by Pathe for serial adaptation to follow the present serials underlined for the 1927-28 season.

Two German Offers Made Lars Moen

REPRESENTATIVES in New York of two German companies this week made propositions to Lars Moen, producer of a series of color films called Rainbow Productions, to make pictures abroad. Mr. Moen made use of foreign photographic methods in producing the series. One of these German companies would make a feature in color with Mr. Moen the director. A detailed announcement concerning the young producer's plans will be issued within a few days. He expects to leave for Berlin Wednesday, September 21, for an indefinite stay abroad.

The series of color pictures is now in the cutting room, and it is expected that they will be ready for screening within the next two weeks. Two large American distributing companies have made bids for the distribution of the productions, it is said.

Exhibitors Service Bureau

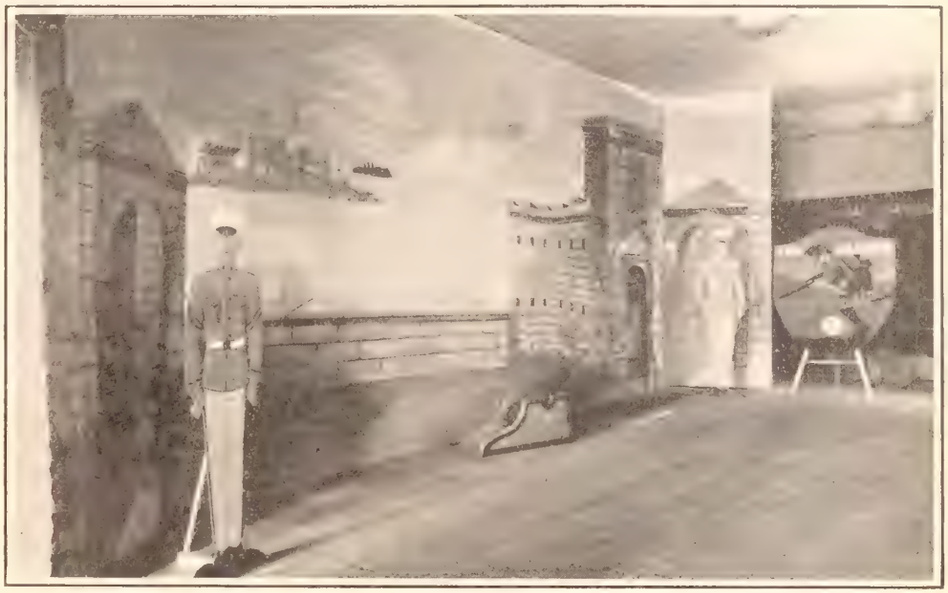
"Joy Hour" Program Builds Up Matinee Business

Manager Al Ruttenberg, of the Iris Theatre, Detroit, is one of several exhibitors in that territory who are using a "joy hour" program to increase matinee business Saturdays and Sundays. The idea originated with Oscar Hanson, Pathe Short Subject Branch Manager at Detroit.

The plan provides for the showing of a serial episode and a two-reel comedy ahead of the regular matinee program. It is advertised as a special "joy hour," and Ruttenberg and other managers report that it is successful in attracting a greater number of woman and children. It has the added advantage of getting a larger number of people into the theatre at an earlier hour as well as increasing the average receipts for these matinees.

Ask Public to Rate "Stark Love" in Newspaper Ads

Newspaper ads that aroused general curiosity for the picture "Stark Love" were an effective feature of the exploitation for that attraction at the Lyric Theatre in Jackson, Tenn. Manager Emil Bernstecker asked the public to decide whether "Stark Love" was the best or worst picture of the year. The ads, two columns wide, were run under a big headline above the title of the picture. Under the title were two columns headed "Best" and "Worst." The names of local men who had seen the picture at a special preview were inserted under the headings of these columns and still further down the ad was the line "Which side are you on? Will it be the Best or Worst picture you have ever seen?"



Theatre Party Exploits "The Country Doctor"

A novel exploitation idea was carried out with excellent results in conjunction with the presentation of "The Country Doctor" at Keith's Palace Theatre, Cleveland, by means of a dinner and theatre party for the oldest doctors in that city. The affair was sponsored by Manager John Royal of the Palace and the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The newspaper invited readers to send in the names of the oldest practising physicians in their neighborhood., Of these, fourteen doctors were invited to a dinner in their honor at the Statler Hotel, and a performance at the Palace. As many as 200 people sent in to the Plain Dealer the name of the same docto

Junior Leaguers Assist in "Babe Comes Home" Drive

J. G. Weigand, manager of the Columbia Theatre, Junction City, Kan., obtained some valuable publicity for "Babe Comes Home" through the Junior Baseball League membership of that city. Through the newspapers he invited all members of the Chamber of Commerce team, the Boosters, Rotary, U. P. A. C., Lions and DeMolay teams, to report to the theatre in uniform on Mon-

Another example of the interesting and attractive lobby displays arranged by W. H. Cornwell, manager of the Liberty theatre, Marysville, Cal., is that shown above, which exploited his presentation of "Tell It to the Marines"

"Chang" Exploited Effectively By Many Leading Showmen

OWING to the fact that it is a picture out of the general run and type of screen attraction, "Chang" is a film requiring somewhat out of the ordinary line of exploitation, and from several parts of the country come reports of ingenious and effective campaigns planned and executed by showmen well known for their resourcefulness in exploitation.

The ideas successfully used for the picture cover a wide range as a natural consequence of local conditions, such as community preferences, type of patronage established for the theatre, and available exploitation mediums.

Among the most effective campaigns recently staged for "Chang" are the drives put on by Frank J. Miller, manager of the Imperial Theatre, Augusta; Manager Sidney Dannenberg, of the Strand, Birmingham; and Charles H. Amos, of the Florida Theatre, St. Petersburg, Fla.

Two weeks in advance of his showing at the Imperial, Manager Miller set in his lobby an attractor consisting of large cut-out letters spelling out the title "Chang." Cards were placed around the flower boxes in the lobby with this title; auto stickers were used, then he painted the word in white letters on sidewalks. He had a ballyhoo, a donkey led about the streets, also featuring the title alone. These teasers were sniped later with the line "coming soon." The posting continued until the town was blanketed with signs reading "Chang." The result was an intense public curiosity in the coming attraction—an eager audience for the final messages in which Miller told about the unusual features of "Chang."

The Birmingham theatregoers were told about "Chang" first by a trailer on the screen of the Strand. Then Dannenberg erected a lobby display, a model jungle house centered in the lobby. One of the windows framed a Travel Sign trailer, featuring copy which developed widespread interest in the coming attraction. There was a lobby panel which read "'Chang,' the picture that has received more critical approval than any picture flashed on the screen"— this including excerpts from reviews by newspaper critics in other cities. Then there was a special advance showing for an invited audience of about four hundred people, which brought excellent publicity.

Manager Amos consistently carried through all his advertising his line "At Last the Critics Agree on a Picture." This angle was introduced in the house program. Later it was publicized by programs distributed through the mail and inserted in laundry packages, and later still in letters. Under his headline Amos printed excerpts from reviews by newspaper critics in the large cities.

Replica of Tabloid Herald for "Lovers?" Showing

Replicas of a tabloid newspaper were distributed about the streets of Lockport as an exploitation stunt for the showing of "Lovers?" at the Palace theatre there. Manager George T. Cruzen had 1,000 of these papers circulated by boys, who harked them as "extras," shouting the sensational headline "Husband Killed in Tragic Love Duel." The paper carried full information about the picture and the playdates at the Palace.

Key City Reports

New York City

FOUR new pictures made their appearance on Broadway last week and, with the exception of the Colony theatre's opening on Friday evening, when Hugo Riesenfeld was welcomed back as managing director of Universal's first run house, nothing very startling took place. All other pictures, except two near the end of their run, seemed firmly entrenched and destined to remain in their respective theatres for some time.

The feature picture with the Riesenfeld presentation at the Colony is "The Cat and the Canary," and this mystery melodrama was enthusiastically received by both trade and press; likewise the presentation numbers.

At the Roxy, "The Joy Girl" ran up a gross of $118,399.10 for the week, which is an exceptionally good return, on the Olive Borden vehicle. "Seventh Heaven" followed in, and the first four days show $76,236.82, indicating that the house will have from $120,000 to $125,000 at the close of this week. Inasmuch as the picture runs a half hour longer than "What Price Glory," the latter's record cannot very well be equalled even though the Roxy is open at 10:30 A. M. There's no crowd around at that hour.

For the first time at popular prices in New York City, "Ben Hur" goes into its second week at the Capitol with both matinee and evening performances well attended. Several changes are being made in this theatre on stage and orchestra pit which strengthens the report that a change of policy in presentations will soon take place.

"Swim Girl Swim" at the Paramount held up the average of that house while the smaller Publix theatres, the Rivoli with "Underworld," the Criterion with "Wings" and the Rialto with "The Way of All Flesh," all did well. The latter goes out after a run of twelve weeks and equalled the record of "Variety." It will be followed by United Artists' "The Magic Flame."

First National's "Life of Riley" did very well at the Strand although the presence of Ben Bernie and his orchestra undoubtedly had something to do with swelling the receipts of this house.

"The Patent Leather Kid" continues sold out at the Globe and the big fellows—"The King of Kings" at the Gaiety, "Les Miserables" at the Central, both did well. "The Big Parade" leaves the Astor this week to be followed by "The Student Prince."

At the Embassy, "The Garden of Allah" is playing to well filled houses and at the Cameo, the same size as the Embassy, "Chang" was held over. "Old San Francisco" continues at Warners.

Chicago

THEATRE attendance started off with great prospects for a big week, following the lockout and closing of the theatres here for six days, but tapered off rapidly as the week progressed, owing to the unseasonable torrid spell of weather which slowed up business at all but a few of the large de luxe houses. Adequate ventilating systems again were a strong drawing card and, combined with good shows, enabled the loop and outlying de luxe houses to play to crowds during the week.

At the Chicago, "Twelve Miles Out" as the screen feature, and a big stage bill including Publix production, "Young America," and Spitalny's "Rhythm and Expression," accounted for a big week. Norma Talmadge in "Camille" was the attraction at the Roosevelt, where business was excellent. At the Oriental "Framed" was the screen attraction, which, combined with one of Paul Ash's sure fire shows, brought in big business, which is a regular thing at this theatre. "The Big Parade" was in its last week at McVickers' and continued to bring in the crowds.

"Beau Geste' held the screens at the Tivoli on the southside and the Uptown on the north, and both houses did satisfactory business. At the Tivoli a big stage show, starring the new stage leader Frankie Masters and his band, and other specialists, completed the bill while the Uptown had the popular Benny Kreuger and his band. The Norshore with its new stage policy and "Chang" as its feature, broke records for this house. "The Missing Link," Charles Kaley and his band, plus Vitaphone, played to normal business at the Marbro, and the same feature with Benny Meroff and his stage band, and Vitaphone went over big at the Granada. "The Heart of Maryland" and Verne Buck's band were the attraction at the Sheridan, which had a satisfactory box office report.

The Capitol enjoyed a normal week with "The Heart of Maryland" on the screen, Del Delbridge and a big stage show and Vitaphone rounding out the entertainment.

Philadelphia

WITH Van and Schenck as the main attraction and Clara Bow in "Hula" as a decidedly secondary offering, the Stanley Theatre played to very satisfactory audiences. The main offerings were augmented by the dancing team of Carlos and Valeria.

"What Price Glory," after its long run at the Fox-Locust, opened at the Fox Theatre with almost turnaway business. An elaborate prologue entitled "Over There," presented by members of the Roxy Gang, and produced by S. L. Rothafel, created a proper atmosphere for the picture.

"Beau Geste," a repeat at the Stanton after a long engagement at the Aldine, is playing to good business.

Emil Jannings in "The Way of All Flesh" at the Aldine is doing what is considered satisfactory business.

At the Areadia W. C. Fields in "Running Wild," is pulling in a fair amount of patronage.

The Karlton, with Tom Meighan in "We're All Gamblers," is doing fairly well.

The Globe, with "Foreign Devils," and the Victoria, with Zane Grey's "Nevada" and the Dempsey-Sharkey fight pictures, enjoyed a good week.

The Fox-Locust has put in "Seventh Heaven" for an extended run, and early business indicates that it will probably hold out for some weeks.

St. Louis

IN its second week at the Loew's State Theatre, "The Big Parade" continued to play to excellent business although, naturally, not up to the record-breaking proportions of the opening seven days. However, it was probably the best repeat week in the history of this house, which was opened to the public in August, 1924.

The Ambassador at Seventh and Locust streets had on its screen "Smile, Brother, Smile." Its cast was headed by Jack Mulhall and Dorothy Mackaill. The management had prepared an extra stage show to celebrate the first anniversary of this house, which opened in August, 1926, and on the whole it was a good week.

The Missouri Theatre offered as its duel attraction of the week Gertrude Ederle and Bebe Daniels in "Swim, Girl, Swim" and the Siamese Twins on the stage. It was an average week for the season.

The St. Louis Theatre had an excellent film on its screen styled "Alias the Lone Wolf" in which Bert Lytell had the leading role.

It was a very good week for the neighborhood theatres with airdomes. The weather for a change was really warm—more like a real August week than part of September. However, the business of the outlying houses was far from what it should have been. There is still much unemployment in St. Louis while thousands of men and women, who should know better but never will, have been journeying nightly out to St. Louis county to give some fat and sleek gamblers their hard earned wages and in some instances life's savings to see a flock of hounds chase after a stuffed rabbit.

The dogs get somewhere even if they never catch the rabbit, but the patrons of the two tracks that are now open are merely on the way—to want and poverty.

So marked has been the trend to the tracks leading clergymen and businessmen have taken steps to wipe out the "racing evil."

Boston

BOSTON'S holiday week-end business was not up to expectations. Steady growth in box office receipts during recent weeks led to the belief that a record-breaking week would be enjoyed, but holiday business was only fair, making, all told, an average week.

Only one reason for the week's showing can be found—the weather. After a summer of almost continual rain, Boston emerged from its wet blanket with a week of the most ideal weather imaginable. The result was that Boston was like a deserted village over the week-end holiday.

The Metropolitan took the lead in the opening observances of Paramount Week with "Hula" as the feature, playing to better than average audiences during the entire week in spite of the general slump. Jack Partington's presentation, "Way Out West," was a real Westerner, and was worthy of mention.

Another theatre reporting good business was Loew's State, where "The Big Parade" was the feature. This was its first appearance at popular prices.

Loew's Orpheum presented "Adam and Evil," and the twin houses, Modern and Beacon Theatres, had as their double feature, "Passion" and "The Black Diamond Express." "The Way of All Flesh," shown earlier at the Metropolitan, was the week's feature at the Fenway Theatre. "The Bugle Call" and "Slaves of Beauty" were the double features at the Bowdoin Square. "Soft Cushions" was the film at the Keith-Albee Boston Theatre.

Four Boston theatres showed "Beau Geste" simultaneously, the Washington Street Olympia, Capitol, Scollay Square Olympia and the Central Square, playing to better than average business.

In addition to the theatres showing "Beau Geste" and the Metropolitan, Boston and Fenway Theatres, twenty-six other theatres in the Boston territory participated in Paramount Week.

Detroit

BUSINESS continues to increase at the downtown houses, practically all attractions drawing good crowds throughout the week despite warm weather.

"Beau Geste," at the Adams, continues as the favorite film. Excellent attendance summed up the second week's showing. These roadshow features with popular prices bring movie-goers and others here to the box offices in exceedingly large numbers and this attraction is no exception. It is being held over another week.

A heavy drop in the Madison's receipts followed the second week's showing of "The Magic Flame." In a cooler house this film would have done much better. During the previous week when temperatures were right, large throngs flocked through the doors.

At the Michigan, Bebe Daniels in "Swim, Girl, Swim" augmented by Lou Kosloff and his symphonic syncopators in "Banjomania," went along nicely. Evening performances brought in big money and matinees during this latter part of the week also drew well.

"Slightly Used," with May McAvoy and Conrad Nagel proved a good bet at the State where Loew's vaudeville is also featured and Douglas McLean registered well in "Soft Cushions." Both shows were far better than those offered in these houses last week.

The Miles did fairly with "Passion" and vaudeville while the Cohen brothers, Ben and Lou, of the Colonial reported average on "Paid to Love."

Monte Blue's "The Bush Leaguer," showing in the Temple along with Keith-Albee vaudeville, was heavily patronized.

Cleveland

THE week just concluded was very satisfactory from a box office point of view. The best pictures did the best business. The mediocre pictures did good business. None of the pictures shown first run last week fell down.

"The Way of All Flesh," which opened at the Stillman, did very well. There was not a dissenting voice against the greatness of this picture. The Palace had a constant waiting line to see "Running Wild," which pleased the vast army of farce lovers. "Adam and Evil" did not come up to expectations at the Allen. It did fair business, which, according to those who pay to enter, was what it deserved. "Smile, Brother, Smile," an unusually good comedy, rolled up a good box office record at the State Theatre. "Moon of Israel" held up well during its second week at the Cameo. Reade's Hippodrome played to packed houses with "The Blood Ship," a picture with great entertainment value, and recommended by local newspaper critics. "Two Girls Wanted" received its just rewards with just fair business at Keith's East 105th St. "Potemkin," the first feature shown at the Little Theatre of the Movies, praised by critics, was a decided success, and taxed the capacity of the small playhouse every day. The Park reports just fair business with a return engagement of "When a Man Loves."

Weather conditions last week were fair. While the weather turned warm in the daytime, the evenings were cool. No special legitimate stage attractions were offered as competition. Neighborhood theatre give conflicting reports. Some had a good week. The majority claim that business is below normal for this time of year.

Minneapolis

LAST week was a banner one for the moving picture theatres in Minneapolis and St. Paul, as it always is during State Fair week. This event always brings in thousands of visitors from the Northwest, and as the fair grounds are situated midway between Minneapolis and St. Paul, the two cities divide the crowds about equally.

"Resurrection" did such a rush business at the Strand that the picture has been held over for a second week—probably the direct result of the Fair crowds. Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton proved immensely popular at the State, where they held forth to large audiences in "Firemen, Save My Child." "The Blood Ship" pulled in big crowds at the Lyric, and Clara Bow in "Rough House Rosie" moved into the Grand for a big week. Pantages was featuring Tom Mix in "Tumbling River" and, as usual with a Mix picture, was well rewarded at the boxoffice.

"The Kid Sister" seemed to make a hit with the Fair crowds at the Hennepin-Orpheum, as did "For Ladies Only" at the Seventh street. Neighborhood houses, of course, did not feel the effects of Fair week as strongly as did the down town theatres, but they reported strong business just the same. "Twelve Miles Out," "Tillie the Toiler," "Rough House Rosie" and "Lovers?" were some of the pictures shown at the Loring, Lagoon, Rialto and Lyndale, all of which found attendance good.

The weather was damp and rainy most of the week, which kept down the Fair attendance, but helped the movies a great deal.

Seattle

HIGH gross for the week in this city was established last week by the Orpheum Theatre, which opened its fall season in a beautiful, new theatre with an entirely new policy of feature pictures and Orpheum vaudeville at a new reduced price scale. Top prices are now 75c, and run as low as 25c for matinees. "The Fighting Eagle" was the picture selected as the opening attraction, and met with more popular approval than the stage program. Two shows daily, with continuous on Sunday, resulted in an opening week's gross that neared the $25,000 mark.

Despite the competition of the Orpheum opening, the Fifth Avenue Theatre maintained its usual high gross, reaching the $20,000 level with "Hula" and a very good Fanchon-Marco stage show. Eddie Peabody's weekly novelties continue to bring rounds of applause from every audience, and this little master of ceremonies is a real box office attraction in his own right.

Several big pictures in their second week continued to draw large houses, aided to a great extent by a remarkably dignified and effective "Greater Movie Season" campaign put over by West Coast Theatres. Among these pictures was "Camille" at the United Artists Theatre, which held up very satisfactorily until the end of its two-weeks' run.

At the Pantages Theatre, "What Price Glory" in its second week continued to play to large houses, although business was noticeably lower than the first week. A five-act vaudeville program augmented the second week's engagement, which concluded the run. It was the first showing in America at popular prices, the film never having been road-showed in this territory.

"Beau Geste" at the Columbia Theatre fared better than the two previous extended run pictures, and went into a third week this week at Manager Bender's house. The film has been doing a very big business, hanging up a gross that has not been equalled in this house for a good many weeks.

"The Missing Link" at Hamrick's Blue Mouse was another film that has lasted two weeks and is still going strong. The Vitaphone subjects used on the same program were weak. One more week for this picture here.

"Adam and Evil" at the Liberty Theatre and "The World at Her Feet" at the Embassy were the two other new pictures in town at the first-run houses. The first-named picture was only fairly successful in its box office appeal, although it met with the approval of everyone that saw it. The Embassy attraction was a good business-getter, and kept this popular little house busy at nearly every performance.

Albany

FOR the first time in three years, a picture is being held over in Albany, N. Y., for a second week. "What Price Glory," playing at the Leland absolutely smashed every attendance record in the history of the city. From Monday until Saturday, there was a wild scramble, and the jam became so great on two or three nights that Alec Sayles, house manager, stationed himself at the box office and refused to accept the money that was being shoved through the wicket. As a result "What Price Glory" is being held over this week, and may go into a third week. If the third week becomes a possibility it will be the first one in Albany's history.

While "Camille" drew well at the Mark Strand, it could hardly be classed as being in the running with "What Price Glory." Norma Talmadge has always been the best drawing female star at the Strand, but it was necessary to use a mailing list of 10,000 persons to bring about a satisfactory attendance during the week when a comparison was drawn with the Leland. Mae Murray, playing in "Altars of Desire" at the Clinton Square, did not have so much as a show with the others during the week. The Mark Ritz, with "The Stolen Bride," did a good business, although an Our Gang comedy no doubt helped matters along, and the house also got a portion of the overflow from the Leland.

In Schenectady and Troy, "Camille" pulled well, although the attendance was nothing phenomenal. Weather conditions were ideal with cool weather prevailing.

Salt Lake City

A PORTION of the unusually heavy business enjoyed by all of the downtown motion picture theatres during the past week has been accredited to the Col. Lindbergh celebration which drew many people here from the surrounding country. Brisk fall weather has also sided in making theatre business exceptionally good.

This being the Tenth Annual Paramount Week, "Beau Geste" was selected as the production to be offered at the Paramount Empress and, according to the new manager, Carl A. Porter, records of the house were shattered. This picture is being shown as an extended run.

At the Victory Theatre here, now under the management of Ray Hendry, "Nevada" has had a very successful run during the past week.

"The Lone Eagle" at the American is reported to have drawn exceedingly large crowds.

"Passion" is reported to have been well received at the Pantages Theatre in connection with the regular vaudeville bill.

"The Canyon of Light" drew the ever waiting hosts of Tom Mix and Tony fans from the child populace of the city and big box office receipts were the result.

The second showing of Clara Bow in "Rough House Rosie" at the Rialto did capacity business.

Exploitation has been above the average this week.

Central Pennsylvania

TWO pictures that proved good money-makers for Harrisburg theatres during the week, and stood out above the others in that and others respects, were "Camille" at the Colonial, and "Mockery" at Loew's Regent. Both started off with big crowds on Monday, Labor Day, when they won popular approval in a way that assured good business for them throughout the week.

At the Victoria the feature was "We're All Gamblers," which did not draw so well, critics declaring that Meighan has done much better in other vehicles for his talents. There was a Meighan picture at the Grand, also, where the offering was "Tin Gods," in which Renee Adoree also stars.

"The Romantic Age," was well liked at the State, together with the vaudeville bill, in the last three days of the week. The New Rialto successfully offered "The Block Signal." Railroad plays of merit always are popular in Harrisburg.

Rin-Tin-Tin, in "Hills of Kentucky," was at the National and did well notwithstanding it was shown in a larger Harrisburg theatre a month or so before.

The fact that the week opened with a holiday served to boost the total receipts. Good weather conditions and the fact that a great many persons began coming home from summer vacation trips at the beginning of the month also were important contributing facts.

Baltimore

DURING its second week at Loew's Valencia beginning Monday, September 12, "The Big Parade" played to crowded houses and almost did the same amount of business as during the first week, even though it has been shown twice before here at a legitimate house at road show prices of admission.

Next in line was the business done "Service for Ladies" with Adolphe Menjou in the starring role and Gertrude Ederle, Helen Wainwright and June Epperson also on the bill at Loew's Century. Business there was excellent.

With the addition of seven men in the orchestra at the Rivoli, and the policy of again giving stage acts on the bill inaugurated during that week, "Naughty But Nice," starring Colleen Moore went over fine at that playhouse.

"Pleasure Before Business," proved a very good drawing card at Keith's Hippodrome with five acts of family vaudeville; "Moon of Israel" pulled them in strong at the New Theatre as did "The Great Mail Robbery" at Whitehurst's Garden, with five acts of family vaudeville also.

"The Bush Leaguer," starring Monte Blue, did not go over so well with the public at Warner's Metropolitan, the patronage being flat throughout the week. At Ford's Theatre business on the third week of "Old Ironsides," was just so-so. The prices charged at this legitimate house were 50 to $1.50 at night and 50 to $1 for matinees.

San Francisco

DURING the past the San Francisco motion picture houses kept up their good box office reports, generally speaking. "Underworld" did fairly well as the Granada Theatre, and the Fanchon and Marco Idea was considered very good. "The Life of Riley" drew well at the Loew's Warfield Theatre, and there the presentation act drew fairly well.

"The Big Parade" was held over for the sixth week at the California Theatre, and continued the big crowds it did the previous weeks. "Beau Geste" was continued at the St. Francis Theatre at popular prices and drawing big crowds only on certain days, but not continually, as it was thought it would draw.

"Ain't Love Grand?" and "That's My Money," both shown at the Union Square Theatre with vaudeville filled the house comfortably. Frank Lacey continued the Griffiths productions shown the previous week and did well the second week also. "Framed" drew crowds to the Golden Gate Theatre, which filled the house with vaudeville acts.

In the residential districts the Wigwam did especially well with "The Unknown Cavalier" and a musical comedy. The Coliseum attracted many with "Cabaret," and the individual songsters who appear on Saturdays and Sundays. The Casino Theatre filled the theatre with "The Red Kimona" and Henry Pincus, the manager did better than he expected.

Milwaukee

THE re-opening of the Garden Theatre, and the innovation of the Vitaphone were the outstanding events in Milwaukee theatrical news this week. "When a Man Loves" was the feature. Crowds surged about the front of the theatre on the opening night and continued to patronize the theatre throughout the week. Unusually warm weather over the double holiday brought business slightly below par for most of the theatres. Clara Bow in "Hula" drew good business to the Wisconsin in spite of adverse weather conditions. Business was fair at the Strand where "Firemen, Save My Child" amused the audiences. The re-issued "Covered Wagon" struggled hard against competition in other houses and outside attractions, and succeeded in winning some degree of attention from the theatre going public. "Metropolis" did only fair business at the Alhambra. The Orpheum featured Rod La Rocque in the "Fighting Eagle," which was very favorably received.

Saxe's new Uptown on the northwest side opened last Saturday with a seven unit program featuring "The Poor Nut," and drew excellent patronage throughout the week. "The Blood Ship" made its premiere in Milwaukee at the Milwaukee Theatre, where it was enthusiastically received. Raymond Griffith in "Time to Love" brought in good business to the Oriental, while Johnny Hines in "All Aboard" proved a good drawing card at the Modjeska and Tower Theatres.

Kansas City

RAIN, which routed unusually warm September weather, coupled with a strong lineup of pictures, caused box office figures to soar this week in Kansas City.

At the Newman, Clara Bow in "Hula" did a big business all week, the same applying to "Beau Geste" at the Royal, although the latter picture was booked to run more than one week.

"When a Man Loves" was the feature of the Vitaphone program at the Globe, attendance being better than the previous week. "Moon of Israel" appealed to church goers and attracted good crowds for the week. "Moon of Israel" appealed to churchtages did a good business.

Harry Langdon in "Three's a Crowd" at the Main Street did a bigger business than the two previous weeks.

Oklahoma City

"BEAU GESTE" returned to Oklahoma City for the first time at regular prices and played to well filled seats at every performance. The comments were all good on this picture too. Some advance advertising was carried in the newspapers for a week or so before the picture appeared, and the results at the box-office were very satisfactory. It played at the Criterion.

"Camille" also made a return trip last week at regular prices and drew good crowds, especially the first part of the week. The comments on "Camille" were varied, but it did very good business on the whole.

"Nevada" did a nice regular business at the Capitol the first half of the week. These better grade Westerns do well at this theatre. "Madame Pompadour" kept up this theatre's average for the last half of the week. Dorothy Gish was the main part of the attraction of this picture.

"Alias the Lone Wolf" played the first half of the week at the Liberty to pretty fair business. Tom Mix finished the week with "The Circus Ace." Mix goes over well at the Liberty.

Studio Briefs

Ralph Forbes will play opposite Renee Adoree in "Rose Marie." Other roles in this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer film will be in the hands of Lloyd Hamilton, Harry Carey and Roy D'Arcy.

Marceline Day has signed a new contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer upon the eve of her initial work in "The Hypnotist."

Production has begun on "Broadway After Midnight," a Krelbar picture which Bud Barsky is personally supervising on the West Coast. Priscilla Bonner, Cullen Landis, Gareth Hughes and Barbara Tennent have the leading roles.

Florence Vidor will next do "Honeymoon Hate," an adaptation of a story by A. M. Williamson. Luther Reed has been assigned the direction tentatively.

The Cast for F B O's "The Slingshot Kid," starring Buzz Barton, now comprises Jeanne Morgan, Arnold Gray, Jay Morley, Frank Rice, Buck Conners and Wilson Hummel. The story was written directly for the screen by John Twist and Jean Dupont. Louis King is the director.

Aggostino Borgaio has been given one of the important roles in "Beau Sabreur," which Paramount is now filming at the Lasky ranch in California.

Henry B. Walthall has joined the cast of "The Hypnotist," a new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer vehicle for Lon Chaney.

Fay Wray has been cast for the leading feminine role in Adolphe Menjou's new Paramount vehicle, as yet untitled.

Alice White and Lucien Prival have been added to the cast of "The Private Life of Helen of Troy," now in production at the First National Burbank studio.

Richard Arlen will be seen in the leading male role opposite Bebe Daniels in "She's a Sheik," the comedienne's new picture for Paramount.

Audrey Ferris, former dancer at Grauman's Egyptian Theatre, has been chosen for the chief feminine part in "Sailor Izzy Murphy," George Jessel's forthcoming Warner Bros. comedy soon to be started.

Fred Kohler will play the role of the villain in George Bancroft's first starring picture for Paramount provided he finished his role in the Paramount Western, "Open Range," in time.

James Murray, the young actor whom King Vidor discovered, will have the male lead in "In Old Kentucky," which John M. Stahl is to direct for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Edward Martindel is the only other player selected to date.

Mary Brian will play the ingenue lead in the initial Paramount comedy co-starring Chester Conklin and W. C. Fields as yet untitled. Ralph Cedar is to direct.

Ann Sheridan has been assigned to play opposite Bob Steel in F B. O's "The Bandit's Son," which Wallace Fox will direct. Miss Sheridan last appeared with Bob Custer in "Galloping Thunder."

Shirley Dorman, who became a screen player through an introduction to Lois Weber, this week signed a long term Paramount contract, awarded because of her roles in "One Woman to Another" and "The City Gone Wild."

Estelle Bradley, feminine lead for Lloyd Hamilton and Lupino Lane, is seen as leading lady in the former's latest comedy for Educational, "His Better Half."

Frank Strayer, director, has been chosen to handle "Now We're in the Air," on which Paramount will start production inside of a few days.

Neil Hamilton has been cast as leading man to Esther Ralston in "The Glory Girl," which will be placed into production at the Paramount studio in the near futur. Frank Tuttle has been chosen to do the megaphoning.

Supporting players in the cast of Warner Bros. vehicle for Dolores Costello, "The College Widow," include William Collier, Jr., the masculine lead, Anders Randolf, the heavy, and Douglas Gerrard, Charles Sellon, Big Boy Williams and Grace Gordon.

Frank T. Daugherty, title-writer, has been appointed assistant to Randolph Bartlett, film and title editor at F B O. Daugherty is at present working on the titles of "South Sea Love" and "The Slingshot Kid."

Helene Costello has been loaned by Warner Bros. to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for the feminine lead in the latter's "In Old Kentucky."

"The Comeback" is the temporary title for Monte Blue's next picture for Warner Bros., based on a story by Harvey Gates. Lloyd Bacon will direct it.

William Austin, who has a featured role in "Swim, Girl, Swim," Bebe Daniels' vehicle has been signed to a long term contract by Paramount.

Work gets under way about October 15 on Gotham's "The Fruit of Divorce," in which Percy Marmont will star. The story is an original by Leon De Costa. No director has as yet been assigned to preside over the company.

Gleen Tryon will play the featured supporting role in "Thanks for the Buggy Ride," Laura La Plante's new starring vehicle for Universal. Tryon is now completing "The Flying Nut." William A. Seiter will direct the La Plante feature, and will start within a few days' time.

Neil Neely, who three years ago left a Texas ranch where he was born and reared, has been placed under a long-term contract by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Neely stands six feet one and one-half inches; he makes his debut in "West Point," which Edward Sedgwick is directing.

Violet La Plante, younger sister of Laura La Plante, has just completed a leading role opposite Bob Curwood in "The Valiant Rider," a Universal short length Western. Others in the cast are Jack O'Brien and Buck Conners.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has signed Charlotte Greenwood, eccentric dancer and actress, to play the leading role in "Baby Mine," now being filmed with Karl Dane and George K. Arthur co-featured.

Claude King, stage and screen actor, has been added to the cast of "The Hypnotist," Lon Chaney's new vehicle for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. King is the only English actor singled out for mention in Shaw's "Prefaces to Great Plays." Andy McClellan has also been added to Chaney's support.

Josephine Dunn, Paramount player, has been cast for a role in support of Bebe Daniels in the star's latest comedy, "She's a Sheik."

Rose Dione, French actress, has been added to the cast of "Bringing Up Father," the Cosmopolitan film which will be built around the strip by George McManus. Other additions to the cast include Tenen Holtz and Bull Montana.

John Waters will direct Paramount's first comedy feature presenting W. C. Fields and Chester Conklin. He will begin work on the comedy as soon as "Beau Sabreur" is in the hands of the cutters.

Dorothy Revier will play in another First National film, "The Gorilla," before returning to Columbia Pictures, to whom she is under contract. First National asked Columbia for a continuation of Miss Revier's services after her role in Richard Barthelmess' "The Drop Kick."

John Barrymore's "Tempest" will be directed by V. Tourjansky and not Frank Lloyd, who has resigned from the post. Tourjansky directed "Michael Strogoff." The new Barrymore vehicle goes into production on September 14 at the United Artists' Hollywood plant.

Production is scheduled to start soon on "The Gorilla," to be produced by Asher, Small and Rogers for First National as players are rapidly being signed. Tully Marshall is the latest to join the cast.

Emile Shautard, director and character actor, has been added to the cast of "Now We're in the Air," which Frank Strayer is directing for Paramount.

The next First National vehicle for the team of Jack Mulhall and Dorothy Mackaill will be "Man Crazy," an adaptation of "Clarissa of the Post Road," a story by Grace Sartwell Mason. John Francis Dillon will direct it.

Cullen Landis, who first achieved prominence under James Cruze, will again work under that director, having been cast for the role opposite Marie Prevost in "On to Reno," which picture marks the debut of Cruze as an associate producer with Cecil B. De Mille. Joseph Jackson did the story and Walter Wood is supervising its scenarization.

Richard Clendenin, one of the Ten National Collegiate stars selected by First National, has been cast for an important role in "No Place to Go," which Mervyn Le Roy is directing with Mary Astor and Lloyd Hughes in the leading roles. Loretta Young, a new screen "find" of First National, also plays a part. This will be her fourth assignment; she is only fifteen.

Eugenia Gilbert has been cast for the leading feminine role in "By Whose Hand?" Columbia's mystery feature which will star Ricardo Cortez.

Lucille Hutton and "Kewpie" Morgan are cast as the principal supporting players in "Batter Up," an Educational-Mermaid comedy in which George Davis is featured.

Matthew Betz, character actor, will portray the villain in "The Shepherd of the Hills," the Harold Bell Wright story which Charles R. Rogers is producing for First National. Alec B. Francis will play the title role in the picture.

Patsy Ruth Miller, who was recently signed by Tiffany Productions, will play the leading part in "Once and Forever," now in production. The complete cast has not been assembled as yet. Johnny Harron has also been signed for an important role.

Casting has begun on "Pretty Clothes," second Sterling production for the new season. Charles Clary, Lloyd Whitlock and Jack Mower have been allotted minor roles.

Fox writers are now busy on the 1927-28 schedule. Donald McGibney is doing "Womanwide." James K. McGuinness will soon finish "The Girl from Havana," and Harry O. Hoyt is to write "Balaoo." Reginald Morris is writing "Ladies Must Dress," Seton I. Miller has just completed "Wolf Fangs" and Randall H. Faye is writing the continuity for a McNamara-Cohen vehicle. Lambert Hillyer is engaged on "The Branded Sombrero." A H. Halperin is busy with a high school story, Frances Agnes with "The Comedian," while Harold B. Lipsitz has finished the continuity for "Silver Valley."

The latest word from the Chadwick Studios announces that Betty Compson is to be starred and Pauline Garon and Armand Kaliz featured in one of First Division's forthcoming features, "Temptations of a Shopgirl." Raymond Glenn, William Humphrey, Gladda James, Cora Williams, John Webb Dillion, Jack Tanner, and William Curran are in the cast. This feature is to be directed by Tom Terris with Georges Benoit and Ted Tetzlaff cranking the cameras.

Leila Hyams, Warner Bros. featured player, has been loaned by that organization to Fox, for whom she will act as Buck Jones' leading lady in "The Branded Sombrero." Miss Hyams has just completed her latest Warner role as principal support to Monte Blue in his forthcoming stellar vehicle, "One Round Hogan."

Conrad Nagel has put his signature to a contract with Warner Bros. to play in two pictures. This followed the company's enthusiasm for his work in "Slightly Used" starring May McAvoy, in which he appeared as male lead. The first of the two additional films which Nagel will make willl be "The Girl from Chicago" soon to be started with Ray Enright handling directorial duties. Following this the actor will again be seen opposite May McAvoy in a picture temporarily titled "If I Were Single."

Myrna Loy will have the principal lead in Warners' production temporarily titled "The Girl from Chicago," which is an adaptation of Arthur Somers Roche's story, "Business Is Best." The studio schedule calls for this picture to be started early next week with Ray Enright directing. Conrad Nagel is playing the male lead and other selections for the cast are now being made.

Mystery surrounds the production in which Columbia Pictures will present Conway Tearle. Beyond the fact that it is a story of love and sacrifice, and that it is scheduled as one of the eight specials, the company is keeping even the name of the new production a secret.

George B. Seitz has been selected to bring the Tearle vehicle to the screen. This will be Mr. Seitz's second production for Columbia as he is also responsible for the direction of "The Blood Ship."

This week's addition to the list of important players being lined up for Columbia's "Perfect Thirty" is Gibson Gowland, who was signed by Harry Cohn, vice-president in charge of production, for a prominent role in one of the company's forthcoming specials.

Five more players were added to Columbia's "By Whose Hand?", now in its second week of production, when Harry Cohn, vice-president in charge of production for the company signed Tom Dugan, William Scott, Lillianne Leighton, J. Thornton Baston and Edgar Washington Blue for prominent roles in the new feature. "By Whose Hand?" stars Ricardo Cortez and features Eugenia Gilbert.

Because of his creditable performance in "Rough House Rosie" starring Clara Bow, Reed Howes has been selected for the masculine lead of "Say It with Sables." This production will star Claire Windsor in one of the most pretentious offerings of Columbia's 1927-28 program.

The first of a series of important roles planned by Warner Bros. this season for Helene Costello will be in support of Warner Oland in "Good Time Charley," a production to be started early in September with Michael Curtiz as director. At present Miss Costella is working on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot, where she was loaned by Warner Bros. for the lead in "In Old Kentucky."

Thelma Todd will play opposite Richard Dix in "The Gay Defender," the star's next picture for Paramount. This will be the first big role for the blonde graduate of Paramount's school. Previously she had bits in "Firemen, Save My Child" and "Nevada."

Al. W. Fremont, comedian, and Paul McAllister have been signed to appear in Bebe Daniels' newest Paramount picture, "She's a Sheik." With the assignment of these players the cast for the picture is now complete. Clarence Badger will direct the production, which goes before the camera on Monday.

William Fairbanks, who has been starred for a number of years in western film productions, has been signed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to play the role of "Buffalo Bill" Cody in "Wyoming," Tim McCoy's next western vehicle, it was announced last week by Irving G. Thalberg, M-G-M executive.

James Cruze, who recently joined the Pathe-De Mille force as an associate producer, has completed his organization and cast, and is ready to start shooting on his first picture, "On to Reno," with Marie Prevost starred. In addition to Miss Prevost, the cast will include Cullen Landis, as leading man, and Ned Sparks.

The original screen story from which will evolve Max Reinhardt's first motion picture, to be released by United Artists, has been written by Rudolph Kommer, Austrian playwright and critic, and intimate of Reinhardt for two decades.

Mary Brian will have the feminine lead in "Side Show," the first W. C. Fields-Chester Conklin comedy, which goes before the cameras within the next fortnight. Ralph Cedar is to direct the story, which shows Conklin as the suspicious sheriff of a small town making life more bitter than ever for the cynical owner of a defunct carnival, played by Fields.

Lupino Lane will direct himself in the next Lupino Lane Comedy to be put in production at Educational Studios. The star has had several years' directorial experience in England, where he was the head of the Homeland Films prior to the war. Lane occupies a unique position in filmland. He is the only star before the screen who is, or has been, producer, director, distributor and star. At the present time he owns the controlling interest in several theatres in London.

Two more prominent screen names have been added to the cast of "The Gorilla," the Ralph Spence stage play which is being filmed as a First National special.

Noah Beery has been named to play the third important role in "Louisiana," a George Fitzmaurice production for First National Pictures, in which Billie Dove is to be starred. Gilbert Roland will play the masculine lead.

Hayden Stevenson has been added to the cast of "Fires of Youth," John Gilbert's new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer vehicle. Stevenson plays the role of a newspaper reporter, a "buddy" of the hero in the local room of a Washington newspaper. Stevenson, a former stage actor, first won prominence on the screen in the H. C. Witwer stories, and has since played many notable roles.

"Hook, Line and Sinker"

(Pathe—One Reel)

AESOP said many years ago "Many a man's ship is wrecked on a permanent wave," according to the little grain of wisdom tacked onto the end of this Aesop fable in film form. But those who see the thing will say what spoiled a day of pleasure for Al Falfa was not the elements, fate nor even a blonde; it was the diabolical wickedness of Thomas Cat and his small friend Milton Mouse, who conspired with the fish in the lake and the worms in the earth to make life miserable for poor Al. As Al was an ardent fisherman, imbued with a fisherman's persistance and determination, he was easy prey for their game of torment. They stole his bait, they released the fish he caught and made life in general miserable.

At length old Falfa catches a big one, but is knocked into the ocean when a storm arises with overpowering suddenness. Down in the depths of the sea he encounters mermaids and an octopus. This devil fish engages him in combat, but is tied up for a time by Al. However, he ultimately gets loose and a terrible figure of vengeance pursues the luckless man through the water onto the shore, where the cat and mouse join in the run for safety.

Cartoonist Terry has some good gags here. The concerted efforts of Milton and Thomas to fool the farmer are enjoyable.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"Fully Equipped"

(Educational—One Reel)

HONEYMOONERS burdened with an unwelcome uncle just discharged from a sanitarium for neurotics. With this pest around things naturally did not harmonize with Jack Lloyd and Edna Gregory, the young couple. And the matter is aggravated considerably as the uncle had a bandaged foot which seemed to be a magnet for all sorts of heavy weights. The young people are hard put to please their irate guest and much of the comedy is taken up with the various calamities that befall the old man and his agonized grimaces of protest. A doctor from the sanitarium arrives to examine his erstwhile patient, only to depart in great haste, the back and middle portion of his pants afire and belching forth great quantities of smoke, it having been ignited by constant kicks from the uncle's foot, which in turn had been lit by a lighted match. It is comedy of this sort that extends throughout the Cameo comedy—the ordinary kind which nevertheless pleases. Henry Murdock has the role of the flustered and persecuted uncle. Robert Dillon directed. —RAYMOND GANLY.

"Lost in a Pullman"

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

PERHAPS if the principal performer (named Luke) had shown more ability and the director had given his scenes the proper semblance of nonsensicality, this Physical Culture comedy would be more impressive. It is painfully interminable in desperate attempts to produce laughs; it has very little of gags.

Mawkish humor suitable as filler.

This Luke resides at the sea shore and arouses the suspicions of a heavy fellow because the latter's wife seems to be interested in him. Ensue rough and tumble chases and continual vexing of the villain by Luke. Returning home by train, he encounters the same couple, and more roughhouse, slapstick stuff comes to the fore. Luke is no sooner out of one scrape than he's in another with the irritated husband; the latter endeavors to put him away for good, but Luke's luck in squeezing out of tight situations holds until one juncture arises out of which there seems no escape; then Luke wakes up to discover that he has been dreaming all this, that his neighbor's wife in the dream is none other than his own wife, and that the aforementioned neighbor is not a rip snorting man, but a timid, sissified fellow. The Pullman scenes and pursuits through the cars are the most amusing in the entire two reels.

"The Riding Whirlwind"

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

NEWTON HOUSE is featured in this Western, which depicts an exciting tale of pony express riding, a relief from the usual story of the cattle rustlers. It's a fairly good story, this one, with plenty of clever riding and an abundance of suspense.

Billy Barnes lives with his widowed mother and his older sister near a pony express station and his idol is Chet Lane, daring pony express rider. It is Billy's birthday. He is given an unbroken horse by Elmer Hill, veteran Indian fighter and boss of the pony express station.

There is an impending Indian uprising, delayed twenty-four hours by a new and liberal treaty. The treaty arrives at the pony express station, but Chet Lane is delayed. He has been waylaid and wounded by Clyde Winslow, who sees profit to himself if the Indians start an uprising. Billy volunteers to carry the treaty to the Indians and after many difficulties reaches his destination in time to avert the disaster. There are many exciting climaxes that should satisfy the follower of the Westerns.

"Fox Tales"

(Educational-Mermaid—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by T. C. Kennedy)

LUCILLE HUTTON, Phil Dunham, Eva Thatcher and Robert Graves are the principals in this Jack White comedy directed by Stephen Roberts. The scenes depict the events resulting from a hall room boy's adventure into society, in which he poses as a prince. His taxi driver, still lacking the fare due him, acts as his military aide. The society matron's daughter has an admirer, who, of course, is jealous of the prince. The latter has his opportunity for revenge when all participate in a fox hunt. The poser and his aids are thrown from their mounts and continue the chase in an abandoned automobile. "Fox Tales" is not amusing nonsense. It is the sort of picture that will happen even in the best regulated series, but that is scarcely a reason for its finding its way to the better programs of the best houses. However good the intentions were, the result of the production is a picture too dull and too stupid to rate a spot on the well chosen program.

"Delving into the Dictionary"

(Hodge-Podge-Educational—One Reel)

DICTIONARY definitions are the vehicle used by Lyman H. Howe to introduce some of his novel scenes in this edition of Hodge Podge. One or two droll ideas have been evolved for cartoon presentation in conjunction with actual photographs. The idea is carried out thus: we read the definition for "sponge," which is "the porous elastic skeleton of certain salt-water animals." Follow some views of sponge gathering, and interpolated is a cartoon giving the slang expression of "sponge" in the form of a chap who always passes up the luncheon and dinner check in favor of his friend or acquaintance. A fair novelty.—T. C. KENNEDY.

"Lucky Dog"

(Educational-Cameo—One Reel)

A SINGLE-REELER with plenty of action and a chuckle or two, but on the whole routine stuff. The action occurs in and about the house of a couple who have different notions about dogs. The wife likes 'em and the husband hates 'em. She insists upon owning a dog, so husband engages a stage performer whose specialty is impersonating a dog, to join him in a plot to cure the wife of her liking for a doggie pet. The husband gets jealous of the caresses lavished by his wife on the new pet and it all ends up in the usual chase. The cast is composed of Phil Dunham, Louise Billets and George Atterbury.—T. C. KENNEDY.

"Back Home"

(Educational—One Reel)

THIS is one of the Walter Futter's Curiosities series in the Movie Sideshow. It shows the usual number of interesting subjects that may be seen "Back Home," away from the big cities. There is Fishport, for instance, where the natives are shown mending miles of fishing nets.

Log rolling is displayed as it is done expertly in Timberville, while in Oshkosh activities of the blind are picturized. There are various other subjects of similar type as carried on in different parts of the country. As a novelty it should be a good filler.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Felix the Cat in Wise Guise"

(Educational—One Reel)

THIS animated cartoon subject is of the usual order, cleverly executed, but lacking much of the humor that characterized the earlier efforts of the cartoonists generally. It is a little better than the usual run, at that.

Felix poses as the wise guy to impress his sweetie and with a lot of luck he gets away with it. He enters a swimming race and with the assistance of a fish that propels him, succeeds in winning. At a fireworks display he gets tangled up with a skyrocket and is carried skyward. He goes through many hair-raising maneuvers, but eventually wins the girl—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"A Dangerous Double"

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

BOB CURWOOD is the featured player in this featurette, which provides a better than usual story for a short western. Bob, a stranger in the territory, dangerously resembles an unknown bandit, for whom a reward of $5,000 is offered. He is picked up by the sheriff and posse, but makes his escape.

In his hurried getaway he comes upon Rose Purcell, who is just returning with the payroll for her ranch hands. He persuades her to hide him in the house, insisting he is not the bandit wanted. At the moment the real bandit enters the house and after a desperate fight Bob captures him, turns him over to the sheriff as the posse rides up, and receives the reward. It is the usual case of love at first sight and the reward enables Bob to wed the girl. There are some good riding sequences, as well as a realistic fist fight and other exciting features.

The Gay Retreat

Slapstick Comedy in a World War Setting

(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

IT is natural enough that the popularity of some of the elaborate war dramas should bring along a feature comedy in a setting of French villages and costumes of khaki. Of course, the producers of two-reelers have been doing it for some time, but, what with a lot of elaborate war settings all ready for the call of "action—camera," it is opportune for a feature-length rendition. In this offering Ted McNamara—well remembered for his telling work as the razz-dispensing private in "What Price Glory"—and Sammy Cohen, also prominent in that picture, have the burden of the work as a pair of buddies battling their way through difficulties behind and in front of the lines. It resolves itself into the Irish-Jewish species of comedy.

The six reels are filled out with a series of episodes and a quantity of slapstick gags, the majority of which seem to have the makings of effective comedy fare for audiences of the small houses where the elemental drama and slapstick comedy go over with the proverbial bang. Under those conditions the disjointed condition of the "plot" and the obviousness of the gags will not militate against "The Gay Retreat."

The Cast: Gene Cameron, Betty Francisco, Judy King, Sammy Cohen, Ted McNamara, Holmes Herbert, Jerry the Giant. Directed by Ben Stoloff.

THEME: Farce comedy about a wealthy youth, who walks in his sleep, and his father's butler and chauffeur who go to war together. Quite by accident they become heroes, responsible for the capture of a large number of Germans.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Performances of two character actors and rather elaborately staged closing sequence.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Feature appearance of two comedy characters of "What Price Glory" seen in further funny adventures at the front.

DRAWING POWER: Is potential magnet for program houses.

Produced and Distributed by Fox Films

Length, 5,524 feet. Released, Sept. 25, 1927

A student's intensity and comic difficulties are shown in these stills from "College," the United Artists feature.

Carefree abandon, feminine coquetry, love making and justification are to be found in these excerpts from Tiffany's feature, "The Girl from Gay Paree."

The Joy Girl

Cinderella Yarn—Not So Good

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THEY haven't done so well by Olive Borden here—not even with Allan Dwan handling the camera. It is a dressy little picture—decorative, in other words, but lacking any semblance of a plot, which would earn it paeons of praise. With Indian summer upon us it should go fairly well because of its Palm Beach background. The company shot it full of Florida sunshine—with the result that the outdoor flavor does much to overcome the weakness of the story.

It's the yarn of the chauffeur trying to double as his wealthy young master and being caught at it—with the result that the latter doubles as the chauffeur so as to see if the girl loves him for himself or for his wealth. There's a variation of it. The real chauffeur is interested in a wealthy widow—which accounts for his attempts to pose as the master. And that's about all there is to it. The action never develops to any extent—the scenes being given up to presenting the "glad" life of Palm Beach and environs in as favorable a light as possible.

Miss Borden photographs very easily—and she looks exceedingly neat against the backgrounds. But there are no emotional opportunities for her. The other players don't take full advantage of their scenes—and Marie Dressler's comedy might have been better. There is a flash of color photography which enhances the backgrounds here and there.

The Cast: Olive Borden, Neil Hamilton, Marie Dressler, Jerry Miley, Mary Alden, William Norris, Helen Chandler, Peggy Kelly. Director, Allan Dwan.

THEME: Romantic drama of wealthy youth who poses as his chauffeur—with chauffeur posing as his boss—both to see how they fare in love stakes.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Romantic scenes. Settings. Color photography.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up Florida atmosphere. Bill as romantic picture of youth and summertime—of how youth finds way to love. Play up Borden personality—and feature cast.

DRAWING POWER: For smaller houses. If on first run it needs strong support.

Produced and Distributed by Fox.

Length, six reels. Released, September, 1927.

The Girl from Gay Paree

A Fair Story But Not Convincing

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

A LITTLE pasty is this Tiffany Gem that is mounted in a poor setting. The story appears to have possibilities, but it is badly executed on the screen and the direction, apparently, could stand a lot of improvement. From the time Barbara Bedford tries to crawl on her hands and knees the length of a restaurant to avoid payment of the bill the whole action is exaggerated, and the various roles, though in competent hands, are over-acted.

As the story is unfolded one wonders whether it is a melodrama or farce, and there is no way of drawing the distinction even at its conclusion. It just doesn't hit the bull's-eye. It has its moments when it is quite interesting, but just as it promises to get somewhere someone throws a monkey wrench into the works by overacting or poor direction.

There is no sympathy for Barbara Bedford, who as Mary Davis is forced through hunger to impersonate Mme. Fanchon, the worst woman in Paris, as the attraction in a night club where the latter fails to appear. Miss Bedford's work is anything but convincing. Both Malcolm McGregor and Lowell Sherman are guilty of much over-acting, as is Betty Blythe in the role of the real Fanchon. Perhaps it is not their fault. They have little material upon which to work.

The Cast: Lowell Sherman, Barbara Bedford, Malcolm McGregor, Betty Blythe, Walter Hiers, Margaret Livingston, Templar Saxe, Leo White.

THEME: Drama of small-town beauty with theatrical inclinations, who is forced to accept place in night club as the original worst woman in Paris to keep from starving. Loved by the young feature newspaper writer, she all but loses him as she is compelled to pay attentions to club visitors, but in the end all is righted.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The lively scenes in the cabaret. The dramatic sequence in the Ryan apartment, where Mary is compelled to defend her honor.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: The exceptionally-well balanced cast. The night life sequences in a New York night club.

DRAWING POWER: May go fairly well in smaller houses.

Produced and Distributed by Tiffany Productions.
Length, 5,233 feet. Released, Oct. 1, 1927.

Pleasant backgrounds, feminine attire and pleasing action on the part of the principals feature "The Joy Girl," a current release from Fox Films.

The war is burlesqued in the Fox Film Comedy, "The Gay Retreat."

College

Laughs A-Plenty In The Keaton Comedy

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

BUSTER KEATON goes collegiate in his new number and, as usual, gets away with "murder." It is a lively piece—one crammed with Buster's ideas of slapstick—and which serves in making capital burlesque of college life. We are glad to see Keaton in this kind of stuff because the campus offers a rich field for the exploitation of his well-stocked bag of tricks.

The Buster doesn't get into the class-room very much. The fun is directed more toward the athletic field. He makes a hit with the dean, and fails to "click" with the girl until he goes in for athletics. He is working his way through college by jerking sodas at the local drug store—and ruins the clothes of some of the cash customers. He goes in for baseball—and wrecks the team. On the track he is a dud as a hurdler and pole-vaulter.

The number keeps moving from one gag to another—and the Keaton pantomime is always effective in encouraging the laughs, particularly when the episodes show signs of being resurrected from dead ones. The comedian has had funnier pieces—and sadder ones. This is one of the in-betweens. It will do for any screen, anywhere. The patron can't misinterpret the star's manner of putting his stuff over.

The Cast: Buston Keaton, Anne Cornwall, Flora Bramley, Harold Goodwin, Snitz Edwards, Carl Harbaugh, Sam Crawford, Florence Turner. Director, James Horne.

THEME: Comedy with old-fashioned boy going to college and mussing things up generally when it comes to athletics.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Buster's exploits on diamond, football field, track and with crew. Romantic scenes. Slapstick and gags. Captions. Episode at fountain.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Tie up with sporting goods stores. Use pennant display for lobby. Use stills of Keaton in athletic poses, etc.

DRAWING POWER: Star's name will draw them. Also title. O. K. for any house.

Produced by Joseph Schenck. Distributed by United Artists
Length, six reels. Released, September, 1927.

Seattle

SEATTLE, Washington, played host to a number of men high up in the film industry last week, its vacation possibilities having lured the magnates from their offices to the Pacific Northwest playgrounds.

First came Jesse L. Lasky, vice-president and general manager of Famous Players—Lasky corporation, who was en route to the lake regions of British Columbia aboard his private train. During his day's visit here Mr. Lasky was the guest of Manager James Q. Clemmer of the Fifth Avenue Theatre, where the film man saw "Hula" for the first time since its completion. He was introduced to the theatre audiences from the stage by Eddie Peabody, master of ceremonies, formerly of the Metropolitan Theatre in Los Angeles.

Next came A. L. Gore, vice-president of the West Coast Theatres, Inc., who drove up from Los Angeles with L. O. Lukan, western district manager for First National, to spend a short vacation at Mr. Lukan's ranch a short distance from Seattle. And then Mr. Gore was joined in Seattle by John Dillon, representative of large Boston financial interests, who is associated with both West Coast and First National.

The visitor's list was concluded by the arrival of Jack Leo, vice-president of Fox Film Corporation, who spent a short time at the Fox branch office, in Seattle, en route to his vacation in Los Angeles.

Elections of the Seattle Film Board of Arbitration held last week resulted in the selection of these new film representatives: Jack Bower of First National, Wallace Rucker of Educational, Carl Stearn of Warner Brothers, L. A. Samuelson of Pathe and D. C. Millward of Tiffany, the last two named being alternates. New exhibitor members are William Hartford of the Granada Theatre, H. T. Moore of the Moore Amusement Company of Tacoma, and R. R. Pratsch, South Tacoma theatre operator.

Jack Bower, incidentally, has just returned from an extended trip into Eastern Washington, where he conferred with Ray Grombacher of the Liberty Theatre and Will Starkey, of the Starkey Amusement Enterprises in Lewiston, Idaho.

Universal's Northwest Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., announced through their offices in this city last week the appointment of Mrs. Don Geddes as manager of the Ridgemont Theatre. Mrs. Geddes has had many years of experience in the theatre business, and her son Freeman Geddes is now managing Universal's Grey Goose Theatre on Beacon Hill in this city.

Anthony Xydias and Floyd St. John, owners of the Cooperative Exchanges on the Pacific Coast, visited their local branch last week and conferred with Manager Clarence M. Hill. After a few days here they decided to return to San Francisco, making a few stops with Southern Washington and Oregon exhibitors.

P. W. Strupler of Pullman, Washington, was a recent visitor in this city, and during his stay he announced that the new 750-seat Cordova Theatre in Pullman is already under construction. It is hoped to open the house late in December.

Dave Frazer, manager of DeMille-Pathe productions at the local Pathe branch, has recently renovated his office and has made it entirely enclosed.

B. Wallace Rucker, Educational manager in this city, returned last week from Great Falls, where he conferred with William Steege, who is buying the short subjects for the Westco-Pacific Northwest theatres in the Montana territory.

Frank Pratt, formerly associated with Mike Newman at the Columbia Theatre in this city and in Portland, and more recently connected with the West Coast Theatres in California, arrived in Seattle last week and is now associated with John Hamrick's Blue Mouse Theatre circuit.

Milburn Kenworthy, theatre operator of Moscow, Idaho, spent a short time in this city last week while he was en route to British Columbia. His trip here was the last lap of an extended motor vacation which covered the entire Pacific Coast as far south as Los Angeles.

William Rankin, popular film salesman of the Northwest territory, last week was appointed to the sales staff of Jack Lannon's Greater Features Exchanges.

The week before the Labor Day holidays brought several out of town exhibitors into Film Row. Included were William Armour of Montesano, Elma and McCleary; John McGill of Port Orchard; Walter Graham of Shelton and Elma; A. O. Jones of Burlington; C. A. Swanson of Everett; E. W. Groesbeck of Enumclaw and Buckley; and Charles Ervin of Okanogan.

H. C. Robinson, connected with the general offices of West Coast Theatres in this city, last week was named a trustee of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Washington, succeeding Frank Edwards, who resigned at the time he sold his Winter Garden Theatre to the Universal Chain Theatres.

Si Danz, former owner of the Hollywood Theatre, who sold out recently, has also announced his resignation as a trustee of the M. P. T. O. W., but his successor has not as yet been chosen.

Information received from Tacoma last week indicates that the 2,000 seat theatre now under construction at Second and Broadway, owned by the Masonic lodge, has been leased for operation by the City Theatre Company. Th latter organization is headed by Calvin Heilig, well-known theatre man of Portland and the Oregon territory. The house opening is scheduled for late October.

Louis Goldsmith, former owner of the Society Theatre in Seattle, has recently joined the sales staff of Manager Carl Stearn's local Warner Brothers exchange. He was for a time connected with United Artists in the same capacity.

Francis X. Bushman was a Seattle visitor last week, looking just as young as he did many years ago.

William Armstrong and Robert Powers, "high guns" of the Armstrong-Powers Theatre Studios of California, spent several days at their local office with Manager Henry Brashear last week.

Harry Percy and Lester Theurkauf of the Pathe-DeMille exchange in Portland, came to Seattle last week on business in connection with the Universal chain houses in the Oregon territory.

J. Lloyd Dearth, Pantages manager in the Northwest, and his assistant, Ted Harris, were hosts to a large group of newspaper and theatre trade men one evening last week at a special preview held at the theatre after the last regular performance.

Jake Millstein, assistant to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's western division manager George Hickey, spent a short time with Manager Ben Fish at the local M-G-M exchange last week. He is on a tour of the Pacific Coast exchanges.

J. B. Munjar, Western sales manager of the Robert Morton Organ Company, spent a day in Seattle this week, en route to his California office.

George Srigley, theatre owner of White Center, announced last week that he plans to invade the Seattle suburban field with a modern new show shop, plans for which are now being drawn. The location of the house has not as yet been made public by Mr. Srigley.

Branch Manager George Ballentine of the local Fox office was host last week to Jack Leo, vice-president of the Fox Corporation, who spent a few hours in Seattle en route to the home office.

C. W. L. Johnson, who has recently been managing the Liberty Theatre here for West Coast Theatres, Inc., left last week for Olympia, where he takes charge of the three Wesco houses in that city. He is succeeded at the Liberty by B. Bernard, formerly at the United Artists Theatre here.

More visitors to the new Film Row this week included A. W. Peccio of Orting, Lon Brown of Snohomish and L. R. Dillingham of Ritzville.

Ned Edris, former manager of the Blue Mouse Theatre in Tacoma, and more recently head of Ed Dolan's Centralia and Chehalis theatres, has returned to John Hamrick's house in Tacoma, reopened recently with a new Vitaphone installation. Edris' position in Centralia has been filled by Cecil Gwynn, formerly at the Liberty Theatre in Olympia and the Rialto Theatre in Bremerton.

Monte Blue, Warner Brothers film star, and Mrs. Blue left Seattle last week after a two weeks' visit with Mrs. Blue's parents in this city..

Des Moines

THE Opera House at Castalia, Iowa, has changed hands. This theatre which was owned by Ed Rodenkirk has been bought by the Community Club of Castalia, is the report turned in to the Des Moines Film Board of Trade.

A new theatre opened at Sanborn, Iowa, last week, when the Princess Theatre there had its opening. The theatre is owned by Fred Kohrberg. The new theatre met at once with popular appeal and the opening nights the S. R. O. sign was out, while the manager was much gratified by the favorable comments made upon the new house. The theatre is equipped with the newest in theatre furnishings and is a model small town theatre. This house was built on the site of the old Princess Theatre which was completely destroyed by fire some time ago.

E. N. Neu will name his theatre at Lake City, Iowa the Earle as the result of a name contest. The opening date of the new theatre has been set as September 15. It is not positive that the theatre will be ready for opening on this date, however.

A new front was built on the Rialto Theatre at Boone, Iowa. This theatre has been closed for sometime while extensive repairs have been made.

Harvey Helscher has just purchased the Crystal Theatre at Earlville, Iowa.

New England

SEYMOUR STONE, one of the most popular salesmen ever in the film district, formerly with Famous and later with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exchanges here, who was transferred to the Kentucky territory of the latter company a year ago, was burned to death when his auto, crowded off the road, overturned and caught fire at Carrolton, Ky., Saturday night.

The remains were brought to his home, 42 Brookview street, Dorchester, Mass., the following day where services were held, attended by delegations from all of the Boston exchanges. Owing to the badly burned condition of the body, the casket was not opened.

He is survived by a mother, six brothers and three sisters.

The Emery Theatre, Providence, R. I., has been renamed the Carlton and has reopened with a policy of one feature, comedy, two news reels, orchestra, organ and five acts of vaudeville.

The Carlton was one of the former Emery circuit theatres purchased a year ago by the Fay Circuit and is one of the city's largest picture theatres.

Knights of Pythias Hall at East Hiram, Me., has been sold by Rankin & Berrtt to H. G. Wytham, who operated Granville Hall at Sebago Lake, Me. A policy of straight pictures will be operated.

Monitor Hall at Hinsdale, N. H., has been purchased by Raymond C. Hildreth from Mrs. W. S. Kimball. The policy of straight pictures will be continued.

The first important move in reorganization of the combined Pathe-Producers exchange in Boston was made this week when a new system of booking was inaugurated. Harry Smith, formerly booker for Producers, will book all of Boston and immediate vicinity and Rhode Island for the combined exchange. William Cuddy, formerly comedy booker for Pathe, will book all of Massachusetts except the Boston territory. Herbert Higgins, formerly Pathe short subject booker, will book all of Vermont and New Hampshire. Miss Sadie Gotz becomes checker for the booking department while Miss Anne Considine and John Rice become chart clerks.

William O'Brien, who covers Maine for Pathe and who has been at the Maine General Hospital for several weeks, has been discharged from the hospital and is back on his territory again.

The Modern Theatre at Providence reopened Labor Day and will play stock.

The Somerville Theatre, one of Arthur Viano's houses, reopened Labor Day with stock and plans to continue stock through the season. Frank McPhee is manager.

Gerald Swaebe, non-theatrical salesman for Pathe, has returned from a business trip to New York City.

Carl Myscharell, who operates the theatre at Harwichport, Mass., drove to Film Row during the week in his brand new LaSalle.

W. J. Morgan, eastern division manager for Pathe-DeMille products, was a visitor to the company's Boston exchange during the week.

Murray Goldstein, booker at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exchange, Boston, is mourning the loss of a couple of perfectly good suits of clothes in an unusual manner. Motoring through New Hampshire on his vacation with Phil Fox, booker at Independent Films, his suit case bounced out of the rumble of his roadster in Ossipee. Another auto following stopped, picked up the suitcase, turned about and disappeared before Goldstein could turn around. Efforts to trail the machine were fruitless.

Opening of the new Community Theatre at Dedham has been set for Sept. 19. Originally it was planned to open Labor Day but delay in completing some of the work resulted in the later date being set. Tom Gotshall of the Bellevue Theatre, Roslindale, will be in general charge of the new theatre.

Miss Rose Blaney, who had been associated with Pathe exchange just two years, passed away at the Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston, following an operation for appendicitis. She was one of the Pathe inspectors.

While on a business trip to the Boston exchange of Consolidated Films, manager Samuel Davidson of the New Haven exchange of the same company had a spare wheel, tire and tube stolen from his Buick.

James Greco, owner and active manager of the Rialto Theatre at Worcester, is confined to his bed by illness. His many friends are looking for a speedy recovery.

Edward Splain, assistant cashier of the Pathe-DeMille exchange, has returned to duty after being seriously ill with the grippe.

"Dick" Sears, New England cameraman for Pathe News, sailed on Friday on the Scythia for the Legion convention in Paris, accompanying the official Massachusetts delegation. He will supply Pathe News with the convention films.

Martin Tuohy of the Fay forces at Providence, who has been on a six week's vacation, returned to his desk in Providence this week.

Arlington Amusement Co., Boston, has incorporated, with 100 shares without par value. Incorporators are Willard T. Carleton, George E. Clark of 455 Columbus avenue, Boston, and Harry W. Conant.

Patrons of the Bristol Theatre, Bristol, Conn., were ordered to leave the theatre by Assistant Manager Rich Tuesday night when the most serious fire in recent years demolished a grain mill and other buildings, separated from the theatre by a 12-foot alleyway. The theatre was emptied of its 1,200 patrons in less than three minutes without disorder or accident.

Messrs. Green and Eilenberg, owners of the Granada, Mystic, Fellsway and other suburban Boston theatres, have returned from a motor trip through Maine.

Prompt work by firemen at a four-alarm blaze in Boston saved Waldron's Casino from fire damage Thursday night about an hour after the close of the program. John Farrell, night watchman at the theatre, discovered the blaze and sounded the first alarm. Three firemen were injured and damage of $75,000 was done to the five-story building adjoining and occupants of three nearby hotels were forced to flee the dense smoke.

William D. Ascough, who has been manager of the Allyn Theatre, Hartford's newest picture theatre, since its opening last sprong, has resgined to enter another field of business in Pennsylvania. Clarance W. Seymour, president of the theatre company, is acting temporarily as manager of the house and Edward A. Sarlin has been named assistant manager. Mr. Sarlin is a recent graduate of the dramatic school at Yale University.

The Empire Theatre at Providence reopened Labor Day with burlesque.

The Laurier, Rialto, Bijou and Stadium Theatres at Woonsocket have signed a new wage scale for another year with the operators, stage hands and theatre employees union. Some concessions are granted in working conditions, otherwise the agreement is the same as was in force during 1925-6.

Donald Wrisley, organist at a New Haven theatre, lost the ends of two fingers and a thumb when the blade of a large paper cutter accidentally dropped on them. The injury may prevent his playing the organ again or of carrying on his work as an expert rifle and revolver instructor.

The State Theatre at Hartford reopened Friday under the management of Mark Strand interests which have taken a long lease of the theatre. A policy of double features has been inaugurated. The theatre seats about 4,000. The opening was in charge of Al Newhall and Moe Silver, in charge of Mark Strand interests in New England. Four changes of program weekly will be operated for the present. J. H. Campbell is managing the theatre.

The Fall River Consolidated Enterprises, which is associated with the Empire and other theatres, has awarded all of the contracts for the construction of a new theatre on South Main Street.

Denver

YEGGS robbed the Rialto theatre of Colorado Springs, Colo., last Monday morning. Their loot amounted to over $1,700.00 The robbers used electric drills to break into the safe which contained the money, a large amount of which was in silver. Colorado Springs police believe the work was done by professional cracksmen who were spending the holidays in Colorado Springs. The Rialto robbery was one of three robberies early on the morning of Labor Day which netted the yeggs about $4,000.00 The Yeggs were met by W. A. McAllister the janitor of the theatre when he came to clean up about 5:15 a.m. They had just finished their work and fled through the back door when meeting McAlister. R. E. Slentz, manager of the Rialto, seems to be having tough luck with robbers of late. It is believed that the same gang robbed the Colorado theatre of Pueblo, Colo., a few weeks ago. Mr. Slentz was manager there at the time and had just been transferred to the Rialto of Colorado Springs, both being Publix theatres.

R. J. Morrison, one of the best known salesmen in the Denver district, having worked the Wyoming territory for First National since August, 1923, has accepted an appointment as manager of the local branch office of Fox Film Corp. Mr. Morrison starts on his new duties September 11th. The appointment was made by Ben Rosenberg, district manager for Fox in Denver and Salt Lake City. Morrison was a member of First National's K. O. Club two times. This is his first experience in the managerial field and his hundreds of friends throughout the exhibitor field wish him the best of success.

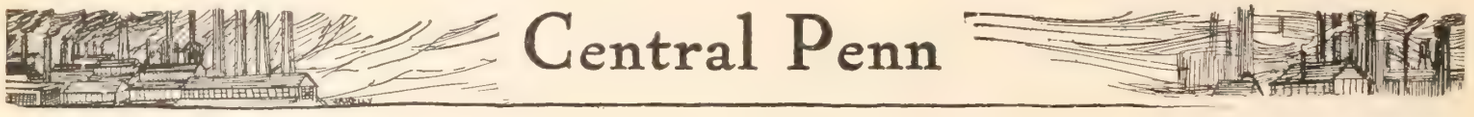
It is rumored that either F & R or the affiliated company, American Amusements, is to erect a new theatre in Fergus Falls, Minn. At present the McCarthy interests operate all theatres there without opposition.

Motion pictures are again being shown at the M. B. A. lodge hall in Rolls, N. D., every Saturday night by Bruce McPherson.

Ben Friedman, head of the American Amusement company, announces that work on the New Broadway theatre in Albert Lea, Minn., is progressing rapidly and it is expected that the theatre will be ready for the opening about the last of the month.

A motion picture theatre has been opened by Albert Johnson and Arthur Oleson in the D. B. S. hall at Askov, Minn. At present pictures will only be shown on Friday evenings, but if business warrants two shows a week will be given.



Plans for the erection of a new motion picture theatre at Mayville, N. D., have been completed by Charles Tolan. Construction will begin soon.

According to H. L. Horton, the new proprietor of the Princess theatre at Lake Preston, S. D., that theatre is to be completely repaired and redecorated ready for the fall season.

The Community theatre at Burke, S. D., has been sold by Hogrefe and Quinn to M. Gehlsen, who recently disposed of the Moon theatre at Spencer, Neb.

Because of poor business the Lyceum theatre at Carpio, N. D., has been forced to close. T. M. Morrissey, operator of the Lyceum at Donnybrook, N. D., plans to reopen the Carpio theatre about the first of October.

George McMillan, who recently lost his lease on the old Gem theatre and Opera House at McVille, N. D., is building a new and up-to-date theatre there. The new building, which will be of fire proof construction and have a seating capacity of 300, is expected to be ready for opening about the 15th of October.

THE bureau of Mines of the United States Department of Commerce on September 6 sent M. F. Leopold, safety engineer, accompanied by William F. Ahbe and 12 motion picture artists, to Oil City, Pa., to film scenes pertaining to the oil industry. The picture to be produced is to be of six reels and will be a complete picturization of the industry from the inception, including the striking of oil in the first well to incidents of the present day.

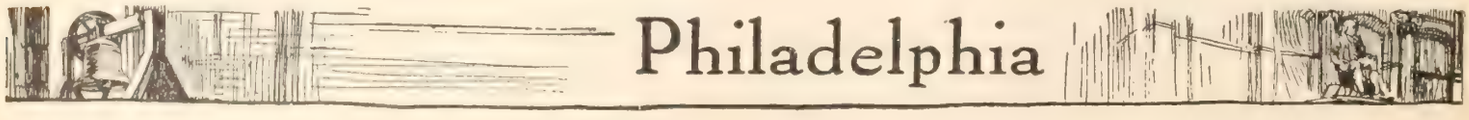
The sale of another small theatre, just reported, is that of the New Ridge photoplay house, Allentown, which has been bought for $25,000 from Alfred Bibighaus by M. H. Young. The new owner has remodeled the house which he reopened on September 1.

Managers of more than a score of theatres in the chain operated throughout the country by the Harris Amusement Company, of Pittsburgh, joined in sending congratulations and floral tributes to M. J. Boyle, manager of the Majestic Theatre, Johnstown, which reopened on Labor Day under Harris control, and which is now known as the Harris-Majestic.

The recent negotiations that brought about an adjustment of the wage dispute between the picture theatres of Harrisburg and the members of the stage hands' and projectionists' union, were conducted in behalf of the employes by Lawrence J. Katz, of Harrisburg, secretary-treasurer of the union for the district consisting of Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, Virginia, West Virginia and District of Columbia, and by the officers of Harrisburg Local, No. 98, who are: Arthur Cobb, president; William S. McKay, Jr., secretary, and W. A. Davis and Horace Gladfelter, business agents.

E. Lyle Trenchard, manager of the Grand theatre, operated by the Stanley interests in Lancaster, spent a two weeks' vacation cruising along the Atlantic coast in a motorboat. He was accompanied by his brother.

Mrs. George W. Vint, wife of the manager of the Grand and Capitol theatres, Harrisburg, accompanied by her daughter, Miss Edith Vint, sailed from New York City on September 3, on board the steamship Laconia, to spend several months with relatives in England.



Captain John Brackbill Peoples, pioneer motion picture exhibitor of Lancaster, is dead at the age of 64. He conducted a number of amusement parks in various parts of Lancaster county, during his young manhood, and later opened a Penny Arcade in what is now the heart of Lancaster's theatre district. He was a warm personal friend of the late motion picture producer, Sigmund Lubin, of Philadelphia, who induced Mr. Peoples to change the arcade into a picture theatre. This he did and the theatre today is the Scenic, one of the largest in Lancaster. Mr. Peoples was manager of the roof garden on the first Woolworth Building, which was constructed by Frank W. Woolworth whose first five and ten cent store business venture was in Lancaster.

George Fry, recently employed at the Crystal ball room, White Rose Park, York, has been appointed doorman at the Strand theatre in that city. He succeeds Chaster Jones, resigned.

Cleon Miller, manager, has returned to the Capitol theatre, Lancaster, following a summer vacation trip.

The funeral of John Harris, 81, pioneer Pittsburgh motion picture exhibitor, and founder of the big Harris Amusement Company, took place in Pittsburgh on September 5, a few hours after the death of Marcus Loew, picture magnate, occurred in Glen Cove, L. I. Burial was in Calvary Cemetery.

The Majestic theatre, Williamsport, announced that beginning the week of September 12 showings will be continuous from 1 p. m. to 11 p. m. on Saturdays and holidays.

Philadelphia

WORD has been received from Brussels of the death of J. Fred Hartman, for many years active in the theatrical and motion picture industry in Philadelphia and for the past few years private secretary for Fred G. Nixon-Nirdlinger, who has large holdings in the Stanley Company. Mr. Hartman, who was 64, left in July with his wife for a tour through Europe and while there was taken ill and died before he could return to this country. Tom Dougherty, former manager of the Jumbo Theatre, will probably succeed Mr. Hartman as Mr. Nirdlinger's private secretary.

Sam Nirdlinger, manager of the Garrick Theatre and a son of Fred G. Nixon-Nirdlinger, has returned to Philadelphia from a trip abroad and has resumed his duties as manager of the Garrick Theatre.

Elaborate preparations are now being made by the Stanley Company of America for the opening of "The King of Kings" at the Aldine on October 3, 1927. The special feature booked for the Stanley Theatre the week of September 26th is the Russian Paveley-Oukrainsky Ballet.

Jack Rosenthal, who for many years has been connected with the Franklin Theatre Company, is now acting as general manager of the affairs of the recently-formed Equity Theatres Corporation, which includes a chain of about 25 houses. Mr. Rosenthal has his office in the Schaff Building, at 15th & Race Sts.

All Ready for S. M. P. E. Fall Meeting

Will Be Held at Lake Placid, N. Y., Sept. 26-29; Interesting Program Announced

PRACTICALLY everything appears to be in readiness for the Fall meeting of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, which will be held September 26-29, 1927, at the Whiteface Inn, located three miles from Lake Placid, N. Y.

Good automobile roads lead right up to the Inn but when driving from the west via Watertown, N. Y., don't fail to take the St. Regis cutoff to Paul Smith's. When driving north through Saratoga, take the Chapel Pond road about twenty miles north of Schroon Lake. This leads through Keane and Keene Valley, past the Cascade Lakes and is about twenty miles shorter than the road via upper Jay; furthermore, it leads through what is considered to be the finest section of the Adirondacks.

Although it is not possible to announce in advance, a detailed program of arrangements with ample diversion will be provided. In the way of entertainment for ladies, Mrs. Theiss will arrange card parties, a boat trip around the lake, a hike, a visit to the well known Lake Placid Club, etc. There will also be dancing.

A special Movietone demonstration will be given Monday evening by the Fox-Case Corporation, and the Society feels that it is extremely fortunate in being able to secure this interesting entertainment.

Those in charge of arrangements are: J. I. Crabtree, chairman; William C. Hubbard and H. T. Cowling, reception; Mrs. J. H. Theiss, hostess; W. C. Kunzman and L. S. Cozzens, registration; Max Meyer, entertainment; J. C. Kroesen, golf and sports; P. A. McGuire, press; G. E. Matthews, bulletin and announcements; C. E. Ives, trade exhibits, and E. I. Sponable will attend to projection.

The program follows:

Monday, September 26; 9:30, Registration; 10:30, Presidential Address by W. B. Cook, Kodascope Libraries, Inc., New York, N. Y.; New Business; Report of Arrangements, Papers, Publicity and Advertising, and Membership Committees; "Report of Progress in the Motion Picture Industry" by Carl E. Egeler, National Lamp Works, Cleveland, Ohio; "An Exhibitor's Problems in 1927" by Eric T. Clarke, Director Eastman Theatre, Rochester, N. Y.; "Micro-Cinematography in Medical Research" by N. Rosenberger, Rockefeller Institute, New York, N. Y.

12:30, Luncheon; 2:00, Papers: "Some Psychological Aspects of Color Motion Pictures" by L. T. Troland, Technicolor Motion Picture Corp., Boston, Mass.; "Some Technical Aspects of the Movietone" by E. I. Sponable, Technical Directors, Fox-Case Corp., New York, N. Y.; "The Requirements of Correct Reproduction in the Recording of Sound Motion Pictures" by A. C. Hardy, Professor of Physics, Massachusetts Institute of Technology; "The Use of Tachometers in Motion Picture Work" by N. M. Trapnell, Weston Electrical Instrument Co., Newark, N. J.; 7:00, Get-Together Dinner; 8:00, Motion picture entertainment in the Wigwam. Ladies and friends are cordially invited. Movietone demonstration. Courtesy Fox-Case Corp., New York, N. Y.; Dancing afterwards.

Tuesday, September 27: 9:30, Papers: "Experiments with Various Light Sources and Panchromatic Emulsions" by A. C. Downes, National Carbon Co., Cleveland, Ohio; Report of Standards and Nomenclature Committee; Announcements of new apparatus by the following manufacturers: Brenkert Light Projection Company, Detroit, Mich.; Dworsky Film Machine Corporation, New York, N. Y.; Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, N. Y.; Edison Lamp Works, Harrison, N. J.; Hortner Electric Company, Cleveland, Ohio; International Projector Corporation, New York, N. Y.; Victor Animatograph Company, New York, N. Y.

The above and other apparatus will be on exhibition during the convention.

Open Forum—questions and suggestions are invited regarding the welfare of the Society and the motion picture industry.

12:30, Luncheon; 2:00, See program of arrangements and bulletin board notices.

Wednesday, September 28: 9:30, Papers: "Why Expert Knowledge and High Grade Intelligence Is Essential in the Projection Room" by F. H. Richardson, Moving Picture World, New York, N. Inquiries and Comments

Present Limits of Screen Illumination

IT may be surprising to learn that the limits of screen illumination with the light sources at present available have by no means been reached and there is still room for improvement in this respect. Whether increased intensity of screen illumination over what is now being obtained can be had in an economical manner is another question which must be answered in the future and the answer, in turn, will depend upon the trend of future construction.

One of the main conditions which necessitated the use of powerful projector systems in the early type of de luxe theatre was the long throw, or projection distance, which varied from 140 feet to 170 feet, often going as high as 200 feet.

Trend Toward Shorter Throws

The trend, in the modern de luxe house, is toward somewhat reduced projection distances and extreme widths; the width in some of the latest theatres being nearly equal to the length.

Since the intensity of screen illumination varies inversely as the square of the projection distance, even a slight reduction in the throw raised the screen intensity considerably so that for the same picture brightness it was not necessary to try to work the projector system to the limit of its capacity.

To offset this favorable condition, however, the level of illumination over the interior of the auditorium began to creep upward since colored illumination effects and a low intensity of general illumination came to be used in these super houses.

Whatever saving was effected by shortening the projection distance, therefore, was lost as a result of this general illumination inside the theatre. There were no tears shed because of this, however, since the patrons, especially under these new conditions, have less trouble in finding vacant seats and occupying them than is the case in an utterly dark house.

As the level of general illumination in the theatre creeps ever upward, some concern is naturally felt over the ability of present projector systems to cope with this condition and offset it by again raising the screen intensity.

Efforts along these lines have already been made with but a limited measure of success for the reason that the persons making the effort did not know exactly what they were doing.

Higher Intensities Possible

There is every indication for believing that screen intensities higher than those now being obtained can be had by using the sources now available, since, especially in the case of the high intensity arc, there are certain discrepancies between intensity values as obtained and those which a study of the problem indicates should be obtained.

Brightness measurements on all three types of light sources now used for the projection of motion pictures have been made and have been published a number of times. According to the tests already made, the Mazda lamp for "movie" projection is credited with a brightness of, roughly, 18,000 candlepower per square inch; the low intensity arc with better than 100,000 c.p. per sq. in.; and an average value of, roughly, 300,000 c.p. per sq. in. has been assigned to the high intensity arc.

The Mazda lamp system of projection, particularly, has been thoroughly tested and developed and the results it is capable of producing upon the screen are quite well known. These tests have verified theory to such an extent that it is possible to accurately calculate what screen illumination can be obtained under any given set of conditions without the necessity of testing the system photometrically.

Now, when this same theory is applied to the low intensity and high intensity arcs, we find that the indicated results are considerably higher than those actually being obtained, which means that either the brightness figures of these two sources are capable of producing screen results better than those ordinarily obtained in practice.

In the table below are given the calculated screen intensities for the various types of light sources and the optic systems used with them. The screen intensities are calculated for projection distances from 70 to 200 feet and are given in foot-candles.

The basis of calculation in each case is that a half size projection lens of the proper focal length is entirely filled with light, so that each system is working at its fullest capacity. It is also assumed that the screen is blank and that the shutter is stationary.

Thus, we see that for a projection distance of 100 feet the upper limit for the high intensity arc with condensers should be 80 foot-candles; for the same lamp with mirror arc, 83 foot-candles; for the low intensity lamp with condensers, 28 foot-candles; for the low intensity lamp with mirror arc, 28 foot-candles; and for Mazda, 4 foot-candles.

Results Not as Shown

Needless to say, the intensities for all the systems except the Mazda lamp are not now being obtained in theatres, so that there seems to be room for some improvement—assuming, of course, that the brightness figures as given out are correct.

There is also the probability that on the shorter projection distances it is not possible to completely fill with light a half size projection lens which would act to lower the extremely high intensities shown for these throws.

This much is true: that the intensities shown for the Mazda lamp check up with what is obtained in practice, so that if other things do not act to prevent it, the same

Wilby-Kennedy Circuit Open New Theatre at Ensley, Ala.

LARGE crowds attended the opening of the Ensley Theatre at Ensley, Ala., on Monday, Aug. 29. Built at a cost of $85,000, this new motion picture house, one of the handsomest suburban theatres in this section, is sponsored by the Wilby-Kennedy interests. No expense was spared to make it an outstanding example of theatre architecture and comfort.

Located at Avenue E and 20th Street, one of the most accessible and convenient spots in Ensley, the theatre is a model of symmetry, of Spanish type, graceful and impressive. A. V. Summers, one of the most popular showmen in the South, is manager.

Forming the southwest corner of the theatre is a huge tower of Spanish-Moorish type in bright colors. The front is finished with a red tile roof and cozy windows with shutters are a part of the projection room. A steel marquee with interchangeable signs on each end and "Ensley Theatre" on the front, with many colored lamps, adds to the attractiveness of the front.

The entrance on 20th Street, which leads to the section reserved for colored patrons, also has its marquee and electric signs. Iridescent lights on the interior of the tower flash off and on, illuminating the tower in first one color and then another.

Three distinct types of lobbies make the entrance to the theatre a most unique one. The first lobby has the box-office and lobby display frames done in highly colored willow. The second lobby is of Moorish design, having a beautiful dome ceiling which is high lighted to give a cool and pleasing effect, while the innermost lobby is the beauty spot of the theatre.

A fountain, which sprays water from a lion's head and with gold fish in the basin, is the center of attraction. Mirrored walls with Spanish designs make the room really beautiful. The auditorium is a revelation of decorative art. The pilasters have been treated in a walnut with stencils in bright colors predominating. The pilasters continue across the ceiling and down the far wall, giving an old Itadian effect of logs placed across the ceiling.

The proscenium arch is made up of a shaft of fruits done in their natural colors, while basket-work of gold forms the grill for the organ. The theatre is well equipped in every department, a feature being the music, which is supplied by one of the latest types of Robert Morton organs. The ventilating system is Arctic Nu-Air.

The Ensley has a seating capacity of 863—688 in the main floor and a colored gallery with 175 seats. The new house is one of a chain of theatres operated in Alabama, Georgia and North Carolina by the Wilby-Kennedy interests. It will draw its patronage from Ensley, Wylam and Fairfield, according to Manager Summers.

Butterfield Schedules 3 for October

The three new Butterfield houses scheduled to open in October are the Ready at Niles, Michigan, the Grand Theatre at Grand Haven, and the State at East Lansing. Opening dates will be announced in the near future. Construction work on Butterfield's Michigan Theatre at Ann Arbor and Capitol Theatre at Flint is progressing rapidly.

Charter Granted for New Virginia Theatre

The State Corporation Commission has granted a charter to the Newport Development Corporation for the erection of a one thousand seat motion picture theatre which will be located in Colonial Place, one of the most attractive residential sections of Norfolk.

The company is headed by W. S. Wilder, now in the motion picture producing business and Tidewater representative of the International Newsreel Corporation. Mr. Wilder, who for more than eighteen years was connected with the Wells Amusement Company in a managerial capacity, is a showman of wide experience. Prior to the sale of the Wells Interests to the Wilmer and Vincent Corporation, he directed the destinies of several of the biggest and best houses in Norfolk, and Richmond. The theatre, which is to be known as the "Newport," will be of most attractive design, according to the plans which have been submitted by a well-known firm of theatre architects. Contracts for the building, which will be of fireproof construction, call for the completion of the structure January 1st, 1928.

Equipment Manufacturers Report Steady Demand

Equipment manufacturers continue to report a steady demand for their product, which serves to prove to the contrary a few rumored remarks forecasting a slight falling off in theatre building and general accessory trade for the 1927-28 season.

A recent communication from the Marr & Colton Organ Company lists eleven sales and installations of their instruments, while the Vallen Electric Company, manufacturers of stage equipment, report that thirty more houses have adopted their curtain controls and other stage devices.

These installations by no means are confined to any one or two sections of the States but are well scattered through the entire country and number some of the most prominent theatres and theatre circuits in the motion picture industry.

Inquiries & Comments

method of calculation should also apply to the other sources of light.

In further support of this, there are strong indications that the high intensity lamp with condensers is not being worked to capacity, since the largest carbon developed so far, for motion picture projection, is the 16 mm. size.

This same lamp when used on the mirror arc principle on 60 amperes, gives considerably less illumination than would be expected of it and at least one manufacturer of this type of lamp claims that it will equal only the 120 ampere size of high intensity lamp with condensers.

Everything considered, there seems to be more than a strong chance of obtaining higher screen intensities with present sources. The question is, will such high illumination intensities be required in the future?

Film Renter: "Undoubtedly the finest mystery drama produced. Abounding in thrills. Ingeniously presented with the aid of astounding photographic effects. No hesitation in recommending this to every class of showman.

Faulkner's Film Review: "Sound mystery drama. Highest form of screen entertainment. Marvelous."

News World: "Amazingly weird mystery play. Extraordinarily able character actor in Sojin. One of the few pictures which really carries out its preliminary promise in thrills."

Manchester Guardian: "Noteworthy. Ranking second to none. Leni a genius for mystery dramas.

Bioscope: "Melodramatic mystery story with popular appeal. Amazingly well acted. Produced with originality and spectacular effects. Will interest any audience."

Cinema: "A combination of direction, photography, staging, acting rarely excelled in any country. Most original, entertaining, mystery melodrama ever made."

Westminster Gazette: "At last a real thriller. Weird, enthralling, masterful production. Acted in a masterful manner."

"Lost at the Front"—First National, Fenway, Boston

Traveler: "A war comedy that is really entirely different. . . . Kept the audience in an uproar. Lively entertainment."

Advertiser: "Both stars are irresistibly funny. The film keeps on its steady course of hilarious inanity and is immensely mirth-provoking. It is absurd, impossible —and funny."

Post: "Something different and novel in war comedies. The laughs are plentiful, it has a real plot and the locale is new. Side-splitting episodes. Murray and Sidney make a comical team. From the amount of laughs, the picture could be called a military 'McFadden's Flats.'"

Globe: "In 'Lost at the Front,' the funny war photoplay, the laughs are plentiful, it has a good plot and boasts two popular comedians. Audience delighted."

American: "Fulfils every comedy requirement. The laughs are hysterical."

World: "An effective, well-acted, interesting picture. . . . Chaney's portrayal of the half-baked brain struggling for comprehension but falling back into its slough of hopeless stupidity and misery is one of the best things he has done."

Telegraph: "Excellent acting. Melodrama will please Chaney enthusiasts."

News: "Something interesting in character study. . . . a noteworthy piece of filmery."

Journal: "The role of Sergei, a rural derelict with a hare-lip, gives Lon Chaney an excellent vehicle for his unique talent. Barbara Bedford gives a thrilling performance as a patriotic Russian countess. The picture in general shows every evidence of wise direction. Suspense in many of the major situations is unusually well maintained."

Graphic: "Chaney's brilliant flair for make-up has good expression in the character Sergei. . . . Careful directing and good acting."

Mirror: "Such are the strange and unique talents of Lon Chaney that he must have an unusual story in order to display them. Chaney is a Russian peasant—dull, animal-like. Barbara Bedford is lovely. Complete the comment with credit to Charles Puffy, Ricardo Cortez and Mack Swain."

"Twelve Miles Out" — M-G-M, Boston

Globe: "Stirring screen story of love and strife. Plenty of love interest, but is in the main a tale of bloodthirsty adventure. . . . The picture has much to commend it, and is a praiseworthy attempt to show the workings of the rum-running profession. Unless one sees this thrilling picture with its scenes of lawlessness, its splendid acting and remarkable cast, one cannot realize fully why John Gilbert and Ernest Torrence are rated so high as red-blooded actors."

American: "Much better, though quite different from original. . . . During its six or seven lawless though lively chapters John Gilbert and Ernest Torrence rag each other with the gay abandon of a knockout comedy team, and near the finish fall to fighting with the fierceness of a pair of alley cats. In a word, 'Twelve Miles Out' is highly satisfactory entertainment. . . . You might go so far as to call it an 'epic' of the bootlegger."

Post: "Full of action and interest."

Herald: "This photoplay is built of solid plot substance. . . . A good rollicking drama. It starts off merrily and grows gracefully. . . ."

Traveler: "Fast and furious. . . . John Gilbert has another good motion picture to his credit. . . . Uses up several reels. These reels are amusing. Gilbert is delightful. . . . Torrence gives another of his perfect character studies. Joan Crawford plays with sincerity and warmth. The titles by Joe Farnum are riotous."

"Adam and Evil"—M-G-M, Los Angeles

Times: "'Adam and Evil,' at the Capitol, has scored beyond the degree expected of an intimate comedy. Lest that be thought equivocal praise, let it be known that it is a hit of the first water. The laughter heard in the theatre has been far from intimate—it has been cyclonic. Story, direction, acting and titles are united with such success that it is difficult to place one element ahead of the rest. Certain it is that the combination of Lew Cody and Aileen Pringle in domestic farce is one of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's happiest inspirations, and the individual responsible for the idea should be singled out to lead the honor roll at the studio."

"Hard-Boiled Haggerty"—First National, Strand, New York

Journal: "The flying scenes are among the best that the screen has ever given us. Molly O'Day is worth the price of admission, and is destined to be one of the screen's finest."

Telegraph: "Good 'air stuff,' as the thrilling battles above the clouds have come to be known."

Sun: "Will hold the interest of an audience that worships Mr. Sills."

"The Devil's Saddle"—First National, Globe Theatre, Philadelphia

Evening Ledger: "Thrilling tale of early West. More substantial than most movie fare of type."

Daily News: "If you like 'westerns' don't miss Maynard in 'The Devil's Saddle.' Maynard does some very remarkable riding. Real Indians lend realistic atmosphere."

Inquirer: "Ken Maynard, one of most daring of western stars, is seen to splendid advantage. Exciting doings in which cowboys and Indians clash."

Morning Ledger: "Thrilling tale. Does not depend on conventional. Maynard has role of fearless cowboy."

"Lonesome Ladies"—First National, Uptown Theatre, Los Angeles

Record: "Story that most married people will chuckle over long after they have seen screen depiction of it. . . . Stone's acting excellent. Miss Nilsson plays wife to perfection."

Herald: "One of most entertaining domestic comedies local screen has presented. Not only humorous, but very appealing."

Examiner: "Good entertainment. Effective theme. Miss Nilsson and Stone team that is universally popular."

"The Life of Riley"—First National, Loew's State Theatre, Los Angeles

Record: "Wow! It's a Greater, Greater Movie Season! I'll wager right here that plaster is cracked in Loew's from all laughter caused by team of Sidney and Murray. . . . If aching of sides and slapping of unknown persons in front of one is any criterion of what is a success, then this comic fun has all of past efforts of this pair surpassed in million ways."

News: "If you were one who thought 'McFadden's Flats' was just about the funniest comedy that Murray has ever appeared in, you're wrong. "The Life of Riley" is funniest picture Loew's State has presented in some time. . . . When we say laugh, we mean it, and the finest thing about the picture is that, in spite of the fact that you laugh so hard you perspire and cry, Murray makes you cry."

Times: "Heigh-ho, what fun! . . . It's all too funny for words; and if you happen to be squeamish about looking at it, you can close your eyes and mutter under your breath to your heart's content, for gentleman to your right is howling with such unrestrained laughter that no one will hear you, anyway. . . . Production excellent from technical standpoint."

"Lonesome Ladies"—First National, Karlton Theatre, Philadelphia

Record: "Anna Q. Nilsson and Lewis Stone engross attention in most interesting domestic comedy. Stone and Miss Nilsson excellently cast. Jane Winton plays role of the 'vamp' to perfection."

Morning Ledger: "Mirthful, rapid and sure-fire film of love and marriage in this hectic age. Anna Q. Nilsson as radiant as always, and as beautiful. Stone's performance highlight of story."

Inquirer: "Thread of humor sustains interest in scrambled skein of marriage relations in 'Lonesome Ladies.' Stone and Miss Nilsson well adapted to their roles."

"The Cat and the Canary"—Universal, Colony Theatre, New York City

Times: "Play has been turned into one of finest examples of motion picture art. There are scenes in this piece that are amazing. . . This is the first time that mystery melodrama has been lifted into realms of art."

Herald-Tribune: "Leni has directed it with proper feeling for suspense and spooky atmosphere, thereby turning work into interesting and effective film play, full of correct ingredients of its school."

World: "Leni has done extraordinary piece of filming. Artfully approached, brilliantly photographed, and its sequences dealing with murderous hands, shadowed bookcases which swallow up their victims, and ghastly movements in moonlight, come off with effect of genuine terror."

Daily Mirror: "Crackerjack mystery movie. Sweeps along gathering momentum and causing bigger and greater creeps, cold shivers and shriek urges. . . . Miss La Plante varies tense restraint with galloping terror that is most effective."

Telegram: "Frank thriller and an excellent one. . . . Colony swell picture and best stage menu on Broadway."

Sun: "Leni's pictorial treatment of lights and shadows and fantastic dissolves raises picture to distinctive realms. . . . Undoubtedly it is most successful adaptation of mystry play that screen has yet offered."

Morning Telegraph: "Director and cameramen have made picture remarkable, and far superior to 'The Bat,' or, for that matter, any other mystery film recalled at moment."

Poor Projection Is Too Expensive

EVERY Simplex Projector is built to meet the exacting requirements of the finest theatres in the world. Finishings and mountings may vary, but fundamentally there is only one Simplex. Its character cannot change. The standards of excellence which have made the Simplex the representative of engineering progress and efficiency in its field are necessarily built into every projector. Now as always, the Simplex gives to every theatre the most economical and the finest projection possible.

"If you could just figure out exactly how much poor projection costs the average theatre, you wouldn't have to say anything more about the advantages of good projection."

This suggestion was made by a theatre owner who ten months ago took over two theatres that hadn't paid a real profit in years, and put them on an unusually good paying basis. "The fact is," he continued, "the public has learned how good projection improves the show and it will not patronize a theatre that makes mediocre presentations. The trend of the moving picture business is proof of that. You can figure the cost of repairs and replacements, but there is no way of estimating in advance just how much business you are losing by presenting pictures in a manner that does not compare favorably with average standards."

There is no question about it. Every successful theatre owner today is giving very careful attention to projection---for good projection is only good business. If your projection is below standard make the necessary improvements now, whether it necessitates installing new projectors or merely replacing worn parts. But profit from the experience of hundreds of other exhibitors and buy a tried and proven machine, or buy replacement parts from the manufacturer of your present machine. You'll save money in the long run.

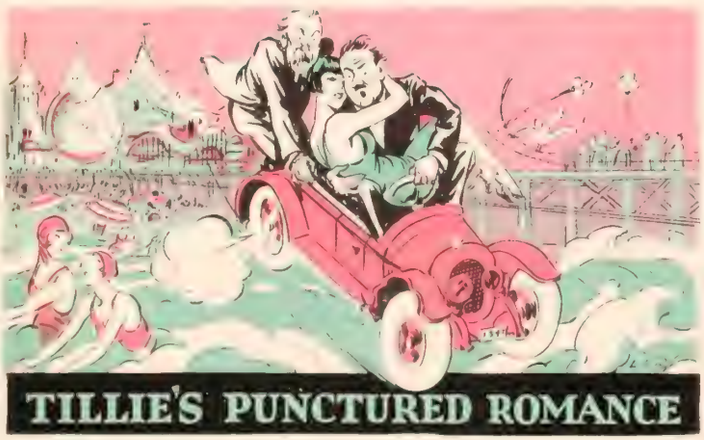
what is a special to-day?



¶ Is it anything without a well-known star in it? Many companies still seem to think so, and add insult to injury by labeling groups of obscure players "all-star casts." Not Paramount! When we say "special", we speak Webster's language. "Special: distinguished by some unusual quality; uncommon; extraordinary; marked by superior excellence, importance, power." ¶ Casts must be super-fine. Witness "Beau Geste"—Ronald Colman, Noah Beery, Alice Joyce, Mary Brian, Victor McLaglan, William Powell and others. Look at what is a special to-day?

"Way of all Flesh"—Emil Jannings, Belle Bennett, Phyllis Haver. "Rough Riders"—Charles Farrell, Noah Beery, Mary Astor, George Bancroft. "Underworld"—George Bancroft, Clive Brook, Evelyn Brent, Larry Semon. ¶ And even more! Paramount specials must be based upon powerful ideas keyed to the spirit of modern times and readily exploitable! "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," with world sales as a novel of 600,000. "Metropolis," startling glimpse of tomorrow's universe. "Beau Sabreur," sequel to "Beau Geste," a "natural." "Chang," like no picture ever made and already established as a box office sensation. "Jesse James," Fred Thomson as the most romantic outlaw in

Population and Pictures

No Need of Worry About Saturation Points in Picture Patronage

By William A. Johnston

IN all the discussions about the future of the industry too little attention is paid to the march of population. Those who think that the increase of possible picture patrons is limited, in some mysterious way, are due for a rude awakening.

The only limits that can be placed will come from the mistakes of the industry itself; the failure to create new patronage by what we do or fail to do—not from any decrease in numbers of people.

* * * *

Decrease?

Listen to this from a noted sociologist, Edward Alsworth Ross, of the University of Wisconsin, writing in the September Century Magazine:

"During the last sixteen years we have registered in this country about forty-one million births and twenty-two million deaths. We can rapidly grow without immigration, for we fill each year nearly twice as many cradles as coffins!"

If immigration figures were added, this two-to-one ratio would, of course, be stepped up considerably.

* * * *

But in any view of the long future, the whole world must be considered as the field of the motion picture; in fact, of the American motion picture itself, because our foreign market is rapidly broadening and will continue to broaden, if we deliver the goods.

Taking the world view, Prof. Ross reaches these amazing conclusions:

"In the pre-war period mankind increased at a rate which would double it in sixty years. In other words, as many members may be added to the human family from 1910 to 1970 as in all the 1500 to 2000 generations during which our race has been spreading over this planet. Each day about 100,000 die and 150,000 are born. Each sun sets on 50,000 more. Certainly never before in the life of our race were births 50 per cent above deaths. For this we have to thank the recent developments which have beaten off famine and pestilence.

"Doubling in sixty years means that the population will have increased tenfold in two centuries and one hundredfold in four centuries. At this rate even if humanity's food problem were solved once and for all by the fall of the nitrogen of the atmosphere in the form of a constant rain of manna, there would be only a square yard of arable land to a person a thousand years hence.

"At a date no more distant from us than is the capture of Jerusalem by the Crusaders, humanity would be justified in hanging out on our planet the sign Standing Room Only!"

* * * *

We leave to the sociologists the discussion as to how this tremendous mass of people is to be fed, and turn to our own problem.

Jesse L. Lasky, speaking the other day in Los Angeles, declared that attendance at picture houses has increased 22 to 25 per cent in the first six months of 1927.

This is highly encouraging. It means, among other things, that a new generation of picturegoers is beginning to make itself felt. It also must mean that business, stimulated by the building of large theatres in

THE election of Nicholas M. Schenck to the Presidency of Loew's and M-G-M was a foregone conclusion. For several years he has been in active executive charge of these two corporations. One of the ablest men in the industry, Mr. Schenck does his work in a very effective manner. He does not ballyhoo himself; is not a publicity seeker; prefers to let results speak for themselves and for him. And they speak.

As the successor to Marcus Loew, universally beloved and universally mourned, Mr. Schenck carries forward the direction of the big Loew interests on the foundations laid broad and deep by their creator.

HAL ROACH takes an optimistic view of the short subject-presentation situation. In an interview with THE NEWS this week, he said:

"When the craze for presentation first swept across the country several people asked me what would become of the short comedies, since the theatres were using stage acts to the exclusion of short comedies. I told them, and I believed it firmly at the time, that I thought it was the best thing for the short comedies that ever happened, because I felt that the more the exhibitor learned to talk about other features on his program besides the feature picture the more he would consider the value of other things besides the feature picture as a drawing attraction.

"Presentation has not hurt the short comedy business. Indeed, there are many cases where it has helped it. Not long since I received a visit from an executive of a large theatre circuit which has been building up the stage end of the program until it became top heavy. His organization is finding itself up against the difficulty of getting sufficient talent for the shows which are circuited. He asked me what kind of product I was making for the coming season, because he had about decided to cut his stage shows in half, thus reducing production costs and requiring only half the amount of talent he formerly needed, and devoting the time thus cut out of the stage number to a short comedy."

FROM Hollywood comes the report that Famous Players has bought the Clara Bow contract from B. P. Schulberg for $100,000. The star's salary, under the new arrangement, is said to be $1,500 a week.

GENERAL JAMES G. HARBORD, president of the Radio Corporation of America, at a luncheon attended by leading radio distributors at the Mayfair Hotel, St. Louis, on September 12 promised that within a very short time, comparatively speaking, it will be possible to broadcast talking movies by means of radio.

General Harbord said that the transmission of radio movies will follow the perfection of radio technique in transmitting photographs through space, the development of television with telephone service and the synchronization of music and voice with screen pantomime.

"Remarkable progress has been made in the perfection of a new system of synchronizing sight with sound on the motion picture screen," General Harbord continued. "The Radio Corporation of America is now making plans to develop this system on a commercial basis.

"The new system of employing the technique of radio reproduction, brings nearer the day also when current personalities will not only be shown on the screen but also be heard by the audience.. The picture of an important event will be accompanied by all the stirring sounds that emanate from a great mass of people—a parade will be shown with the music of the bands and the cheering of the spectators."

ANNOUNCEMENT by Major Edward Bowes, managing director of the Capitol theatre, New York, that following the current engagement of "The Big Parade," there would be a weekly feature of the revue type at the Capitol brings official confirmation of reports that another of the big Broadway cinemas is to adopt the vaudeville style of presentation.

It is plain from the announcement that the Capitol, hitherto devoting its presentation program to the more classical forms of music and the dance, is to incline strongly in the direction of "jazz" if it does not eventually adopt it entirely, for the first revue offering is to be called "Oddities" and will have as its principal Pat Rooney, Marion Bent and Pat Rooney III, for years vaudeville headliners specializing in comedy, songs and clog dancing.

THE Capitol orchestra under the direction of David Mendoza, the ballet corps and singing ensemble is to be retained, according to the announcement. "The high principles of public entertainment will be kept intact and used as the basis of a more elaborate and brilliant type of program," the announcement stated.

This policy change on the part of the Capitol comes at a time when there is more or less widespread discussion as to the popular appeal of the revue style of presentation in conjunction with pictures. Consequently it must be considered an authoritative and weighty vote in favor of stage revues, particularly as regards their appeal to the public, for Major Bowes states that the new policy is for the purpose of injecting "a popular element of entertainment."

The Capitol presentations will employ a stage band, specially organized for the presentation of jazz and popular music, specialty artists appearing as guest performers in each revue, the Chester Hale girls and a chorus of voices.

Early in the year the Capitol's orchestra was enlarged to full symphony strength, or thereabouts, and with this added instrumental resources the Capitol set itself more firmly than ever in the direction of standard musical compositions. A well established clientele, believed by that time to be well acquainted with some of the higher forms of music, was thought to be ready for another forward step in the direction of the classical. The divertissements featuring the Chester Hale girls, a pony ballet, and popular songs rendered by one or more of the vocal artists of the theatre, were about the only concessions to the reputed avid taste of the patrons for a dash of vaudeville with their pictures.

That, however, evidently has not proved sufficient to the demand for the popular element of entertainment.

WITH the Capitol presenting revues, there remains among the weekly change thatres on Broadway only one with what might be called a "vaudevilleless policy," this being the recently reopened Colony, of which Hugo Riesenfeld is the managing director.

Distinctive scenes and locations, which may give some idea of the beauty in the Tiffany production of "Once and Forever"

The Dempsey-Tunney fight was one reason this First National comedy triumvirate came eastward. Another was that they have business in New York. They are Producer C. C. Burr, Johnny Hines and director Charles Hines

Babe Ruth is doing some of his slugging with Harold Lloyd now. He was signed for a role in the latter's new comedy for Paramount and while the Yanks are in New York both have been busy making scenes for the forthcoming film. In fact, Harold was so occupied with his work that he changed his mind about seeing his friends, Tunney and Dempsey, fight

AN interesting social note from Paris, as told in a copyrighted dispatch to The New York Times, reveals that Ben Blumenthal, of the Export and Import Film Co., gave a tea in honor of Mayor Walker and Mrs. Walker the other day. The Prefect of the Paris police and Mme. Chiappe were present.

The Mayor's prowess as a dancer was demonstrated at the tea so successfully that when he tripped the light fantastic toe with Barbara Blumenthal, young daughter of his host, other couples withdrew and amid loud applause left the floor to the Mayor and his partner.

"Maybe I will need a job as 'hoofer' after the next election," The Times quotes the Mayor as saying.

But his legion of friends in the picture business don't think he will. They believe he will go right on being Mayor for a second term.

WITH the great increase in the number of college students since the War, it would seem to be about time to revise the Hollywood idea of college pictures. They are all cut out of the same pattern.

On this point, the New York World made these remarks editorially recently: "The movies, of late, seem to have turned unanimously to the campus as a background for their stories. One after another the student films appear, bearing such titles as 'College,' 'The Drop Kick,' 'One Minute to Play,' and so on. Moreover, they all follow pretty much the same pattern, which is the same pattern as the one invented by Burt L. Standish for the adventures of Frank Merriwell at Yale. That is, there is the admirable hero, the dissolute villain, later to be reclaimed by the magic of a good manly handshake; the girl, the plot, the hoaxes at the expense of the freshmen, and, of course, the inevitable football game or race."

WHERE are the independent press agents of yesterday? A friend brought it to our attention the other day: "What are they doing now?" he said. "Reichenbach with his spectacular campaigns, Bert Adler with his producers, Robert Edgar Long with his stars, Pete Smith with his score of Hollywood clients, Fred Baer with his theatre accounts in and around New York, Harry Wilson on the Coast, Capt. Harry Rice in Chicago, Merritt Crawford and Herman Holland in New York? Some of these men had staffs of assistants and elaborate offices. Today almost all are in jobs. Some are out of the business." "Times change and men change with them," in the words of the old Latin proverb.

ACCORDING to statistics compiled by a Los Angeles newspaper, extras used in the studios last month were: Paramount, 291; F B O, 66; Fox, 341; M-G-M, 11; United Artists, 106; Universal, 253; Warner, 181. Total, 1,249. There are 15,000 extras registered with the Central Casting Bureau.

WE have remarked editorially, on more than one occasion, that there is too little recognition by this industry of its advertising men. In some quarters this has amounted to reducing the advertising man to a rubber stamp, which is all wrong, because advertising is a profession and it requires expert knowledge.

Of course, any man on the street can tell you exactly how to run a publication, whether it be a trade paper or a newspaper. Everybody also thinks he knows all about advertising, how it should be written and where it should be placed.

But the fact remains that successful advertising men are not made overnight. Neither does it follow that because a man has been and is a successful executive in some other branch of the industry he is qualified as an advertising expert.

It seems to us that advertising managers should be advertising managers in fact as well as in name. There is plenty of ability; but it is not being given the chance to function properly, except in a few instances.

Population and Pictures

By Wm. A. Johnston

crowded centers of population, has taken a leap forward.

But more important than either of these factors is this: the saturation point in patronage has not been reached, or anywhere near it. On the contrary, looking at Prof. Ross' figures and remembering that entertainment is a vital necessity, it is difficult to see how the saturation point can ever be reached.

We need have no worry about saturation points. Nor need anybody in the industry trouble himself about what's going to happen a thousand years hence.

The opportunity for the motion picture, here and now, through the mere increase in population, if nothing else, is unlimited. All we have to do is to live up to the opportunity.

F. & R. Affiliate With Publix, Paramount

Join Working Agreement for Twenty-five-Year Period in Minneapolis Territory

AFTER almost a year of rumors, the authenticity of which had for the most part been denied, Finkelstein and Rubin officials announced in Minneapolis last week their affiliation with Publix and Paramount.

M. L. Finkelstein in making the story public referred to it as an agreement of "marriage" of the firms. Under the terms the pact is for twenty-five years, and binds the producers to give F. & R. first call on all of their product in the Northwest. It also assures Paramount a ready market for their pictures in the 135 F. & R. theatres.

Another item in the terms of agreement, gives F. & R. the operation of the Minneapolis Theatre, now in construction at Ninth Street and La Salle Avenue, in Minneapolis. This is a $2,000,000 house, and was being built as a Publix Theatre, having been leased to Famous Players-Lasky by the Minneapolis Theatre Corporation on a twenty-five-year basis involving a total rental of $4,000,000.

Edward R. Ruben, in discussing the merger, said:

"This deal, which we have just concluded, is similar to deals that have been made in the south, on the west coast, and in other sections of the country. It will mean that, being assured of a constant source of films for our theatres, we can go ahead with our building program, which will mean new theatres throughout our circuit.

"These theatres, the first of their type to be constructed in the northwest, will be the last word in playhouse construction, and will be period in design, mainly French, Spanish, Moorish and near Eastern."

The first of these new theatres to be opened in the northwest will be The Chateau, at Rochester, Minn. This house, which will be ready for business about October 1, is modeled after a fourteenth century French chateau.

Finkelstein and Ruben operates its 135 theatres in 30 cities located in Minnesota, Wisconsin, and North Dakota, including 14 theatres in Minneapolis and 18 in St. Paul.

The Minneapolis, the new Publix Theatre, will probably be opened in the Spring. All the concrete has been poured and all the steel has been placed in position.

Defu Producing; Two Films Finished

DEFU PICTURES, producing organization of the First National-Deutsche Film Union consolidation, has officially announced ten of its 15 films to be produced for the coming season. In addition, there will be five specials, the title of which are undecided upon. Two pictures have already been finished. The Defu program is being made under the supervision of Friederich Zelnik at the Staaker Studios.

The finished pictures are "Alpine Tragedy" and "Dancing Vienna." The first, directed by Robert Land has Lucy Doraine and Wladimir Gaidarow. The second, featuring Lya Mara and Ben Lyon, and a sequel to "The Blue Danube," was directed by Mr. elnik. In production or cutting rooms are: "The Ramper," in which Max Reichman is directing Paul Wegener and Mary Johnson; "Train de Luxe," by Arthur Harment, Mr. Schoenfelder directing; and "Fremont, Jr. and Rissler, Sr." by Alphonse Daudet, being produced by A. W. Sandberg with Lucy Doraine and Karina Bell in the leading roles.

Other pictures which go into work soon include: "Die Kaiserin," by Leo Fall, which Mr. Zelnik will direct with Lya Mara starring; "Manage," by Dr. Walter Angel, to be directed by R. W. Sandberg; "Frau Sorge," from Sudermann's play, to feature Mary Carr; and "The Beaver Coat" and "Therese Raquin" by Emil Zola.

A. S. C. Roster Includes More Than 250 Names

The largest assembling of motion picture cameramen in the history of the industry took place Tuesday night, September 6, in the auditorium of the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce, when 130 active operatives were initiated into the American Society of Cinematographers.

The occasion was a banquet tendered the new members by the A. S. C., and was significant in that it marked the beginning of an epoch wherein this organization, because of the recent influx of new members, is able to function as a 100 per cent body, the new roster representing practically the entire membership of the industry.

Daniel B. Clark, president of the A. S. C., administered the obligation to the assemblage, including the old guard, and the new members were instructed in the Society's code of ethics and ritual by the three vice-presidents, John W. Boyle, Victor Milner, and Frank B. Good.

Moving Picture Club to Choose Home Site Sept. 28

Al Lichtman, temporary president of the Moving Picture Club of New York, has called a meeting of the organizers and charter members of the club for Wednesday evening, September 28, at 7 o'clock, at the Astor Hotel. This meeting is called for the purpose of taking definite action on a real estate proposition looking toward a home for the new club. Four of them have been under consideration by the real estate committee. It will be up to the charter members to decide between the various propositions; their time limit for charter members is September 30th.

Tax Revision Hearings Will Begin October 31

HEARINGS on the proposed tax revision bill to be enacted at the next session of Congress will begin October 31, it has been announced by the Ways and Means Committee of the House, Washington, D. C. In all probability, admission taxes will be considered at the session on November 10, when miscellaneous taxes are listed.

The schedule of hearings calls for general statements October 31 and November 1, and hearings on the corporation income tax November 2, individual income tax November 3, Board of Tax Appeals and general administrative features November 4 and 5, excise and stamp taxes November 7, estate tax November 8 and 9, and miscellaneous taxes November 10. The hearings will be in the committee's own room in the House Office Building.

Persons desiring to be heard, it is announced, should apply to the clerk of the committee at least one day prior to the date of the hearing in order to be assigned time on the calendar for that day. Briefs may be submitted in lieu of oral testimony, or to augment oral arguments, it is stated.

European Cities Plan 160 New Picture Theatres

About 160 new theatres with a total seating capacity of 200,000, are said to be planned by various European cities, according to information received at the Motion Picture Section of the Department of Commerce, Washington, D. C.

Great Britain and Germany, in particular, are rapidly building. German cities plan about 80 new houses; Great Britain proposes to construct 20 theatres, with a capacity of 50,000 seats. The De Luxe type of theatre is supplanting the smaller house, too. The average seating of the British houses will be 2,500, and some will have as many as 3,500 seats.

Sweden will build about 16 theatres this year, Roumania 11 and Austria about ten. Three of the Roumanian theatres are planned for Bucharest, the capital, each theatre to seat over 1,000. Four are expected to go up in Transylvania, and the remainder will be scattered in other Roumanian sections. Austrian provincial authorities have granted licenses for eight houses and three more are under advisement.

Finland will construct four new thatres in 1927, each seating around 1,500 people.

Universal Opens Rivoli in Indianapolis

Universal opened its new Rivoli Theatre, at Tenth and Dearborn Streets, Indianapolis, recently, with "Painting the Town." This is the first of a string of houses Universal will build in this territory, according to an announcement made some time ago by Dan Michalove, general manager of the "U" chain.

The Rivoli costs approximately $300,000 and seats 1,500. It was designed by H. Z. Dietz. W. W. Grist, Jr., formerly manager of Universal's Broadway Strand, Detroit, has been assigned to this house.

The Most Useful Book

WE ARE PUBLISHING IN OCTOBER WHAT, FROM MY EXPERIENCE AT AN EDITOR'S DESK, I BELIEVE TO BE THE MOST USEFUL BOOK EVER PUT OUT IN THIS FIELD.

I refer to "Motion Picture News' Booking Guide and Studio Directory."

Heretofore the volume has been well known as "The Booking Guide." Thousands of exhibitors use it constantly. Now, "The Studio Directory" has been added.

The new volume can and will be used, every week, by most every exhibitor and every newspaper that carries a photoplay department.

* * * *

Here is its usefulness:

The exhibitor or photoplay editor consults an index; finds any picture released in the past six months; gets a synopsis of the story, the names of the director and cast, and reference to further material in the files of his Motion Picture News.

He turns to another index and is directed to the biographies of the director and members of the cast.

He has, in other words, all the material he needs to prepare for any newspaper a story of popular and local interest.

Press sheets may be lost or not easily at hand; the picture may arrive unexpectedly. But whatever the situation the volume is constantly at hand to give, instantly, all the publicity material any picture needs.

This volume is an ever ready, every week Publicity Encyclopaedia on current motion pictures.

It is the constant press agent of pictures and people.

It is the Who's Who of motion picture publicity.

* * * *

The number of theatres equipped to use press sheets and other advertising service is somewhat limited.

But there are few exhibitors who cannot use the "Booking Guide and Studio Directory," and few newspapers who cannot use a reader from its pages.

President Attends Fox Washington Opening

New House Dedicated Before Brilliant Assemblage with Splendid Program

A GATHERING of notables such as never before has been present at the opening of a theatre in the United States witnessed the formal dedication Monday night, September 19, of the new Fox Theatre in the National Press Building, Washington.

President and Mrs. Coolidge, members of the Cabinet and high officials of the Government service, leading members of the diplomatic corps, society leaders, and several hundred members of the National Press Club and their guests comprised the audience before which the initial performance was presented.

The initial offering by Roxy, who led the orchestra during the "Glow Worm" scene, was received with enthusiasm, although the film, "Paid to Love," did not rouse the local critics to cheers, but, anyway, the performance, excellent though it was, proved secondary to the theatre itself. Nothing has ever been seen in Washington to parallel the Fox Theatre. And a great tribute must be paid to those in charge of the house —so far as could be seen, absolutely nothing remained to be done, the last brushful of paint had been applied, the last electric bulb was in its socket, the last piece of furniture was in its place, when the doors were opened.

A description of the house is impossible for a newspaper man who was one of the vast audience. One writer who has conversed with the head of nearly every reigning house in Europe, and some no longer reigning, declared that it was like a palace, but added that he had seen no European palace anywhere nearly as gorgeous.

Upon entering the house, one is on the level of the loge seats. An oval well in the center of the foyer, over which are hung magnificent chandeliers, is broken by two grand staircases leading downward to the orchestra floor, while other staircases on the sides lead upward to the mezzanine and balcony floors, the latter way, way up, yet affording from every seat a clear view not only of the stage, but of the orchestra pit, as well, with its elevator which carries the entire orchestra of 50 pieces, the grand organ, and the orchestra leader.

The color scheme of the house is red, the floor being carpeted and the furniture covered in that color. Except for a few crystal chandeliers, the electric fixtures are concealed in mammoth yellow shades, which are many feet in length, vertically. Lounges and smoking rooms are provided on every floor for both men and women. The projection room, as the rest of the theatre, is the last word in equipment.

If the comment of the first-night audience is any criterion, both Roxy and William Fox, who came to Washington for the opening, cannot but be well pleased with the admiration which their latest effort in theatre building has excited.

The presidential party occupied the first box in the house on the left, facing the stage. The national colors and the presidential flag adorned the box.

Notables included in the audience were: The President and Mrs. Coolidge; the Ambassador of Argentina and Mme. Pueyrredon; Dr. Herman Velarde, the Ambassador of Peru; the Ambassador of Mexico and Senora de Tellez; the Ambassador of France and Mme. Claudel; the Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Peter; the Minister of Finland; the Minister of Honduras and Senora de Bogran; the Minister of Egypt and Mme. Samy Pasha; Mr. Simeon Radeff, Minister of Bulgaria, and Mme. Radewa; the Minister of Venezuela and Senora de Grisanti; the Minister of Persia; the Minister of the Dominion of Canada and Mrs. Massey; the Minister of Salvador and Senora de Lima; Robert Silvercruys, Belgian Charge d'Affaires; Senor Don Mariano de Amoedo, Charge d'Affaires of Spain; Senor Don Juan Barberis, Charge d'Affaires of Ecuador; Charge d'Affaires of Paraguay and Mme. Ranirez; Mr. Alexis H. G. O. Lundh, Charge d'Affaires of Norway; the Charge d'Affaires of Bolivia and Senora de la Barra; the Charge d'Affaires of Czechoslovakia and Mme. Lipa; Dr. Mikas Bagdonas, Charge d'Affaires of Lithuania; Mr. Raoul Lizaire, Charge d'Affaires of Haiti; Mr. and Mrs. Thigenori Togo, Japanese Legation; Mr. Michael Wright, Third Secretary, Embassy of Great Britain; Mr. and Mrs. Bo Hasselrot, Attaché, Swedish Legation; Mr. and Mrs. Juan B. Chevalier, Secretary, Panama Legation and Mrs. Jose M. Coronado, First Secretary of Colombian Legation.

The Cabinet was represented by Secretary of War Dwight F. Davis, Attorney-General John G. Sargent, Postmaster General Harry Stewart New, Secretary of Navy Curtis Dwight Wilbur, Secretary of Interior Hubert Work, Secretary of Agriculture William Marion Jardine, Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Labor James John Davis.

The Fox official delegation, headed by Mr. and Mrs. William Fox and W. R. Sheehan, included the following: John Zanft, Saul E. Rogers, James R. Grainger, Truman Talley, and John J. Spurgeon.

Universal Pictures Corp. Declares Dividend

FBO Not Considering Any Merger, Declares Joseph P. Kennedy

A SWEEPING denial that FBO is or has been considering any merger with other companies was issued this week by Joseph P. Kennedy, President of the company. It had been reported that FBO was to be part of the proposed First National-Pathe pool. Mr. Kennedy's statement follows:

"All rumors and statements to the effect that FBO is or has been considering any merger or consolidation with other picture companies are incorrect.

"Nobody has discussed the terms or conditions of any such consolidation with authority from the owners of FBO. My attention, and that of the FBO organization, is entirely taken up in making and distributing good pictures at prices which will show a profit to the exhibitors and to ourselves."

Seek Industry's "Best Brains" for Trade Parley

Film Boards of Trade and M. P. T. O. A. Cooperating With Trade Commission Officials; Selection of Exhibitor Delegates Being Made

ORGANIZATION of the industry's representation in the Trade Practice Conference, to be held by the Federal Trade Commission in New York beginning October 10, is going forward rapidly.

A letter has been sent to the secretaries of the Film Boards of Trade by M. Markham Flannery, director of Trade Practice Conferences of the Federal Trade Commission, requesting them to act as the medium through which the Commission "may quickly and conveniently communicate with unaffiliated or independent exhibitors." The exhibitor delegates, 64 in number, two to each zone, are to be selected by the exhibitor members of the Arbitration Boards, in conjunction with the local exhibitors' organizations, where these exist.

Letters have also been sent to the officers and members of all state and regional bodies in the M. P. T. O. A., by R. F. Woodhull, President, and M. J. O'Toole, secretary, urging them to co-operate in securing the best possible exhibitor representation. The letter states that national officers of the M. P. T. O. A. have been in touch with Mr. Flannery, and they are giving him their co-operation "so that this Conference may be properly and thoroughly organized, and that there may be in this assembly on that day the best brains within the industry."

The heads of all the large producing and distributing companies will personally represent their respective organizations, says the letter, which adds: "Two exhibitors will be selected by the exhibitor members of your Arbitration Board in co-operation with your organization. This practice will be carried out in each of the thirty-two film zones in accordance with instructions sent from Washington."

Not a Debating Society

Use of the machinery of the Film Boards of Trade is being made by Mr. Flannery through the courtesy of C. C. Pettijohn, it is stated in the letter sent by the former to the secretaries.

The coming Conference will not be "a debating society," neither will it be "a voting contest," it was explained this week to the trade press by Mr. Pettijohn.

The purpose of the conference, Mr. Flannery states in his letter, "is to give all concerned an opportunity to participate in deliberations which are expected to result in efficiently eliminating from the industry any practices which may be determined to be unfair.

"In other words, as experts in their line, men actively engaged in the industry are asked to define for the Commission such practices as they consider unfair, and to assist in the formation of rules of business conduct intended to eliminate, on a given date, practices which the industry may recognize as bad."

Mr. Flannery's letter to the Film Board of Trade Secretaries continues:

"Since there are more than 20,000 moving picture theatres in the United States, it would be impracticable to call all owners into a single conference. In order that the unaffiliated or independent exhibitors may be fairly and adequately represented, two delegates will be selected from each of the 32 geographical zones into which the moving picture industry in the United States has been divided for commercial purposes. Such delegates, representing each zone respectively, are to be selected by the three exhibitor members of the Arbitration Board, working in conjunction with the local exhibitors' organization, if any. Neither delegate is to have any affiliation whatever with producers or distributors. One must represent chains of theatres consisting of groups of five or more, and the other delegate is to be selected from among owners of one theatre or less than five.

"As soon as these delegates are selected in accordance with the plan above outlined, the three exhibitor members of the Arbitration Board and the president and secretary of the local association should make immediate certification to the Federal Trade Commission of the names of the delegates so selected.

"The selection of delegates will not bar any exhibitor from attending the Conference, or from being heard on any subject pertinent to the purpose of the Conference; but the voting will be restricted to the certified delegates.

Nicholas Schenck Heads Loew's

Former Vice-president Succeeds Deceased Marcus Loew to Presidency; Will of Latter Is Filed

AT the regular meeting of the board of directors of Loew's, Inc., held during the week in the offices of the company, at 1540 Broadway, New York, Nicholas M. Schenck was elected to the presidency, after serving for the past three years as executive vice-president. Arthur M. Loew was elected first vice-president.

Two new members were added to the executive committee, elected by the board of directors. They are David Bernstein and Arthur M. Loew. Nicholas M. Schenck and William H. Childs were already members of the executive committee, with David Warfield as alternate member. The vacancy on the board of directors caused by the death of Marcus Loew was filled by the election of J. Robert Rubin.

The board of directors of Loew's, Inc., now stands as follows:

Leopold Friedman, personal counsel for Marcus Loew, made known the details of the will of Marcus Loew, deceased president and founder of Loew's, Inc., and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures. The last will was dated May 7, 1912. Since the making of that will Mr. Loew is said to have divided large portions of his estate among his immediate family. No definite sums nor properties were detailed in the last will. It will probably be several months before a detailed statement of the estate will be available.

The executors of the estate were given as Caroline Loew, widow of the deceased, and David Bernstein, treasurer of Loew's, Inc., and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures.

According to the terms of the last will, twenty-five per cent of the estate goes to the wife, fifteen per cent to the son, David Loew, and fifteen per cent to the son, Arthur M. Loew. In addition to this, forty per cent of all the possessions of Mr. Loew will provide a trust fund, the income of which will go to the widow. Upon her death the principal will go to the sons, Arthur and David.

A trust fund of five per cent of the estate was provided, the income of which will go to Mrs. Fannie Spring, sister of Mrs. Loew. Upon her death, the principal of this fund will go to Mr. Loew, brother, Henry Loew, his half-brother, Joseph Sichel, and his nephew, Morton Spring, in equal shares. The will was filed last Saturday in Surrogate's Court, New York City.

Paramount Earnings Jump

First Two Quarters of 1927 Show Big Increase Over Those of Past Two Years

THE first and second quarters of the year 1927 show decided increases in Paramount's earnings over the same periods of the past two years, according to an analysis made by the Wall Street Journal, which points out reasons for these increased earnings. It is predicted that the earnings for the third quarter of the current year will be 100 per cent greater than those of the same period last year.

The comparative earnings given by the Journal for the past three years are as follow:

1st quar.....	$2,067,273	$1,649,689	$1,355,808
2nd quar.....	1,456,051	937,818	695,724
3rd quar.....	.....	1,052,829	1,408,330
4th quar.....	.....	1,960,477	2,258,190
Total	.....	$5,600,815	$5,718,054
$ share	.....	$10.82	$18.39
Shares outs...	574,617	574,590	370,114

In outlining the reasons for the improved conditions at Paramount, the Wall Street Journal says:

"Paramount now has three outstanding films on Broadway for their preliminary showings: 'Underworld,' 'The Way of All Flesh,' and 'Wings,' all of which have been well received.

"In addition, three major films have been released to theatres all over the country—'Beau Geste,' 'Rough Riders' and 'Chang.' Paramount is consequently in strongest position ever from the standpoint of profitable releases. All of these films have been made in the last year and a half, and are responsible for the heavy inventories carried over into this year.

"Films are carried in inventory at their initial cost, 75 per cent of which is allocated against rentals from the United States and Canada, and 25 per cent against foreign rentals. Within the first three months after a picture is released 65 per cent of the inventory allocated to America is written off and, by the end of the first year, 95 per cent of this allocation is written off. Films are written down to $1 at the end of two years from date of release. The 25 per cent allocated to foreign countries is written off on a similar basis.

"Paramount last year made five or six major films more than its usual program, which are responsible for the inventory of $25,485,765 as of April 1. In addition to this ambitious production program, an unusual amount of real estate expansion and theatre building was done. All of this was responsible for the increase in bank loans to $12,717,811 as of April 1, 1927, besides an increase in other current liabilities. Now that these films held in inventory over the summer have been released, and the newly acquired properties are turning in profits, there will be a substantial reduction in bank loans and accounts payable.

"Foreign business in the first six months of this year was approximately 15 per cent ahead of the same period a year ago."

"It is requested that you communicate this plan to all exhibitors in your zone, and, if objection is raised thereto by unaffiliated exhibitors, that you immediately communicate the same to the Commission, giving the name and address of the objector and a statement of the grounds thereof. A franked envelope, requiring no postage, is enclosed for your convenience in making reply. Your cooperation will be appreciated."

Woodhull's Letter

The letter sent by Messrs. Woodhull and O'Toole to exhibitors says, in part:

"With its tremendous importance in mind, we suggest that you safeguard the interests of the motion picture exhibitors in your vicinity by using your best efforts in a sincere endeavor to have your representation at this conference of the highest type, and that particular attention be given to the fact that they should be men capable of comprehending the many diversified problems of the exhibitor part of our business.

"This hearing is not in the nature of a prosecution or an investigation of our business. It means definitely that the United States Government has asked the leaders of all branches of the business to assemble at a given time, discuss our trade practices, and decide upon formulas which will take the place of procedure which may be agreed are unnecessary and unfair. In our opinion, this will afford a great opportunity to all concerned. Much good will be accomplished if the representatives thus assembled, in cooperation with representatives of the United States Government, sincerely openly and frankly discuss their own problems not only within their own branches, but between the different branches of the business.

"This is an opportunity for the industry to write its own Bill of Rights.

"The Government does not provide for the expenses of anybody attending this conference and, if you find that it is impossible for the two independent exhibitors selected in your zone to attend such conference, the president and secretary of the Motion Picture Owners of America will be glad to represent the independent exhibitors in your zone by proxy if these proxies are accompanied by definite instructions to us with such suggestions as you may care to make with reference to any trade practice. Upon receipt of any such proxies we will endeavor to the best of our ability to present your instructions, as you may direct and suggest. In making out this proxy, no form is required. Just write what you want to say in a letter.

"It may be that upon some subject about which there is a controversy we will desire to communicate with you by long distance telephone or telegraph in order to get your viewpoint and your definite instructions. In sending your letter will you please indicate to us to whom we should telephone or wire in such emergency, giving the telephone number and correct telegraphic address?

"Definite instructions for the selection of the two delegates in your zone have been sent from Washington by the Federal Trade Commission for delivery to the exhibitor members of your Arbitration Board. The Commission decided on representation according to these business divisions or zones. We suggest you get in touch with the exhibitor members of your local Arbitration Board and read Mr. Flannery's letter as soon as you receive this one."

Closing of Illinois Houses Due Because of Strike

The collapse of the joint conference of Illinois union mine leaders and coal operators in Chicago on September 14 has spread gloom throughout the Southern Illinois coal fields, the motion picture theatres of which are served out of St. Louis, and the inhabitants are preparing for the worst Winter in the history of the district.

The mines have been idle since April 1. A few, notably in the Belleview sub-district, have signed new agreements with the miners, but comparatively few of the many thousands of coal dealers in the State are working, and probably will not secure employment unless they desert the coal fields for many months to come.

It is probable that many of the theatres in the coal fields will be forced to suspend operations indefinitely, since they cannot continue to operate at a heavy loss. Some of the exhibitors have been taking a weekly loss in the hope that a settlement of the strike would be effected at the Chicago meeting.

First National Renews White and Kent Contracts

First National has renewed the options on contracts of Alice White and Larry Kent. The latter has been cast for the leading role opposite Colleen More in her next starring vehicle, tentatively titled "Tell the World."

U. A. Names Supervisor of Film Service

CARL DENISON has been appointed supervisor of Film Service and Maintenance, a newly created exhibitors' service department of United Artists. He will make his headquarters in New York, where he will establish a reclamation plant and film depot to keep prints going to exhibitors in perfect condition. For eight years he functioned similarly for Paramount-Lasky.

Ontario Treasurer O'Ks Standing of M. P.

FOLLOWING closely upon the official expression of approval for motion pictures generally in the Province of Quebec by Mr. Justice Boyer following the holding of a Royal Commission, a similar attitude toward moving pictures has been designated in the Province of Ontario by Hon. J. D. Monteith, Provincial Treasurer of Ontario.

After a four weeks' inquiry as a result of complaints from certain sections of the community, Hon. Dr. Monteith issued a report on Sept. 16 at Toronto in which he gave a clean bill of health to motion pictures.

His conclusion was as follows:

"The survey might well warrant the assumption that in no place in Canada or elsewhere is the moving picture theatre-going public so well safeguarded and protected and nowhere are films of a higher order or of a less objectionable type."

Praise is extended to the Ontario Board of Moving Picture Censors in a clause of the report.

Many Competitors in Mid-West Golf Tournament

The Midwest Film Golf Tournament, played at the Olympia Fields, Chicago, brought out 35 competitors, who battled for 30 prizes, Asher Levy, of the Orpheum Circuit, walking away with the trophy for low gross and prizes fo rthe most birdies and pars. Mo and Benny Lasker did a brother act in the same foursome and each won a trophy.

Among those who carried home prizes for their various feats of skill were Arthur Mayer, Bob Lucas, Dale Leiheit, Aaron Jones, winner of low net, Harry Graham.

"Ben-Hur" Heads October M-G-M Releases

Headed by "Ben Hur," set for October 8, the feature release schedule for M-G-M for the month of October presents five unusually strong features.

Pictures to be released, in addition to "Ben Hur," comprise "Body and Soul," "In Old Kentucky," "The Fair Co-ed," and "Spring Fever."

Fox to Produce "What Price Glory" Sequel

A SEQUEL to "What Price Glory" is now being written by Laurence Stallings and Maxwell Anderson and will be produced as an original motion picture story by Fox Films.

The further affairs and adventures of Flagg and Quirt will be laid in civilian life in New York City after the World War days. The picture will again reunite all members of the picture cast of "What Price Golry." Raoul Walsh will direct the new production.

Military aspect and attire will be discarded in the sequel picture, which has been given the title "The Cock-Eyed World."

Connecticut Exhibitors Ask Tax Cut

Smaller Exhibitors Will Be Forced Out of Business Unless Relief Is Granted

AS a result of what is claimed to be an excessive tax against smaller theatres in Connecticut, many of those affected are planning to go before Governor Trumbull with their grievances, as a last measure before being forced out of business. The new tax, effective July 1st, is now due and, if it must be met, it is claimed that many houses, particularly with seating capacity under 750, will be forced to close.

Under the new law a tax of $15 weekly is imposed on all theatres having a seating capacity up to 750. Those between 750 and 1,200 are taxed $20 weekly. All theatres over 1,200 must pay $40 weekly, which is the maximum.

The smaller theatre owners declare the tax assessed them is excessive, and out of proportion to that charged against the largest houses, which have three or four times the seating capacity, and can much better take care of this overhead.

It is said that because of the new law many of those theatres having seating capacities slightly over 750 have reduced the number of their seats to come under the smallest tax. This, they contended, was the only way they could continue in business, and, at that, it cut their profits to a minimum.

In advancing their arguments against the tax the smallest theatre owners contend that many houses operating in the neighborhoods that tried to keep going so at a loss whereas some of the largest houses played to as many as 9,000 admissions in a day. The latter, they say, can afford to pay the excessive tax.

It is the contention of the smaller houses that, unless the Governor comes to their assistance by reducing or eliminating the tax, the majority of them will be taxed out of business. They have already taken up their problem with State Tax Commissioner Blodgett, who declares he is powerless to intervene. The only hope for the little fellow is an appeal to the Governor, and there is concerted action on now to go before him.

New Keith-Albee Houses

Building Program Contemplates Thirty Theatres in Cities from Coast to Coast

WITH about thirty new houses contemplated during the year by the Keith-Albee, Orpheum, Proctor and Moss chains, Keith-Albee and their affiliated companies are entering upon a gigantic expansion program which will function from coast to coast.

The first of the new houses to open on Monday is the G. F. Proctor, at New Rochelle, with a seating capacity of 3,000. This will be followed in the near future with other openings in the east of the new Auditorium, in Quebec, on September 22; the Keith-Albee White Plains, in October; the B. S. Moss Madison, in Brooklyn; the Keith-Albee Chester, in the Bronx; and the B. S. Moss Kenmore, in Brooklyn.

Openings of other new houses now under construction have not yet been determined, but the following are nearing completion: the B. F. Keith Memorial, in Boston; the E. F. Albee Fountain Square, in Cincinnati; the E. F. Albee Huntington, in West Virginia; and the Keith-Albee, in Rochester.

According to the Albee, plans for many new houses are contemplated, though work on them is not yet under way. New theatres are proposed for Flushing, Detroit, Toledo, Cleveland and Philadelphia. In addition, in Baltimore, Fred Schanberger is erecting one and remodeling another vaudeville and picture theatre.

The Moss building program is also an extensive one, with houses being planned or under way at many points. Among these are the Putnam, at Richmond Hill; the Bristol and Concord, in Brooklyn; and the Marlboro, at 207th Street and Broadway, in New York.

Not only is definite activity under way in the east, but there are also extensive building operations assuming shape over the Orpheum circuit in the west. A new Orpheum theatre is ready for opening in Seattle, while others will be completed before the end of the season in Vancouver, Omaha, Memphis, Madison, Wis., Springfield, Illinois, and Davenport, Iowa.

Ralph Block Associate Producer to De Mille

Ralph Block, formerly dramatic critic of the New York Tribune, and more recently with Paramount as editor-in-chief, has resigned from Paramount and has joined Cecil B. DeMille as an associate producer. Mr. Block has already moved into his new offices at the DeMille studio, and will produce several pictures on the current DeMille program for Pathe release.

Mr. Block has had eight years in the motion picture business, in sales, advertising and production. He started with the original Goldwyn Corporation.

Sheboygan Name of New Universal Theatre

The new theatre Universal is now erecting in Sheboygan, Wisconsin, has been named the Sheboygan, according to thnouncement received from Dan Michalove, general manager of the Universal Chain.

A Close-up of C. B. Hawley

By William A. Johnston

Clifford B. Hawley

A FEW words about C. B. Hawley, the new president of First National. These are but first impressions, but since Mr. Hawley looks like a man who will wear extremely well, they will probably be as applicable later on as now.

He is a healthy, ruddy, vigorous type of the American business man; genuine, companionable, likable, frank and firm.

He comes into the business to stay. He has severed active connections with his banking firm.

He comes in, however, with his eyes open. He has been associated closely with the Mastbaum interests for fifteen years.

He says he knows little or nothing about production and distribution and the industry in general. A shrewd guess, however, is that he knows quite a bit.

He plans nothing revolutionary. Yet another shrewd guess is that out of his knowledge of successful theatre operation and his wide knowledge of those many other industries which so closely parallel this, he has some pretty clear ideas of what may eventually be done to solidify the industrial machine of motion pictures.

A man who has held his prominent position with a large investment bank has had an invaluable experience with other businesses. We need more such men in this industry so that eventually it will take the economic form of other large industries and less of the helter-skelter, day-by-day pattern of the theatrical business.

Mr. Hawley is a downtown man. By that I mean a banking man.

He therefore has a deep respect for property, for property values and rights. He is therefore a conserver. Also he respects others, their experience and abilities.

His business life has been that of a constructionist.

He builds soundly to make sound money, but in a large and permanent way and not merely for money's sake. He is not a dollar grabber.

First National, always having been owned by theatre men, has been run largely by an executive committee of the Board. In casting about for some one man to replace the committee control, the First National people finally selected Mr. Hawley.

And their choice seems a wise one.

Driscoll, New York City; Night Producing Company, Inc., capitalization not stated, Simon Anhalt, Edmund J. Roberts, Samuel J. Krangel, New York City.

Wolfson-Meyer Acquire Two Mobile Theatres

A new theatre operating group entered Mobile, Ala., last week when Wolfson and Meyer, of Miami, Fla., acquired two theatres—the Bijou and the Empire. Wolfson and Meyer, of which Sidney Meyer is the prime factor, are joint owners with Universal of the Capitol Theatre in Miami, but the partnership exists only at Miami.

The Bijou has been renamed the Capitol. It is understood that Loew vaudeville will be booked into one of the houses. Fox and Pathe product, it is stated, also has been booked. Ralph DeBruler is to be manager of the houses, and is expected to arrive about October 1 to take up his duties.

The theatres were formerly under the managerial direction of Miss Marguerite Luckel.

Geo. Mooser Joins M-G-M As Special Representative

George Mooser, a prominent theatrical figure for many years, has joined the International Department of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Mr. Mooser became a reporter on the San Francisco Examiner, opened and operated a vaudeville chain in California. Thereatfer, he came East and joined the New York American under William Randolph Hearst.

He is now en route for India where he will be special representative of Metro-Goldywn-Mayer to cooperate with Madan Theatres, Ltd., in their exploitation of the M-G-M product.

Eddy General Manager Harry Langdon Corp.

Don Eddy, director of publicity and advertising for Harry Langdon since the comedian joined the First National organization, has been appointed general manager of the Harry Langdon Corporation, following the resignation of William H. Jenner. Mr. Eddy is at present in New York, but soon will return to the Coast.

July Exports Totalled 27,903,405 Feet

MOTION picture exports in July totaled 27,903,405 feet valued at $741,831, an increase of approximately 1,800,000 feet over the same month last year, but $90,000 less in value, but 5,000,000 feet and $98,000 more than the shipments for June of this year, according to statistics compiled by the Department of Commerce, Washington, D. C.

Exports by classes during July were: Positives, 20,427,892 feet valued at $493,983; negatives, 748,270 feet valued at $94,473; raw stock, 5,382,746 feet valued at $136,124, and shipments to non-contiguous territories, 1,344,497 feet valued at $17,251.

First National to Continue McGuirk Drives

The resignation of John J. McGuirk as president of First National will cause no change in the plans of the company's sales department for the McGuirk Month sales drive, according to Ned E. Depinet, general sales manager, who has instructed his branch managers to proceed with the compaign with unabated enthusiasm.

The standing of exchanges and districts in the first week of the McGuirk Month sales campaign was completely upset at the end of the second week. Portland fell back to seventh place nationally and to third place in its district. The Albany exchange captured first place in its district and for the country at large. The Western district won second and third places, with the Des Moines exchange a shade ahead of the Seattle branch. Pittsburgh leads the Southern district.

Yugoslavian Theatres Total 273

Yugoslavia, with 12,000,000 inhabitants, boasts 273 motion picture theatres, with 86,630 seats, or an average of 317 seats per theatre and one house to every 44,000 people, says a report from George H. Canty, Paris, to the Department of Commerce, Washington, D. C.

Belgrade, the capital, with 112,000 population, possesses eight picture theatres, with a total capacity of 6,100 seats, or one seat for every 18 people. Strangely for Europe, every theatre contains at least 400 seats. Six average from 500 to 1,000 seats, while one exceeds 1,000 seats in capacity. The capacity for houses in Belgrade averages 737 seats.

Zagreb, the second city of importance in Yugoslavia, with a population of 108,000 people, has 6 theatres with approximately 5,150 seats, or an average of 850 seats per theatre.

Goldwyn Selects New Title for Colman-Banky Film

Samuel Goldwyn will name the forthcoming Colman-Banky feature "The Flower of Spain," instead of "Leatherface," as already announced. Fred Niblo will direct the production, scheduled to begin within the next two weeks.

Mayer Not Backing Tiffany

M. H. Hoffman Brands Report Published in Hollywood as Ridiculous; Spikes Other Coast Rumors

A REPORT, published in Hollywood to the effect that Louis B. Mayer is financially backing Tiffany Productions, Inc., was branded this week as ridiculous by M. H. Hoffman, vice-president of the company.

He also denied that John M. Stahl is to become director-general for Tiffany. Mr. Hoffman's statement said, in part:

"Outside of the rapid strides made by the Tiffany Company and, therefore, its natural expansion and development, there have been no 'shakeups' of any kind in the company, nor are there any changes being made.

"New financial backing by Louis B. Mayer or anyone else is ridiculous. Mr. L. A. Young, president of the company from its inception, has always backed the company and will continue to do so.

"Mr. M. H. Hoffman has always been, and still is, in full executive charge.

"Regarding a studio, the Tiffany company has been on the look-out for a studio site for some time, and will build or buy a studio very shortly. So that is nothing new.

"As to John M. Stahl becoming Director-General—not a bad idea—we like the suggestion; but unfortunately that illustrious gentleman is under contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer—and, besides, it takes two to make a bargain. He has not been asked nor has he said 'Yes.'"

Joe Brandt Off to Europe

Columbia Chief Will Make Distribution and Reciprocal Arrangements Abroad

JOE BRANDT, president of Columbia Pictures, is off on a three months' tour of Europe for the purpose of extending his company's distribution abroad, and to make reciprocal arrangements for the distribution of foreign pictures in America. His itinerary covers the important countries of Europe, with length stops in London, Hague, Brussels, Paris, Barcelona, Rome, Milan, Vienna, Prague, Berlin, Copenhagen, Stockholm and Christiania.

Brandt, together with Jack and Harry Cohn, the guiding heads of Columbia, feel they have built up a strong distributing organization in the United States, and that they can build an equally strong one in the foreign market.

Discussing his trip before sailing on the Olympic, on September 16th, Brandt said:

"With many foreign countries embarking on a broad-gauge schedule of picture production, I look forward to the making of many worth-while pictures that audiences in the United States will be glad to see. Wherever possible, we plan to establish direct representation for Columbia pictures and, to further that end, will enter into reciprocal arrangements with foreign producers to serve as their distributors in the United States.

"I sincerely believe that much of the success for the future distribution of foreign-made pictures will eventually fall upon the shoulders of independent producers in America. American producers who have established their own companies in Great Britain, for example, cannot, or will not, absorb the number of pictures which the quota will bring about. This means that many worth-while British pictures will never be distributed in the United States, unless American independent producers, through their sources of distribution, provide the outlet.

"I feel that a definite business relationship with British producers and European producers is a vital necessity."

M-G-M Reported in Broadcasting Deal for National Distribution of Programs

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER is to enter extensively into radio broadcasting as a business, according to a story published in the New York Sun, the plan being the sale of radio programs. The story, unconfirmed by M-G-M officials, is to the effect that contracts for land wires for a nation-wide hook-up involving from $1,000,000 to $3,000,000 annually, are being negotiated with the American Telephone and Telegraph Company.

According to the Sun, New York City will have the central broadcasting station, while other stations will receive the programs by land wire in a coast-to-coast hook-up. WHN is named as the main distributing station.

It is said that theatre acts in different localities suitable for radio programs will be sent to New York by land wire and from there relayed throughout the country. The story says the plan will go into effect by February of next year. The new venture will be launched by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as a separate business enterprise.

"U" Production Advances

Eighty Per Cent of New Season's Product Is Announced as Already Completed

MORE than eighty per cent of Universal's production for the 1927-28 season has already been completed, according to announcement from that company, with all but eight of the remaining pictures now under way.

As things now stand, five of the seven specials have been completed, together with twenty-one of the thirty-three big features, two of the four Reginald Denny productions and twenty of the twenty-two Western features. Of those remaining, two of the specials are in production, four of the big features, one Western feature and one Reginald Denny production.

These eight pictures, now in the making, are: "The Man Who Laughs," "The Cohens and Kellys in Paris," "Finders Keepers," "The Wild West Show," "No. 13 Washington Square," "Thanks for the Buggy Ride," "Good Morning, Judge," and a Ted Wells Western.

A number of title changes have been made since the year's lineup was announced. The Glenn Tryon-William Craft feature, originally "The Flying Nut," has been changed to "Paris or Bust." The Charles Ray-James Gleason story, "Kid Gloves," has been changed to "The Count of Ten."

Along with the change of titles also come a number of changes in releases dates. There are eight of these features whose releases have been changed. They are: "Buck Privates," "The Small Bachelor," "Alias the Deacon," "The Irresistible Lover," "The Chinese Parrot," "Surrender," "Paris or Bust" and "Hot Heels."

The new release dates for these eight are as follows: "The Chinese Parrot," October 23; "The Small Bachelor," November 6; "The Irresistible Lover," December 4; "Paris or Bust," December 25; "Alias the Deacon," January 22; "Buck Privates," March 4; "Surrender," April 22; and "Hot Heels," July 22.

G. R. Allison, Atlanta Showman, Dies

GEORGE ROBERT ALLISON, manager of the Atlanta exchange of Fox Films and dean of the Atlanta film fraternity, died at the Patterson Hotel, Valdosta, Georgia, early Monday morning, September 19, following an attack of acute indigestion. In company with his salesman, Paul S. Bryan, Mr. Allison left Atlanta last week for a trip through important Florida points. Returning from Tampa he reached Valdosta Sunday afternoon, when he was seized with acute indigestion.

As soon as the news of his death was received in Atlanta the Film Board of Trade called a special meeting and named a committee to act at its discretion in rendering every possible service to Mrs. Allison and in arranging proper tribute for their president.

Funeral services for the deceased were held at 11 o'clock, Wednesday, from All Saints' Episcopal Church with interment in West View Cemetery, Atlanta. All film exchanges were closed from 11 to 1 in respect to his memory.

Paramount Has Sixteen in Work and in Preparation

Cameras are grinding away at the Paramount studio in Hollywood, and electrical crews are running three shifts, because of the production activity there. Six pictures are under way and ten are scheduled for immediate start. Seven are now in the cutting rooms for final edition. In work are "Now We're In the Air," "She's a Sheik," "The Spotlight," "Honeymoon Hate," "The Gay Defender," and "The Side Show."

Dorothy Arzner is preparing to direct Clara Bow. Pola Negri is soon to start a new film. Adolphe Menjou next week starts "Serenade," the cast is nearing completion for "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes." Gary Cooper will play the lead in "The Legion of the Condemned"; Emil Jannings is ready to work in his third Paramount picture.

Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton will soon be under way in "The Big Game Hunt"; casting is on for "Under the Tonto Rim"; "Honky Tonk" is being scenarized and "Abie's Irish Rose" will be in production within three or four weeks.

Kane Signs Allan Dwan to Direct Five Pictures

Robert Kane has signed Allan Dwan to direct five productions for First National, which will be made at the First National Studios at Burbank. Ben Hecht, author, has been engaged to write the first story to be produced by the new producing combination. Following the Ben Hecht story, he has arranged with Elinor Glyn for a present-day romance, which will be the second of the five pictures directed by Mr. Dwan.

The alliance of Mr. Kane and Mr. Dwan reunites the producer and the director, as a few years ago they worked together over a considerable period.

C. De Mille Personally Directing "Chicago"

With Cecil B. DeMille personally directing, in association with Frank Urson, "Chicago," the screen version of the stage play, has just gone into production at the DeMille studio. Mr. Urson was slated as director, but Mr. DeMille felt that the production is so important that he will take charge of the first 100 scenes at least.

Phyllis Haver, Victor Varconi, T. Roy Barnes, Julia Faye, Robert Edeson, and others are in the cast.

Royal Film Commission for Australia

As a result of numerous requests to the Commonwealth Government, the Federal Parliamentary Committee, appointed to inquire into the moving picture industry in Australia, was recently constituted a Royal Commission, say advices from Trade Commissioner Elmer G. Pauly, Melbourne, to the Department of Commerce, Washington, D. C.

The Royal Commission is empowered to inquire into and report on the moving picture industry and, without limiting the generality of the foregoing, to inquire particularly into:

(a) the importation, production, distribution, and exhibition of moving picture films;
(b) the incidence and effect of the Customs Tariff upon the importation of such films and the sufficiency or otherwise of existing duties of Customs;
(c) the sufficiency or otherwise of the existing income tax law of the Commonwealth in relation to persons, firms and companies engaged in the industry; and
(d) in connection with any or all of the foregoing matters, the income, profits expenditure and losses of such persons, firms and companies derived from, or incurred in connection with, the industry, and the amount of capital invested in the industry."

Tiffany Completes Three for New Season

Tiffany has finished three of the 24 feature pictures to be delivered by Tiffany for 1927-1928. Prints of these pictures are now at the various Tiffany exchanges and will be released shortly.

The Tiffany pictures completed were: "The Girl From Gay Paree," "Women's Wares," and "Once And Forever."

Two pictures are now in the course of production, "The Ghost Ship" and "Night Life."

Paul Leni Starts "U's" "The Man Who Laughs"

Paul Leni this week started production on a screen version of "L'Homme Qui Rit," better known in English as "The Man Who Laughs," the novel by Hugo.

The title rôle will be played by Conrad Veidt, while the character of Dea will be interpreted by Mary Philbin. George Seigmann will have the part of Jardquanonne, and Torben Meyers will be seen in the rôle of Comprachico.

Elm Co. Taken Over by New England Theatres

The Elm Amusement Co. has been taken over by Jake Lourie and the New England Theatres Operating Co. Announcement that negotiations were under way for the transfer was recently made in these columns. The transfer includes the theatres of the former company in Milford, Marlboro, East Boston and North Attleboro, all in Massachusetts.

In and Out of Town

IRVING BRISKIN, of Sterling's New York office, is on the first leg of his seasonal tour of exchanges which will take him to Washington, Atlanta, Dallas, Denver, Minneapolis, Omaha, St. Louis, Kansas City, Milwaukee and Chicago.

JESSE J. GOLDBURG, president of First Division Distributors, Inc., returns East late this month to the New York office from the West Coast studio where he has been surveying the production activities of the Ormont and Chadwick producing units.

CLAUDE EZELL, Warner Bros.' central sales manager, is making a complete round of visits to the Warner branches under his supervision. He left New York three weeks ago directly for New Orleans and has made shops at Dallas, Oklahoma City and St. Louis. He is now in Omaha and will also visit Kansas City, Chicago and Minneapolis.

PAT DOWLING, Christie representative, has left the neighborhood of New York for Hollywood where he will remain at the Christie plant.

JUDD ROGERS, vice-president of Gotham, is at present traveling through the Middle West in behalf of his firm's new product. He will cover Minneapolis, Kansas City, St. Louis and Omaha and will probably arrive back at the home office shortly.

HERBERT BRENON, producer-director arrived in New York Sunday, September 18th, from Los Angeles, bringing with him a print of the United Artist picture, "Sorrell and Son," his first independent production.

A. S. KIRKPATRICK, assistant general manager of Educational, accompanied by Mrs. Kirkpatrick, returned from Europe Monday, September 19th, on the American Trader. Mr. Kirkpatrick was abroad one month, spent mostly in Paris and London.

FRED QUIMBY, M-G-M short subject sales manager, is making a tour of exchange centers throughout the Middle West. He is not expected back in New York before the 24th of this month.

BEN LYON, First National player, left New York Wednesday, September 21, on the Twentieth Century en route to California, where he will join the Robert Kane producing unit.

I. E. CHADWICK, producing for First Division Distributors, Inc., is on his way from Hollywood and will stop off at Chicago to see the Dempsey-Tunney fight. He brings with him a print of "Temptations of a Shop Girl," his latest feature.

ROBERT HILL, Universal director, arrived in New York City several days ago from Universal City to make special scenes for his next production for the Laemmle organization, "The Dough Girl."

New Oslo Theatre Largest in Northern Europe

The City of Oslo, Norway, will soon add another moving picture theatre to its list of amusement places, as the "Collesseum," said to be the largest moving picture house in Northern Europe, is nearing completion, reports Commercial Attache H. Sorensen, Oslo, to the Department of Commerce, Washington, D. C.

Bruce Gallup

Bruce Gallup Elected to Presidency of A. M. P. A.

The A. M. P. A. elections, held Monday of this week, resulted in the elevation to the A. M. P. A. presidency of Bruce Gallup. The vice-president post was assigned Lon Young, while James Zabin became secretary, and George Harvey treasurer. The new board of directors consists of C. W. Barrell, Al Selig, Fred Baer, Walter Eberhardt and Tom Wiley. Jacques Kopfstein was appointed councilor to the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, while Jerome Beatty assumed the position of trustee.

In the absence of Walter Eberhardt, Mel Shauer presided over the meeting, a feature of which was the speech of acceptance by Mr. Gallup. A former president, Arthur James, invited the new president to a luncheon of his predecessors, which will be staged next week.

Sax Scouts Talk of Independent Merger

Rumors that Gotham would merge with any other independent organization or that Gotham productions would be released by any other than its own distributing organization, are emphatically denied by Sam Sax, president of Gotham.

"That Gotham will merge with any independent company is absolutely untrue," said Mr. Sax. "There has been talk of mergers before and the reports seem to persist, but never in the history of this organization has a merger been further from our minds."

"College Widow" Closes W. B. 1926-27 Schedule

"The College Widow," starring Dolores Costello, is announced by Warner Bros. as the last picture to complete their schedule of 26 Warner Winners for 1926-1927. It will bring that season's line-up to a close when it is released to exhibitors on October 15.

M. P. P. D. A. Fetes Better Business Bureaus

IN connection with the annual conference now in session in New York City participated in by the managers of the 43 Better Business Bureaus of the country, an informal luncheon was tendered to the bureau managers at the Princeton Club, Tuesday, September 20, by J. Homer Platten, treasurer of Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc. The dinner was given as an indication of the appreciation of the motion picture industry for the co-operation being given by the Bureaus in protecting the good will of exhibitors, producers and distributors by preventing fraud and untruthful advertising or other unfair competition.

Rapid Pace Set for Pathe-De Mille Production

That a fast production pace will be hit up at the Pathe-De Mille studios is indicated in the statement released by Pathe that seven pictures will be in work during the next three weeks. "We are picking up speed towards a new record for our plant," comments General Manager William Sistrom.

These new pictures are "The Main Event," "The Forbidden Woman," "The West Pointer," "The Angel of Broadway," "My Friend From India," "Chicago," "Rip Van Winkle" and "The Blue Danube." To maintain the production pace set for the De Mille studio, $400,000 worth of new construction sets have been built.

"The Main Event" has three weeks more of production. Assembling is being finished on "The Angel of Broadway," "The Forbidden Woman" and "The Wreck of the Hesperus." "Chicago" goes into production within one week. "My Friend From India" started the day after Labor Day and "Rip Van Winkle" follows closely on its heels. "The Blue Danube" is to start early next month. James Cruze expects to start his second production for De Mille at once after having completed "On to Reno." Cecil B. De Mille's personally directed picture will take its place in the production schedule early in the fall.

Chaplin Completing "The Circus" at Hollywood

Charlie Chaplin has resumed the direction of "The Circus," his first picture for United Artists since "The Gold Rush." A big tent has once more been erected within the studio and the director-comedian is putting Merna Kennedy, Harry Crocker, Henry Bergman, George Davis, Betty Morrissey, Jhnny Rand, Tiny Sanfrod, Allan Garcia and others through their paces. Rollie Totheroh, Jack Wilson and Mark Marlatt are focussing the cameras. United Artists will release "The Circus" in March, 1928.

La Rocque and Leatrice Joy in "Blue Danube"

Rod La Rocque and Leatrice Joy will be co-starred in the coming Pathe-DeMille special "The Blue Danube," which will be directed by Paul Sloane from a story by John Farrow, young Australian poet.

The Universal to Open October 9th

UNIVERSAL CHAIN THEATRICAL ENTERPRISES, Inc., has set the opening date for Universal's new $1,500,000 Brooklyn Theatre, the Universal, on Sunday evening, October 9th. This will be an invitation premiere at which leading civic and social celebrities are expected to attend.

Arthur Brilant has been appointed managing director of the Universal, which is the first "atmospheric" type theatre to be constructed in New York.

Eight F B O Pictures in the Making

Plans for the fall production schedule at the F B O Studios in Hollywood indicate that there will be no let-up from activity. Eight pictures are in work and will be completed at the end of September.

Within the past few days, three pictures have been started. They are: "Coney Island," "Red Riders of Canada," and "The Little Buckaroo." Five films in preparation are: "Freckles," "The Renegade," "When the Law Rides," "The Swift Shadow," and "Her Summer Hero."

Completing the cast for "Coney Island," Rudy Cameron has been signed to play the leading masculine role, and William Irving and Eugene Strong have been chosen for important parts.

Lloyd Decides to Work Rather Than Play

Harold Lloyd's plans to arrange his shooting schedule in New York to permit him to attend the Tunney-Dempsey fracas in Chicago went too far astray to suit the bespectacled comedian, so that he abandoned his plans at attend the fight.

The four days intended for the fight were used instead in the filming of the horse car sequence which is to be the most amusing episode of his new picture.

Gotham Productions Now Ahead of Schedule

With "Blondes By Choice" now nearing completion, and "The Cheer Leader" and "The Fruit of Divorce" getting under way within the next month, Gotham is ahead of its schedule, which calls for completion of the series by July 1st. It is expected that the product will have been completed by the end of April, including "Hell Ship Bronson."

Harry Beaumont to Direct New Novarro Vehicle

Ramon Novarro will next be starred as the young ruler of a mythical European kingdom of modern times. M-G-M is about ready to start production on this picture. Harry Beaumont will direct from an original story by A. P. Younger. Renee Adoree will play the feminine lead in this film. Other selections for the supporting cast of the new film includes Roy D'Arcy, Jacquelin Gadson and Dorothy Cummings.

Chas. Van Zandt

Chas. Van Zandt New Educational Treasurer

At a special meeting of the board of directors of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., this week, Charles Van Zandt was elected treasurer and comptroller of Educational to succeed the late John W. Toone.

Mr. Van Zandt comes to Educational from the presidency of the Rex-Watson Corporation, manufacturers, of Canastota, N. Y., of which he has been the head for two years. Mr. Van Zandt was comptroller of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in 1917 and 1918, occupying this important position at the time of the consolidation of Paramount Corporation with Famous Players-Lasky. Mr. Van Zandt left Famous Players-Lasky early in 1919 to become comptroller of the Olonite Company, of Passaic, N. J., and later became general manager of the Wilkinson Manufacturing Company, of Binghamton, before his election to the presidency of the Rex-Watson Corporation.

"Jazz Singer" World Premiere on Oct. 6th

Thursday evening, October 6th, is announced by Warner Bros. as the date for the world premiere of Al Jolson in "The Jazz Singer," which will take place at the Warner Theatre, New York, at a top admission price of five dollars. The picture will then settle down to an indefinite engagement in that house.

Charley Bowers on Educational Program

HAVING forsaken Long Island for Los Angeles, Charley Bowers, his technical assistants and the machinery necessary for Bowers' mystifying process, will henceforth be seen working at the Educational studios making a series of six Charley Bowers comedies for the Educational comedy program. The Bowers unit will occupy a separate building and in about three weeks' time, when the equipmnt is ready, will start at once on the production of his first for the Hammons organization.

No. 11 has N. Y. fire fighting practicing, boats racing for president's cup, N. Y. to Spokane air derby, M-G-M's flying lion, work of Rockefeller Foundation in Orient, and futurity races at Belmont Park.

Key City Reports

New York City

BUSINESS was again spotty, if not a little worse than that, last week in New York City. The only houses that did exceptional business were those with offerings that had previously demonstrated strong drawing power.

The Roxy again led the procession with a gross of $123,003.40 for "7th Heaven" and the first four days of this week show $70,098, indicating another week over the $100,000 mark. One less show per day cut figures which would have been considerably higher.

"Soft Cushions" helped keep up the Paramount's average and the other Publix theatres registered strong with "Wings" and "Underworld." "The Way of All Flesh" also showed strength in its last week at the Rialto and this film was followed by U. A.'s "The Magic Flame." At the Capitol, "Ben Hur" in its second and final week was not quite up to the first. The "Big Parade" went in. The Keaton picture, "College," at the Strand, also felt the spotty conditions but managed a comfortable showing.

One of the best showings for the week, considering the size of the house, was "The Cat and the Canary" and the Riesenfeld program at the Colony, and of course, "The Patent Leather Kid" continues strong at the Globe. The usual Cameo customers patronized "Tartuffe," a Jannings film, and "The King of Kings," "Les Miserables" and "Old San Francisco," all registered satisfactory business. "Shanghied" pleased the Hippodrome audiences.

Chicago

CHICAGO last week suffered under a heat wave which made a new high record for September, forced the closing of public schools and drove thousands of regular movie patrons to the beaches and out door spots in an effort to find relief.

Theatre owners suffered doubly from the heat and from very poor box office reports, business being probably fifty per cent off normal in the smaller houses and at least twenty-five per cent below average in the large de luxe theatres.

The extraordinary conditions affected even such regular business getters as the Chicago, where "Hula" was the screen attraction and Lester Allen in a stage fantasy, "Non Stop to Mars," business being decidedly off. The same was true at McVickers, where "The Way of All Flesh" was the offering, which, by the way, was eulogized by press critics. "Camille" at the Roosevelt, showed a decided drop in business from its previous week, and the Oriental was also somewhat off with "We Are All Gamblers" as the screen feature and Paul Ash's show, "Midnight Merries" on the stage. "What Price Glory," plus Movietone, which had started with a record breaking Saturday and Sunday at the Monroe, also fell off during the week as the heat wave reached its peak.

The new Avalon on the far south side, fared somewhat better, with "The Blood Ship" on the screen and Buddy Fisher and his band on the stage, pulling fair business. The Capitol was well below normal with "Becky" as its screen feature, Del Delbridge and his band, and Vitaphone rounding out the bill.

Poor business would summarize the reports from the Tivoli, which had as its screen attraction, "Twelve Miles Out," and Benny Kreuger and his band on the stage; the Uptown with a strong show including "The Stolen Bride" Frankie Masters and his band and other stage features; The Sheridan with "Service for Ladies," Verne Buck's band; the Marbro with "The Country Doctor," Benny Meroff's stage band and Blossom Seeley as an added attraction; and the Granada where the same feature was offered and Charles Kaley held the stage.

St. Louis

ST. LOUIS the past week sweltered in the hottest weather of the year—the thermometer exceeded 90 degrees on every day of the week—and as a result the business of all the first run picture palaces was off despite their excellent cooling systems. The only exception to this was the St. Louis Theatre, Grand and Delmar boulevards which had Lew Cody in person as a special master of ceremonies for its vaudeville show.

On the screen of the St. Louis was Virginia Valli and George O'Brien in "Paid to Love." Frankly, Cody and not the picture was the big drawing card. However, while the plot of the picture was light it was entertaining.

At Loew's State Theatre "Ben Hur" was credited with an attendance for the week of 81,237 persons. This was about 20,000 below the mark claimed for "The Big Parade' during the first seven days it was on the screen of the Washington avenue house. However, "Ben Hur" was held over for a second week—being the fourth picture in the history of the house to hold that distinction.

At the Ambassador, Seventh and Locust streets, with "The Way of All Flesh" on the screen and a fairly good stage show had a very good week, but not as good as it would have had if the weather had been more moderate.

"Hard Boiled Haggerty," which was the screen attraction at the Missouri Theatre, did not do so well. From Monday to Friday business was off decidedly, especially at matinees.

"Old Ironsides" which closed its road show engagement at the American Theatre, Seventh and Market streets, has not set any record since it opened its St. Louis engagement.

While the first run houses were affected adversely by the hot weather the reverse was true of the airdomes of the city. All had a very big week despite quiet industrial conditions.

Boston

WITH the opening of the public schools and on the eve of the opening of the colleges, Boston's theatres steadied down this week to a good run of business, in contrast to the spotty business of the previous week. Last minute vacationists have apparently returned to town for the winter. Day by day attendance during the week was on a more even keel than it has been for some weeks past.

"Swim, Girl, Swim" at the Metropolitan drew well, as all comedy feature films have been doing in Boston for months. John Murray Anderson's spectacle, "Joy Bells" was the presentation. Windsor McKay also proved a big drawing card for the kiddies.

Because of the record houses which packed Loew's State last week, resulting in many being turned away, "The Big Parade" was held over for a second week, something which has happened with less than half a dozen films in the history of the theatre. To wind up its run this week an extra showing of the film was given every day at 11.30 a. m. This was the first time the film has been shown at popular prices in Boston and all previous film records at the theatre have been shattered.

"Alias the Lone Wolf" at Loew's Orpheum was another good box office attraction, mystery films coming very close in popularity to the comedy features.

Keith-Albee's Boston had one of its best weeks in several months with "Cheating Cheaters" as the feature.

Other houses reporting a good week's business are the Modern and Beacon with their twin bills, "Singed" and "Tracked by the Police;" Scollay Square Olympia with "The Way of All Flesh"; Fenway with "Service for Ladies," both of which films were shown recently at the Metropolitan; "Smile, Brother, Smile" at the Exeter; "The Missing Link" at the University; "The Stolen Bride" at the Washington Street Olympia and "After Midnight" at the Bowdoin, the latter also having Wanda Hawley in person appearing on the stage.

Detroit

WITH one or two exceptions, all attractions drew big attendance to the downtown motion picture houses this week, despite sultry weather.

At the Michigan, Tom Meighan was listed in "We're All Gamblers" and nice business resulted. A stage show was also featured on the bill.

The biggest money maker here this summer, "Beau Geste," held up strongly during a third week at the Adams. It is expected to go well for at least another weekly session.

Vincent Lopez and Reginald Denny brought good-sized crowds to the Capitol, the latter being presented in "Out All Night." The Madison did just as well, however, with "The Road to Romance." Both features did better than "Tumbling River," at the Colonial, or "The Last Outlaw" which the Miles offered along with vaudeville although the last two proved okay to the patronage.

The State had "Three's A Crowd" drawing nicely but "What Price Glory" was a stronger feature and the Fox-Washington manager, Charles Cohen, is greatly pleased. "Painting the Town" pulled in good throngs at the Regent during the early part of the week.

Some competition was noticed from the legitimate houses which have just opened with a number of musical and stage productions. On the whole, this was offset by the cooler conditions prevailing at the picture theatres.

Seattle

WITH the Labor Day holiday to help matters out, and a full list of big productions to greet the movie-goers, the first run houses in this city last week chalked up big totals in their gross business columns.

At the Fifth Avenue Theatre, "Underworld" played for the first four days to tremendous houses, nearing the house record for attendance. The last three days were slightly lower, but the grand total for the week was exceptionally large. Fanchon-Marco's "Hello, Lindbergh!", idea was the weakest that they have presented in some time, but Eddie Peabody held up the stage end of the show by a magnificent "Rhapsody in Blue" specialty.

At the United Artists Theatre, "Chang" opened up to capacity houses and played to very large business for the entire week. The picture was given an extensive publicity campaign, and was also aided by charity matinees staged by Manager Perutz. Fine business for the entire week, with a second week following.

Two pictures played their third and final week to very satisfactory business. These were "The Missing Link" and Vitaphone at Hamrick's Blue Mouse, and "Beau Geste" at Bob Bender's Columbia Theatre. The Chaplin film at the Blue Mouse was almost as strong a box office film as "The Better 'Ole," which established a comedy record here. And "Beau Geste" held up surprisingly well in the face of strong competition and the fact that it was a second run picture.

"Smile, Brother, Smile" at the Liberty Theatre was just a fair box office bet. This house has had the worst of the deal in policy during recent months, and is just getting back on its feet. The week's gross showed a slight improvement over past attractions.

"Rubber Heels" at the Embassy Theatre, with Bull Montana appearing in person, did a very good business for the week's run. Manager Joe Danz is presenting some very creditable programs at this small house, and business is showing results.

At the two vaudeville houses, average program attractions were presented. The New Orpheum played to very big business, but this was a result of a new theatre and not the picture or vaudeville program. The picture was "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary" and it held no interest for a majority of the audiences. The vaudeville was just as bad.

Pantages did a very pleasing business with "The Secret Studio." Olive Borden's type of film is good box office material at this house, and a pretty strong vaudeville program rounded out a nice bill.

The weakest picture of the first run attractions was "Old Ironsides" which played its first week at road show prices at the Metropolitan Theatre. Business was practically negligible after the first two days. The road show film seems to be doomed in this city; audiences are entirely willing to wait until the average big film comes back to their favorite picture theatre at regular prices.

Los Angeles

DURING the past week Al Jolson kept the Metropolitan Theatre packed to the doors at every performance, scoring a big hit in his first engagement in a motion picture theatre at "popular prices." The picture, "Out All Night" was well received and provided great entertainment with its funny gags and situations.

Loew's State was popular with a triple program. Harry Langdon in "Three's A Crowd," Gene Dennis, the girl psychic and the Fanchon & Marco "Peacock Idea" all combined in satisfying the patrons.

"King of Kings" at Grauman's Chinese Theatre played to fairly good business during its eighteenth week.

The last minute rush to see the Fox production of "Seventh Heaven" at the Carthay Circle Theatre, is now on, as this picture is to close in just three weeks.

The Million Dollar did a good business with Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky in, "The Magic Flame."

"Mockery" as second run at Grauman's Egyptian Theatre again pleased a number of fans as did "The Big Parade" at the Criterion in its last week in the down-town theatre.

Kansas City

ANOTHER week of unusually hot weather failed to produce any decrease in attendance in first run houses this week, although it is doubtful what might have happened had there not been a strong line-up of pictures.

At the Newman Norma Shearer in "After Midnight" drew good all week, being slightly above the average, which also can be said of "Beau Geste" at the Royal.

"The Cat and the Canary" at the Liberty did a prosperous week. So did "What Price Glory" at the Pantages. "When A Man Loves," with John Barrymore, held up well at the Globe, while Norma Talmadge in "Camille' at the Mainstreet did a big business.

Cleveland

AN unprecendented and unseasonable hot spell that lasted all of last week threw the movie business altogether off. The cooling plants which are installed in most of the first-run houses did much to overcome the difficulties, but even so, the pictures did not get the support they would have received under normal conditions. Under the circumstances, the houses that reported fair business would have done big business. As it was, none of them got a big break.

"The Way of All Flesh" did as well as any picture in town during its second week at the Stillman. And "Carmen" did excellently well at Keith's Palace, considering the terrific heat. "Hard Boiled Haggerty," got by with a fair record. "Breakfast at Sunrise" was well liked by Allen patrons, and was given the support of those who survived the heat. "The Life of Riley" did fairly well at the Cameo, which specializes in comedy features. The Park reports fair business with "The Black Diamond Express." "The Circus Ace" drew good crowds at Reade's Hippodrome where the combination of Tom Mix and "Scooping Cupid" a Cleveland-made movie, with a Cleveland cast, proved an irresistible combination. "Three's a Crowd" was just moderately successful at Keith's East 105th St. and "His First Flame" made a fair showing at the Circle. "Potemkin" closed its second week at the Little Theatre of the Movies with satisfactory results. This was the first attraction of the Little Theatre of the Movies, and local interest in its program and policy was keen. Neighborhood theatres had a bad week. No film attraction was strong enough to pull the people in. Legitimate theatre competition included "Pygmalion" at the Hanna by the Theatre Guild Acting Company, "Abie's Irish Rose" at the Colonial, and "The Butter and Egg Man" at the Ohio.

San Francisco

THE weather together with the advertising campaigns helped to keep the big business in the local motion picture houses here. "Beau Geste" at the St. Francis Theatre, the third week, drew very well and it was kept over for a fourth week. Norma Talmadge in "Camille" at the California Theatre, went over very big, in fact bigger than contemplated. Special music was shown with this picture.

Bebe Daniels, always a favorite with local onlookers, went over well with "Swim, Girl, Swim," the stage act, "Seasons," helping to fill the house. "Firemen, Save My Child," drew many to the Granada Theatre and proved popular together with the stage act, "Diversities."

The Thomas Meighan picture, "We're All Gamblers," filled the Imperial Theatre, which now is producing high class pictures at popular prices and it now is seen it will pay. "Framed," shown at the Golden Gate Theatre, together with the six acts vaudeville, filled the house in the evenings. "The Satin Woman" at the Pantages Theatre together with the vaudeville acts also filled that house.

"Red Signals" as the feature picture, together with "The Racers" as the comedy and Abraham Lincoln produced on the stage, together with other acts, filled the Union Square Theatre. "Little Annie Rooney," crowded the Cameo Theatre and all were more than pleased to see it at low prices.

Minneapolis

BUSINESS quieted down a bit in Minneapolis after State Fair Week, and some rather unseasonable weather which broke a 19 year heat record for September helped to keep the crowds from the theatres. The beaches, of which Minneapolis has a great abundance, seemed to offer greater solace to the perspiring city than did the theatres, although the houses that were artificially cooled did not suffer a great deal.

Clara Bow, for example, did a healthy business at the State in "Hula." A stage attraction titled "Hawaiian Nights" boasted 14 entertainers, and helped out this film considerably. "Resurrection," which held over for a second week at the Strand, showed to fair crowds, and Douglas McLean in "Soft Cushions" at the Lyric did the same. The Hennepin-Orpheum gave Rod La Rocque's "Fighting Eagle" the benefit of some good advertising, and this picture undoubtedly helped business at that house.

The neighborhood houses were somewhat affected by the hot weather. Some of the pictures shown at the Loring, Lagoon, Rialto and Lyndale included "Man Power," "Twelve Miles Out," "Painting the Town" and "Rolled Stockings."

The Metropolitan, Minneapolis' only legitimate house which features road shows, opened this week with Mitzi in "The Madcap," and provided the movies with some competition. The Minneapolis baseball team, winding up its last home stand in the American association, also proved something of a counter attraction.

Milwaukee

SUMMER staged a comeback this week, sending the thermometer up near the hundred mark and theatre managers' hopes for a big week to zero. The weather was entirely to blame for the stage was all set with strong attractions at the theatres and business should have been booming.

This was Anniversary Week at the Alhambra theatre, and Reginald Denny in "Out All Night" headed a fine bill. Business was just fair. The Garden is closing its second week of "When a Man Loves" and Vitaphone, and is exploiting a third week. Business at the Garden was good. The Wisconsin offered Lon Chaney in "Mockery," and here too, business was just fair. "We're All Gamblers" was the attraction at the Strand. "What Price Glory" put up a good fight against the torrid wave and succeeded in attracting a fair share of patronage.

Neighborhood theatres also reported business below what was expected and managers here too attribute the falling off of patronage to the intense heat. The Oriental featured "Prince of Headwaiters" and drew fairly good houses. The Uptown showed "Barbed Wire" to very good crowds. "The Stolen Bride" playing at both the Modjeska and Tower brought in moderately good business. The Milwaukee found John Gilbert drew the usual good patronage to see "Twelve Miles Out."

Atlanta

GREATER movie season opened last week with a splendid array of showings in Atlanta theatres, bringing box-office results worthy of furnishing encouragement to producers and bespeaking a keen appreciation of theatre-goers for good pictures.

Topping the list, "What Price Glory" wrote a new chapter in the box-office receipts at the Erlanger, breaking a brilliant record previously established by "The Big Parade" in its first week, both playing to road show prices.

Laura LaPlante in "The Cat and the Canary" brought an outstanding crowd to the Capitol all week.

Gene Austin, appearing in person at Keith's Georgia smashed all box-office records of that theatre. Thomas Meighan played on the screen in "We're All Gamblers."

The Howard drew average attendance with Bebe Daniels in "Swim, Girl, Swim," opening the new season with a one minute after twelve performance Monday morning.

"Annie Laurie," featuring Lillian Gish at Loew's Grand won approval of local critics as ranking topmost in the career of this star. Miss Gish gained stronger admirers in her work as Annie Laurie, drawing a good week's business.

"Camille" and Norma Talmadge played at the Metropolitan to full matinees and average evening performances.

The Rialto enjoyed an increased week over the previous first split-week bill showing Richard Dix in "Quicksands" the first part and "The Covered Wagon," the latter.

"Battling Dangers," "Flying Mail," and "Long Loop on the Pecos" divided honors about equally for a good week at the Tudor.

The New Alamo showed two first run pictures "The Whispering Sage" and "Rich Men's Sons" with two second run features.

Baltimore

ALL first run moving picture theatres in Baltimore started off well Monday, September 12, as it was a legal holiday. Defenders' Day in Maryland.

"The Cat and the Canary" proved one of the biggest drawing cards that the New Theatre has had for some time and business there throughout the week was very big. Patronage grew as the week waned. There was a stage act on the same bill.

For its third week at Loew's Valencia "The Big Parade" still continued to pull them in strong and business done for the entire six days was heavy.

While the patronage at Loew's Century was tremendous for Buster Keaton's latest starring vehicle "College," Harry Langdon, the other prominent comedian, in "Three's a Crowd" at the Rivoli with the Biltmore Boys on the same program, did not go over so well and business at the latter theatre throughout the week declined.

"The Desired Woman," starring Irene Rich with Vitaphone presentations also offered, proved an excellent drawing card at Warners' Metropolitan with a steady business of a high average during the week.

"Rich Men's Sons," with Shirley Mason and Ralph Graves, on a bill with five acts of vaudeville, went over fine with the audience at Keith's Hippodrome and each day brought very good attendance.

At Whitehurst's Garden Theatre, "Back to God's Country," and five acts of vaudeville, only proved a fair drawing card.

"First Auto" Parade Scores for Detroit Theatre

A campaign staged for "The First Auto" in Detroit under the supervision of Louis Brager of Warner Bros., attracted widespread notice to the showing of that picture at the Madison theatre, where the picture played a two weeks' engagement.

The Detroit Automobile Dealers Association and the Detroit Automobile Club cooperated with this Kunsky-Publix house in the framing of a big street ballyhoo in the form of a parade of old cars. Prizes were offered which brought out scores of entries claiming to have the first auto.

A direct tie-up with automobile manufacturers was achieved through the medium of General Motors who issued special bulletins to all their Detroit factories including those where the Cadillac, La Salle and Chevrolet are manufactured. These bulletins apprised the employees of the special angles of interest to them in "The First Auto."

Fall Style Revue Staged at Chattanooga Tivoli

Through cooperation with a leading ready-to-wear store, Manager E R. Rogers of the Tivoli theatre, Chattanooga, offered a Fall Fashion Revue in connection with his presentation of "After Midnight." The stage show was built up into an entertainment of wide popular appeal and is credited with having attracted a large portion of the business recorded during the engagement.

The merchants undertook the entire expense of the production and staging of the revue and in addition gave the event wide publicity through notices in the store and newspaper advertising. Engraved announcement cards were distributed from house to house.

Variety of Exploitation Ideas Sell "Big Parade" in Memphis

WIDE range of stunts employed and the thorough coverage accomplished through the use of many publicity mediums distinguished the powerful exploitation campaign executed by Howard Kingsmore, manager of Loew's Palace theatre, in the interests of the first showing at popular prices of "The Big Parade" in Memphis.

The campaign included extensive use of posters, a tie-up with the recruiting service, newsboys parade, eloborate lobby decorations, and the use of accessories.

Accessories used in the campaign consisted of forty-eight caps, stenciled with the title of the picture and distributed among newsboys: eight oil paintings, which were used in the lobby before the opening and then in various store windows. One special banner which ran the full length of the marquee, and was illuminated by the regular electric sign.

Also there was a large papier mache soldier, standing with rifle and bayonet at the ready. "Allied" flags were hung all about this soldier, who was placed in the lobby, and a spray of these flags was used to decorate the marquee.

The entire front of another theatre, on the Main Street, and now closed, was used for the construction of a large and elaborate shadow box display. Two similar displays were used in two vacant stores, both in the immediate vicinity of the theatre.

A local ordinance forbids the placing of advertising matter on telephone or light poles, but this was overcome by the cooperation of the Army Recruiting service. The recruiting officer went to the city authorities and informed them that he would like to use all telephone, trolley and electric light poles to advertise "The Big Parade" in connection with recruiting. As a result cards with the following copy were placed, tied or tacked to every available spot, "You'll want to join the army after seeing 'The Big Parade' at Loew's Palace Theatre."

In order to get a parade with music on the downtown streets on the opening day, a tie-up was effected with the newspapers, whereby all the newsboys of the city were invited to attend the opening performance in a body.

An elaborate window display was placed in one of the department stores. The papier mache soldier, previously used in the foyer, and a spray of "allied" flags was used as a background for the studio model and seven large paintings of M-G-M stars.

A short trailer was used seven weeks in advance of opening date. Three de luxe trailers were used together.

The local unit of the national guard, 115th Field Artillery was in summer encampment and scheduled to return to Memphis during the first week's run of the picture. An invitation was extended to them to march direct from the station to the theatre for a special showing. This was impossible, due to the time of arrival. However, the commanding officer informed his men of the invitation and urged them to individually see the picture. No passes were extended.

"The Stunt Man"
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

LARRY SEMON has a lively comedy in this one, as two-reel comedies go. As usual they crammed it full of action, some of it good and some only fair, but the general average is more than passable. As the title implies, it is made up largely of stunt stuff and it is well done.

Semon is the stunt man who is trying to prove to the girl he is a real film hero, as she has declared that is the type she would marry. Among other things he does a jump out of a second story window and a lot of aeroplane stuff, which is all-popular in these comedies just now. He has some good gag material when he gets aloft in a radio guided plane and learns there is a dummy in the driver's seat. The plane is about to be blown up from the ground, and the parachute fails to open as he descends.

There is an unique ending to the story, too, for when Larry approaches the girl as the well established hero she has expressed herself in favor of, she flatly turns down his proposal of marriage. There is an abundance of good comedy in the two reels.

"Buster's Home Life"
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

BUSTER, Mary Jane, Tige and the pet monkey provide a world of action in this Buster Brown comedy, which has its humorous incidents, most of which are provided by Tige and the monkey. The latter, to cover up some indiscretions of Buster and his gang while they are left in the keeping of the maid, is fitted with a pair of huge shoes, in which he cuts some funny capers.

All in all they make life fairly miserable for Hannah, the maid, when she refuses to let the dog into the house. Block and tackle are employed and the kids and their pets are hoisted in through a second story window. They play havoc with the furniture and generally mess up the place, for which Hannah is blamed upon the return of Mrs. Brown.

"On Special Duty"
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

A STORY well above the average is this western featurette, with Fred Gilman in the feature role. Gilman in the role of Dave Higsby, Texas ranger, is apparently of the blow-hard type, who enjoys recounting his achievements to an admiring audience on the porch of the local hostelry. While he is doing this Jack Hardy strolls in. This Jack Hardy is not a nice kind of guy; in fact he's the villain. A false move of his, and Higsby mistrusts him. Each is in love with the daughter of the hotel proprietor. And each despises the other.

Hardy accuses Higsby of being a false alarm and challenges him to ride what has been an untamable bronc. Higsby accepts the challenge and succeeds, but as he is doing so Hardy and his gang get away with the $30,000 bankroll in the hotel safe. Higsby gives chase and after some exciting riding knocks off one bandit after another until he catches up with Hardy. A desperate battle ensues, with the usual result that Higsby recovers the bankroll, turns Hardy over to the sheriff and wins the girl.

"The Newlyweds' Surprise"
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THE trials and tribulations of a pair of newlyweds in trying to locate living quarters when burdened with a new offspring are visualized in this lively comedy, whose only fault is the usual one of trying to crowd too much action and comedy into two reels. It would be a better picture if toned down a bit by eliminating some of the rougher knockout stuff.

Apartment house keepers do have objections to babies and the newlyweds have considerable difficulty in parking the attractive Snookums. They succeed eventually by sneaking Snookums in in a parrot cage at the same time an old maid is parking her pet parrot in the same apartment house. Of course the cages change hands and the old maid gets the one with Snookums in it, while the newlyweds get the real parrot cage. There is wild confusion when the mistakes are discovered and up to that point there is the chance for a good story. Then they mix up everyone in the apartment house in a free-for-all fight in the hallway and everyone in the course of the ensuing melee gets knocked horizontal at least once. Otherwise there is some good comedy in the picture.

"Society Breaks"
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS is just another rough and tumble comedy in the Keeping Up with the Joneses series. It depends entirely upon slapstick and knockout stuff for its humor and it exaggerates too much in all directions. At that, it more or less accurately portrays the comic strip from which it is moulded and that probably is its main objective. As these comic strips seem much appreciated, so too will a picture of this type.

The McGinnises go to a social affair at the Joneses, and Aloysius, having trouble with his feet, removes his pumps before starting to dance. He gets into disfavor and retires to the kitchen, where he is appreciated by the serving maid for his ability as a Charlestoner. He feigns illness when discovered by the Mrs., but fails to make good and is subjected to the usual beating at the hands of his better half.

"Sailors, Beware!"
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

HERE is a two-reeler which, if patterned after, should serve to popularize the short comedy field. It has a pretty nifty little story with plenty of opportunity for slapstick comedy, which, however, is largely eliminated to the betterment of the picture. There's a bit of slapstick here and there, but it is of a better type than usual and is really humorous. The action of the story and its situations make for most of the comedy, however, and Stan Laurel in the featured role puts it over in great shape.

Stan is the hard boiled taxi driver. He carries Anita Garvin and her midget husband, disguised as an infant, to an outgoing steamer. Stan and his taxi, unknowingly is hoisted on the steamer. In the course of the trip the midget purloins a number of valuable jewels and hides them in his teddy bear. Eventually Stan reveals the "baby" as a hairy-chested midget when, on instructions from the ship captain he is ordered to give him a bath. The stolen property is returned and the crooked pair are shown up, after an abundance of good wholesome comedy that would be appreciated in any house.

"Saxophobia"
(Universal—One Reel)

THE saxophone wins over the ukulele in this short comedy in which Arthur Lake is featured. It is the usual riotous comedy of this juvenile series. Arthur's rival with Mary Marsh has made a hit with his uke, so Arthur pawns his flivver and buys a saxophone. His father will not tolerate it, so Arthur throws it out the window and into the cart of a junk man.

The pawnbroker hastens to Arthur's house and offers him a large sum for the return of the saxy, so Arthur's entire family gives chase to the junk man. The saxy is recovered, and with the proceeds Arthur purchases a man sized saxy. There is not a great deal to enthuse over in this one.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"The Human Fly"
(Pathe-Cartoon—One Reel)

NOTHING more than a series of animated drawings, is this one of the Aesop's Film Fables series. There is little of comedy to it and nothing in the way of a story. It shows the subject flying about in airplane stunts with various devices attached for propulsion. One of the latter is an electric fan. Al Falfa is plunged through barns and in and out of all sorts of obstacles. It's hard to get a chuckle out of any of it.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"A Battle Scared Hero"
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

LIKE many of the other short comedies of the day aeroplane antics figure largely in this one of the Andy Gump series. Whoever started this aeroplane rage in an effort to develop laughs should be sharply reprimanded. A few of them succeeded, but enough is plenty. Andy is the victim in this one, which, as usual, is shot to pieces in flight, and, also as usual, the parachute fails to open with Andy Otherwise the tale has to do with an airplane gun which Andy has invented and which he is about to demonstrate to a committee in his home. Immediately before the demonstration and unknown to Andy, Billy Butts loads the gun. The committee arrives and the demonstration proves disastrous as the gun explodes, bringing down Min, who at the moment was in the act of taking a bath.

"A Gold Digger of Weepah"
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THE recent gold rush situation in Weepah provides the atmosphere for this rough and tumble Sennett comedy, which is good for a number of laughs. The cast is a good one, including Billy Bevan, Alma Bennett, Johnny Burke, Matty Kemp and Andy Clyde.

Billy, whose past would not bear too close inspection, is now a temperence advocate, happily wedded to a 300 pounder, who is intensely jealous of him. The gold rush brings Alma, an old sweetheart of Billy's, and now a successful "gold digger." Alma and Billy become involved in all sorts of compromising situations, brought about by a sackful of rattle snakes brought by a prospector. Billy all but loses his home as some hilarious complications develop, but it all ends happily.

"The River of Doubt"
(Fables-Pathe—One Reel)

THERE is some better material in this cartoon subject than has characterized the majority of recent issues. A touch of lively comedy here and there brings recollections of some of the earlier efforts of these cartoonists. It's a jungle picture along the Amazon, where the dinosaur's neck is used as a spring beard by monkeys and birds, and the young birds are fed hippos by their adoring parents.

Thomas Cat and old Al Falfa invade this jungle for photographic purposes. They are attacked by the wild cats and various denizens and have a real lively time of it, with Al getting the worst of it. This is the best of these subjects shown for some time.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

The Cruise of the Helion

Stirring Melodrama on the High Seas

(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

"THE CRUISE OF THE HELION" is well equipped to score as first-rate screen entertainment with all adherents of the action type of play—and that almost covers the whole world of picturegoers. It is not difficult to assign the reason for the picture's ability to hold the spectator's interest, and here and there to carry it to emotional peaks. There has been no effort to contrive or achieve any effects other than those of "action," "suspense" and "romance." It is the simple and ever-availing formula of taking the best elements of the action picture—of which the serial is the purest form —and doing it in a more finished style, but doing it without apologies and with confidence in the soudnness of the materials. To be sure, it is surface conflict—no deep character searching here—but for that same reason it is dramatic action and story telling of the kind that captures the interest and stirs the emotions. The cast is a capable one. Donald Keith, Edna Murphy, Tom Santschi, Sheldon Lewis and Francis Ford are among the principals. The story deals with the exciting adventures of a young idler aboard a ship on which his father has sent him to make a man of himself. There is a love affair between the boy and the daughter of the skipper, and together they fight off the mutinous crew led by the brutal first mate after the death of the captain.

The Cast: Donald Keith, Edna Murphy, Tom Santschi, Sheldon Lewis, Sailor Sharkey, Martin Turner. Story by George Pyper. Directed by Duke Worne.

THEME: Melodrama which reaches its climax aboard a sailing vessel. A crew in mutiny seeks to steal a valuable cargo, and are defeated after a stirring struggle by a young ne-'er-do-well out to make good and the daughter of the murdered skipper.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Action and realism of characters. The fights between hero and mutinous crew.

DRAWING POWER: Good.

Produced by Rayart. S. R. Distribution.
Length, 6,089 feet. Released, September 10, 1927.

Production tone and photography of a high order are found in "The Magic Flame," Samuel Goldwyn's latest production for United Artists.

The Drop Kick

Stereotyped Story Makes Just Another Picture

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

COLLEGE stories are usually sure-fire inasmuch as they exploit a lot of unbelievable antics which wouldn't be accepted in any atmosphere outside a campus. A collegiate can cut up all sort of didoes and get away with them merely because the customers are accustomed to seeing him behave unlike the rest of the so-called human race. The college pictures seldom fail on the screen because of this reason. Yet here comes Richard Barthelmess in as poor a college story as has ever been shot in celluloid. Which is a pity considering the talents of the star.

Here we have Dick saving the game for dear old Alma Mater—and does it by kicking a field goal in the last minute of play. Naturally, these college stories coming along so rapidly eliminate any value of suspense. You know what is coming here every minute. The value of novelty (the saving not of campus yarns) is entirely absent. The collegiates in "The Drop Kick" cannot be called original—and the plot presents the tried and true formula of rivalry between the colleges. The characters are stereotyped. There is the Nice Girl who makes the hero do his stuff on the field—and there is the College Widow, too.

Barthelmess needs better stories. After "The Patent Leather Kid" it seems a shame to find him in something which doesn't measure up to his stature as an actor. He extracts everything possible from the picture. Which goes for everyone in the cast.

THEME: Romance of college life—with football hero winning game at crucial moment —and also winning girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Football atmosphere. College backgrounds. Romantic appeal. Acting.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Feature title and star. Bill as picture of youth and romance.

DRAWING POWER: Title should draw them during Fall because of football games. Star should bring them in. O. K. for average houses.

Produced and distributed by First National.
Length, six reels. Released, September, 1927.

Slightly Used

Light Story, Fairly Interesting

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

A FAIRLY pleasing story and one somewhat off the beaten paths is this rather light tale that takes a little too long in the telling. It has its amusing situations and is logically conceived and well acted by a good cast, headed by May McAvoy and Conrad Nagel.

May McAvoy is Cynthia Martin, eldest of three daughters of a stern male parent, and she is adored by her old maid aunt, with prospects of herself becoming an old maid. Her tendencies are that way. The stern parent has decreed that the younger daughters shall not marry until after Cynthia has taken the step. So Cynthia conceives herself a husband from the news columns of a daily paper. He has just departed with an expedition for Nicaragua. She makes the announcement to the family.

Unfortunately Cynthia then falls in love with a friend of the sisters' boy friends. So she inserts an article in the newspaper announcing the death of Major John Smith in Nicaragua. He sees it, returns and finds who is responsible for it.

The Cast: May McAvoy, Conrad Nagel, Robert Agnew, Audrey Ferris, Anders Randolf, Eugenie Besserer, Arthur Rankin, David Mir, Sally Eilers, Jack Santoro.

THEME: Farce comedy in which eldest daughter of three feins marriage so that her sisters may marry. The announced husband later returns from Nicaragua. They fall in love and all ends happily.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The many comedy twists and complications when the announced husband returns and confronts the young "wife." The climax when he insists upon his rights when declaring himself. The meeting of the girl and her father when she announces her marriage.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: The names of the leading players should serve as an attraction. The question of the justification of the elder daughter announcing her marriage to help her sisters. The all around good work of the cast.

DRAWING POWER: Nothing extraordinary about it, but should go fairly well.

Produced and Distributed by Warner Bros. Length, 6,412 feet. Released, Sept. 3, 1927.

A tale of college, athletics and young blood is "The Drop Kick," a new First National production.

"The Cruise of the Helion" is a story of the sea and primeval passions. Rayart Pictures is releasing it.

The Magic Flame

A Fine Production In Which Nothing Much Happens

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THERE'S an old-fashioned picture on view here—one which employs a dual role, a deal of sentiment and some preposterous melodrama. Its plot doesn't tell much—the idea hardly being substantial enough to carry on for nearly two hours. It tells the story of a beautiful trapeze artist who is placed in a triangle situation. She is desired by two men—one a clown in her own troupe (a circus outfit) and a young prince who is heir to the throne of a mythical kingdom through which the circus passes.

Before the picture reaches its conclusion the spectator who anticipated moving scenes is sure to be disappointed. It becomes somewhat jerky in its action because it doesn't get away from the beaten track of its story. The picture is a sort of fairy tale—magnificently produced in every way.

The picture is finely acted by Vilma Banky as the fair trapezist and Ronald Colman in the dual role of clown and prince. He acts with creditable restraint—and occasionally shows emotional fire when the scene calls for pathos. The minor parts are capably filled, too. A newcomer, Shirley Palmer, shows good screen personality—and talent, too. And there is Gustave von Seyffertitz whose character acting is worthy of mention. Henry King did as well as possible by a story that isn't so hot.

The Cast: Ronald Colman, Vilma Banky, Augustino Borgato, Gustave von Seyffertitz, Harvey Clarke, Shirley Palmer, Cosmo Kyrle Bellew, George Davis. Director, Henry King.

THEME: Romantic drama of love triangle with trapezist wooed by circus clown and prince.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Circus atmosphere. Play of pathos. Introduction of prince. Dual performance by Colman. Scene where clown is recognized as king. Captions. Backgrounds.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Should draw through personalities of stars. Should be advertised for its tone and quality. Play up Banky and Colman.

DRAWING POWER: Names of stars should attract them. Suitable for high class houses everywhere.

Produced by Samuel Goldwyn. Distributed by United Artists. Length, about eight reels. Released, September, 1927.

The Boy Rider

Deep and Exciting Melodrama

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

FOR real deep melodrama of the type that sets the customers cheering as the posse rides up, this one would be hard to beat. It has all the necessary elements. First of all there is the fourteen-year-old boy-star, Buzz Barton, who seems to have all the accomplishments of the older Western stars, and to be just as heroic. There is a generous mixture of intrigue, love and adventure, with incidents of the dramatic type following one another so closely that the suspense is almost continuous.

Of course, the story cannot be taken too seriously. It is one of those impossible Western tales where injustice is about to ruin the hero and the villain is about to triumph, only to have the atmosphere suddenly clear into a happy ending for all but the villain.

This young Buzz Barton seems destined for extreme popularity wherever the Western has an appeal. And his pinto pony will share his popularity with him. They are a good team for this kind of stuff. The youngster seems as skilled in the saddle as any of them. He has a pleasing screen personality, the mannerisms of a real cowboy, and he has not yet reached the point where he tries too hard to act.

The Cast: Buzz Barton, Lorraine Eason, Sam Nelson, David Dunbar, Frank Rice, William Ryno.

THEME: Western melodrama of boy who escapes guardian, member of bandit gang, meets up with former partner of his dad and the two become pals. They aid in capturing the bandit gang, who are bent on destroying the girl and her father.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The wild riding of the boy-star to save the girl. The terrific battle with the bandit gang. The suspense and the swift action.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: The age and skill of the boy her. You can safely bill it as a Western replete with thrills. The terrific struggle on the brink of the cliff to save the girl.

DRAWING POWER: Good wherever the Western is liked.

Produced and Distributed by F B O.
Length, 4,858 feet. Released, October 23, 1927.

Light satiric comedy is to be found in "One Woman to Another," a Paramount feature.

A dog's intelligence is the means of righting a wrong in "Jaws of Steel," a Warner Bros. release.

Lightning

An Improbable Tale, But Interesting

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

A PECULIAR mixture of big city night life and Western is this tale that revolves partly around an intelligent horse, a couple of cowboys and a couple of show girls. It goes into the field of all three of them for its action, and it comes out with plenty of it.

The horse is first seen in his environment, when he triumphs over a vicious outlaw horse. The girls are next displayed at their night club, or whatever it is, in Chicago, and there they meet the cowboys, who fall hard for them. One of the girls is on the square and the other is not. The latter gets the roll of the cowboys, who return disappointed to their Western range. Then, to bring the quartet together again, the girls get an engagement in Salt Lake City, to which point they must go by airplane to be on time. The plane is forced down on the desert where the boys are sheltered.

The girls wander into the camp of the boys and, after being upbraided for their Chicago actions, are faced with the threat of serving as the cowboys' squaws. They make their escape, only to run into a fierce desert sandstorm in which both are overcome, but are rescued with the assistance of Lightning, who has finally been conquored by Cuth Stewart. The cast is an exceptionally good one, and the roles are well enacted, particularly that of Jobyna Ralston, as one of the show girls.

The Cast: Jobyna Ralston, Margaret Livingston, Robert Frazer, Guian Williams, Pat Harmon.

THEME: Western in which two show girls meet two cowboys, deceive them, are punished when later they meet on the desert, but are saved in a terrific sandstorm and all ends happily.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The sand storm on the desert. The cabaret scenes. The airplane sequences. The photography.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: The battle between the wild horses. The Zane Grey story from which the production was made. The sandstorm.

DRAWING POWER: Should go well in any but the largest houses.

Produced and Distributed by Tiffany Productions, Inc.
Length, 6,049 feet. Released, September 1, 1927.

One Woman to Another

Very Draggy and Misses Its Points

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THERE'S nothing much to boast about in Florence Vidor's new picture. The star does her best to be convincing. That she succeeds is proof that she knows a scene when she sees it and what to do with it when it is given her. The chief error here is its length. The plot drags aimlessly along to seven reels when it could be compressed into a two-reeler. Therefore you can be sure it is well padded. The characters make entrances and exits without going anywhere in particular. Miss Vidor has a deal of charm —and she seldom fails to be sincere in her pictures, but not since "The Grand Duchess and the Waiter" has she had anything which can be catalogued as a smash.

In this picture she plays a homey type of woman who fearing that she will lose her man to a fair upstart proceeds to play the youngster's game and compromise. And thats all there is to it. There were possibilities to the story which haven't been realized. The effort to become satiric and a wee bit devilish doesn't click because it is executed so obviously and clumsily.

The central figure is supposed to represent a high order of intelligence but her playful by-play smacks of the adolescent age. Had the time-worn situation been touched up more with light comedy satire it might have released better entertainment. The cast is competent without distinguishing itself.

The Cast: Florence Vidor, Theodore Von Eltz, Marie Shotwell, Shirley Dorman, Hedda Hopper, Roy Stewart, Joyce Coad. Director, Frank Tuttle.

THEME: Drama of girl who realizes her fiance is slipping away from her and takes up task of winning him back.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Settings. Sincerity of star's performance. Climax. Captions.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Tease title and exploit star as sincere and talented. Go after feminine patronage.

DRAWING POWER: Suitable for neighborhood houses or those which have large feminine patronage.

Produced and distributed by Paramount.
Length, seven reels. Released, September, 1927.

Jaws of Steel

Gripping and Replete with Action

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

RIN-TIN-TIN'S legion of friends will like this latest picture of the dog-star, though he is not called upon for as much in the line of heroics as usual. He has a role similar to that of the dog in Jack London's "Call of the Wild," and it is hard to conceive of an animal playing to better advantage.

It is deep melodrama from start to finish, but they never let the action lag, and while at times it is too improbable to be convincing, it is nevertheless always interesting. Rinty first is seen as the puppy pet of the little girl who is crossing the desert with her parents, who are to locate on a newly acquired mining claim. The dog is bounced out of the wagon and proceeds to run wild.

Rinty is next seen as the "killer," charged with the murder of several persons, and having a price on his head. Jason Robards, as the father of the little girl, heads the posse that would do away with the wild dog. Meantime Rinty returns and makes friends with the little girl, who falls ill from loneliness when Rinty again disappears. Only the return of the dog can save the little girl's life, according to the doctor. Rinty is run down and wounded, but is spared because of a message he carries.

The Cast: Rin-Tin-Tin, Jason Robards, Helen Ferguson, Mary Louise Miller, Jack Curtis, Robert Perry, George Connors.

THEME: Melodrama of pet puppy which is lost on the desert and turns wild. Wanted as a killer, he returns to the desert cottage in time to save the baby's life, as the father is out seeking the reward that goes with the dog's death.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The battle between the "killer" and the villain. The chase and wounding of the "killer." The desert scenes.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: The dog-star needs little exploitation, but this one can safely be billed as a real thriller. The many dramatic incidents of the picture. The terrific chase of the whole countryside after Rinty.

DRAWING POWER: Should be good wherever the dog-star is appreciated.

Length, 5,569 feet. Released, September 10, 1927. . .

Des Moines

JIM McGIVERN, who used to be with Universal here, was a visitor at the office last week. He is now with Universal at Indianapolis. Mr. McGivern was called to Des Moines by the serious illness of his mother. Mr. McGivern is a brother of Mrs. Mary Benjamin, formerly secretary and treasurer of the Des Moines Film Board of Trade.

Theatres which have temporarily or indefinitely closed are the Plaza theatre at Dundee, Iowa, and the Opera House at Arlington. Mr. C. W. Lawrence has the Dundee house and A. R. Baird is owner of the Arlington Opera House.

Stanley and Cecil, who have been in partnership at the Rialto theatre at Bedford for some years, have decided to dissolve partnership, with one of the owners taking over the interests of the other. The deal has not yet been consummated.

Manager Shea of the F.B.O. exchange and the one who awarded the prizes in the gold tournament of the Film Board of Trade, of Des Moines, made public announcement of the winners as follows: E. H. Johnson, exhibitor at Audubon, was the champion, defeating Bobby Mitchell of the Paramount office at Omaha. In the consolation match the winner was Mr. Morris, exhibitor at Eagle Grove, while Jimmy Wynn of Educational office at Des Moines, lost to him. Harvey Graham of Bloomfield was winner of the second flight, with Pearl Robbins of the Famous Players sales staff in Des Moines as runnerup. In the third flight, McCullough, Paramount salesman, was winner, with Manager Bill Copeland of the same office as runnerup. In the fourth flight, the winner was Milt Frankel. United Artists salesman, and Harry Cohen, salesman for F.B.O., won second place in this flight. Clyde Pratt, salesman for First National, was winner over Abe Frankel, owner of Riverview Amusement Park and the Casino Theatre in Des Moines, as well as a number of theatres over the state. This was the first time that Abe Frankel, who is one of the veteran showmen of Iowa, had ever played golf, and heartiest congratulations were extended to him on his success in the tournament. Mr. Frankel has been bit by the golf bug BAD, and if anyone wants to sell him pictures now they must meet him on the golf course. Another unusual event of the match is the fact that Mr. Johnson, winner of the championship flight, is also a veteran in years, and he surprised the betters on the match in winning out over the youngsters. He won a golf cup and a wrist watch as prizes.

Two salesmen have been added to the staff of F.B.O. Harry Frankel, formerly salesman for Pathe, is now covering the northern part of the state for F.B.O, while Howard Gould, who also comes from the Pathe office here, is now selling the southern territory for F.B.O.

William Beale, for the past eight years with Pathe as office manager and booker, has been secured by the F.B.O. exchange for the same position at that office. Miss Ollie Reese, who had been secretary to the branch manager, is now the cashier for the exchange.

M. Beatty, booker of the First National office, has returned from his vacation trip.

A number of pictures scheduled for the fall season are running against some unusual competition in the long heat spell which has hit Des Moines and the state, making records unusual for September in high temperature registers. However, the continued warm weather put Iowa corn beyond danger from frost and this spells prosperity for all kinds of business almost immediately.

The Majestic was one of the A. H. Blank houses.

The Plaza and the Rialto at Waterloo have been closed while repairs have been made in both theatres. Quite complete changes were made in both houses, making them both up-to-date in equipment and changing the complete scheme of decoration. The theatres are now open to the public.

Ep. Smith has bought the Majestic theatre at Fort Dodge and is now operating it under the new name of the Polka Dot. Mr. Smith was formerly an exhibitor at Newton, Iowa, and has been for a number of terms the executive secretary of the M.P.T.O.A. of Iowa.

Fred Hinds will continue the operation of the Cresco theatre at Cresco, Iowa. Frank Wewerka, who had negotiated with Mr. Hinds for the ownership of the theatre at Cresco with the plan that Mr. Wewerka should assume the lease of the theatre building which has yet two years to run, failed to conclude the deal.

H. J. Cramer at Chariton, Iowa, opened his new theatre to the public last week. The theatre was christened the Ritz and is listed as one of the finest of the smaller theatres of the state.

Jimmy Shea, manager, with the sales staff of F.B.O., Bill Seymour, Harry Cohen, Ed Ballentyne, Tim Eashman, Bill Naismith and Harry Cohen attended a meeting at Omaha in which conference was held with E. B. Derr, treasurer for F.B.O., from the home office.

The World Theatre at Sioux City is again open to the public. The theatre was reopened last week after having been closed during the summer months for extensive repairs and redecoration. New scenery has been added to the stage, which has been enlarged, and the seating arrangement of the house has been improved and increased.

E. P. Smith has bought the Majestic theatre at Messenger, Iowa.

New York & New Jersey

CHARLES ROSENZWEIG, for the last five years manager of the F.B.O. exchange in New York, will, in the future, supervise the F.B.O. exchanges in Albany and Buffalo, in addition to his duties as manager of the New York exchange, according to an announcement by Lee Marcus, general sales manager of the company.

Mr. Rosenzweig's new appointment in no wise affects the positions of Harry Wineberg, manager of the Albany exchange, and H. T. Dixon, in charge of the Buffalo office.

The latest legitimate house in New York City to join the ranks of the "Little Theatre" movement is the Edyth Totten theatre, 247 West 48th street, where a Vilma Banky film will open Friday evening, Sept. 23.

Invitations are out for the reopening of the new City theatre, 530 Bergenline avenue, Union City, N. J., on Friday evening of this week. This house has been entirely rebuilt by its owners, Edward Madden and Louis Simon, who have spared no expense in the way of making the City a strictly up-to-date theatre.

After an absence of over a month from New York's film curb, the well known Louis Goldberg once again made his appearance this week among the heavy traffic around the entrance of 729 7th avenue. Since Mr. Goldberg's departure from the Mayer & Schneider circuit, for whom he did all booking, his duties as circuit manager for Steiner & Blinderman have kept him down on the East Side most of the time.

David J. Lusting, another well known theatre manager, was also a "Curb" visitor on Tuesday.

The young daughter of Nathan Mass, proprietor of the Lincoln theatre, Lincoln place and Bedford avenue, died suddenly last Saturday after a short illness. The local film trade offers its sympathy.

Leonia, N. J., has at last graduated from a thriving Jersey community into a full fledged town that has its own movie, for on September 29, the Leonia theatre, a house of ten or twelve hundred seating capacity, will open its doors to a public which has had to seek its entertainment elsewhere in the past. L. Shoen is the builder, owner and operator.

On the 50th street and Seventh avenue corner of the Winter Garden building a new store has made its appearance with a big sign over the door reading—"Nuts"—thus guaranteeing to some in that locality rations for the coming winter.

Met Al Brandt, another of the Brandt Brothers of Brooklyn, last Tuesday in the building at 735 7th avenue. Al says that their Duffield theatre, in the downtown shopping section of Brooklyn, has recently installed a new Wurlitzer organ. Also that their Terminal theatre, 9th street and Fourth avenue, same boro, is experimenting with a new jazz orchestra number on the stage, much to the delight of Fourth avenue citizens.

It is reported that Keith's may put their Riviera theatre, St. Johns place, Brooklyn, on the market if the right figures come along.

Some East New York, or perhaps more correctly, Brownsville, exhibitors may have cause for worry when Loew's new theatre under construction on Pitkin avenue is completed. Buildings are being razed in preparation for the site, which is said to be one recently abandoned by Publix.

M. L. Meyer, better known as "Mat," has joined the ranks of Commonwealth's local sales organization after four years' association with the Pathe-Associated (now Pathe-DeMille) exchange. Mr. Meyer has a faithful following among exhibitors in Brooklyn.

Phil Meyer, brother of M. L. and long associated with the Pathe-Associated exchange as New York sales manager, is doing very nicely in the same capacity for Jack Bellman, of Hollywood Pictures' local exchange.

Not all supply companies are located in the neighborhood of the film exchanges. There is one over in the Brownsville section of Brooklyn which has at its helm Al Brandt and S. Berkowitz, both well known among the trade.

Sam Perry, Englewood, New Jersey, exhibitor, is having his troubles these days with some of the help. Sam would not renew his contract under certain specified conditions and the help walked out—mostly musicians, Mr. Perry advises.

The first kind words ever expressed by Al Moley n connection with Brooklyn's National League players were spoken when Dazzy Vance trimmed the Pirates early this week. It's hardly necessary to state that Al is the fast working booker at the Prudential Film delivery offices.

Central Penn

DETAILS of an interview that was granted to him by Benito Mussolini, Premier of Italy, in Palacco Chigi, in Rome, on July 25, are told by Peter Magaro, veteran motion picture theatre owner, of Harrisburg, Pa., who has just returned from a trip of several months abroad. With him at the time of the interview was Mr. Magaro's daughter, Miss Elizabeth Magaro. The meeting was arranged by United States Ambassador Henry P. Fletcher, a personal friend of Mr. Magaro, whose boyhood home was in Greencaste, Pa., near Harrisburg.

The theatre man said the ruler of Italy rose from his seat and advanced half way across the room to greet the visitors, and smiled broadly at them. He started to address them in perfect English, but when he learned that Mr. Magaro was a native-born Italian, the conversation was continued in that language.

"He impressed me as the Roosevelt of Italy," said Mr. Magaro. "There is not the pomp and ceremony about him that one would expect. He listens with all the seriousness of a man used to grappling with big problems, but he waxes into broad smiles as he begins speaking of himself."

Mr. Magaro, who established the first motion picture theatre in Harrisburg about a quarter of a century ago, is a former member-large of the executive committtee of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. In May, 1925, the Loew interests bought the Regent Theatre, Harrisburg, from Mr. Magaro, and have since been conducting it as Loew's Regent.

Peg Glase, cameraman of the Franklin Theatre Company, which operates nine theatres in Reading, accompanied an excursion of 3,000 Reading poor children, who were the guests of the Reading Times, on an excursion up the Hudson River, from New York City, late in August. Four special trains took the children to and from New York, and the river trip was made on board three steamboats. Movies were taken at various points of interest during the trip, and the pictures were shown afterward in some of the Reading theatres through the cooperation of Manager John H. Cook, representing the Franklin company.

The orchestra that played all summer in the open air theatre in Rolling Green Amusement Park, near Sunbury, has been engaged for the Fall and Winter season to play in the Victoria picture theatre in that city. The arrangement was made in behalf of the Victoria by Grant F. Treon, the house manager, who announced that the music programs to be given in connection with the pictures in the coming season will be much improved.

November 1 is the date set tentatively for the opening of the new Capitol Theatre which the Comerford Amusement Company, of Scranton, is erecting in Pottsville. The building, which is to cost about $500,000, has been under construction since last Fall. It is a three-story brick, concrete and steel structure, and will have a seating capacity of 2,700.

William H. Wentz, owner of the Majestic Theatre, Catasauqua, had a cameraman shoot pictures of the recent carnival local children held on the municipal playgrounds.

Gemmell & Billmeyer, of York, have been chosen as the architects for the new $200,000 theatre to be erected in Hanover by Fred G. Bitner, of the latter city, in association with the Nathan Appell Enterprises, of York. The site has been cleared of old buildings, and the excavation work has begun. The theatre will be known as the State and provision will be made for two stores in the building.

Arthur Snyder, former manager of the Scenic Theatre, York, but now manager of a chain of theatres operated by his brother, Henry Snyder, with headquarters in Philadelphia, returned to York to spend a week-end, renewing old acquaintances, early in September.

Construction work is expected to start this Fall on a new theatre, which a group of Easton, Pa., capitalists, headed by Clayton Buss, an experienced theatre man, propose to erect on the site of Nos. 44 to 54 North Third Street, in that city. Two of the properties that belonged to Paris Brothers and Paul M. Thomas, respectively, are reported already to have been acquired by the Buss group, which is understood to be negotiating for the third property, owned by Ralph R. Pittinger. The properties have a total frontage of 90 feet, and extend back 240 feet. Plans for the theatre are under preparation.

In the same city the Wilmer & Vincent theatre company have for some time contemplated the erection of a large theatre, capable of seating 3,100 persons. The structure will include a four-story office building in the front, the entrance to the theatre to be through the first floor of this part of the edifice. The leases on the properties covering the proposed site will expire between April 1 and July 1, and it is anticipated that construction work will begin shortly after the latter date.

Denver

BACHECHI BROS.' new theatre in Albuquerque has been named the "Kimo." The theatre is rapidly nearing completion—in fact only the finishing touches need be put on before the gala opening, which is scheduled for Monday, September 19th, 1927. The new house is replete with Indian decorations and designs.

Harry Huffman has again sprung something new in the way of decorative features at the Aladdin theatre, at least as far as Denver fans are concerned. Mr. Huffman has placed a few score twinkling stars in the blue sky ceiling of the theatre.

Normand B. Bosley has accepted a position as assistant manager of the local branch of Universal. Mr. Bosley comes from the Los Angeles branch of Universal. He succeeds Chas. Gillen, resigned.

The Denver Film Board of Trade and Board of Arbitration has resumed regular weekly meetings. During the summer months meetings were held every other week.

A. V. E. Wessels, owner and manager of the Alden theatre, Steamboat Springs, Colo., arrived in Denver last Thursday to transact business with exchanges.

The Midwest Theatres Company and the offices of Max Schubach have moved from 202 McMann Building to Suite 631 Denham Bldg., at 18th and California. The Midwest Theatres Company owns and operates a chain of theatres in the Denver territory.

R. W. Dettman, a new-comer among exhibitors, has purchased the American theatre of Culbertson, Neb., from Mrs. W. H. Burt. Mr. Dettman's home is in Imperial, Neb., where he has operated an electrical equipment and radio store for some time. His brother owns the theatre in Imperial. He was a Denver visitor this week, getting acquainted with exchange managers and bookers.

A. G. Edwards, Producers' manager, left for Deadwood, S. D., Tuesday night to spend a few days visiting exhibitors in that district.

Mrs. Frank Kelley, manager of the Empress theatre, Salida, Colo., spent the week in Denver spending most of her time visiting film row.

Able Davis, manager of Tiffany, returned from Salt Lake City Thursday after an absence of two weeks.

Albany

JOE SAPERSTEIN, manager of Harmanus-Bleecker Hall, had a range finder in front of his theatre during the week, which he explained to friends, enabled him to locate his enemies, even though they might be miles away. The apparatus is part of a collection of war material used for exploitation purposes. Mr. Saperstein has resumed his amateur nights, which proved so profitable last winter.

When Bill Smalley of Cooperstown hits Albany, as he does about once or twice a month, buying for his chain of theatres, he works far into the night, with the result that he is rarely, if ever, up and around much before noon when he is in the capital city. Mr. Smalley paid a visit to Albany last week and bought much of the new fall product.

Once more the film boys are chasing Bill Shirley, of Schenectady, who has decided to re-enter the theatre business and will reopen the Van Curler, either the latter part of this month or the fore part of October.

Mrs. C. H. Buckley, wife of the manager of the Leland Theatre in Albany, was almost as busy as her husband during the latter part of the past week, for she was one of several women who handled the municipal flower show. Incidentally, Mr. Buckley himself took a day off on Thursday and attended an Elks' clambake at Cohoes.

The American theatre in Canton, a Papayanakos house, has been completely redecorated and refurnished throughout. A new heating plant has been installed and a new lighting arrangement has also been placed.

Now that the Dutchess County Fair is over, F. L. Asher, who runs the Star theatre at Rhinebeck, is dividing his time between his coal business and his theatre. According to Mr. Asher, the fair was one of the most successful in man yyears.

Louis A. Freiberg, one time resident of Omaha, but who has been employed as the booker at the local Fox exchange, resigned during the past week to become a salesman for F. B. O. out of this city. Abe Van Dusen, recent booker at the F. B. O. exchange, has taken Mr. Freiberg's place at the Fox offices.

Bert Griffin, proprietor of the theatre in Red Hook, endeavored to tell the film salesmen last week that the detour around his village, while good roads construction was under way, will injure his business, and that prices should be lowered to him. Just how well he was able to convince the film salesmen is a question.

Herman S. Vineberg, who was one time manager of the Mark Strand and also of the Albany theatre in Albany, was named last week as manager of the Palace theatre in Pittsfield. He succeeds Fred W. Homans. Mr. Vineberg has had about fifteen years' experience with theatres and, in addition to houses in Albany, he also served with theatres in both Troy and Schenectady.

Julius Boxhorn, who conducts the orchestra at the Mark Strand in Albany, made a stop at the State Capitol last week, but it was not for the purpose of calling on Governor Al Smith. While Mr. Roxhorn is a good musician, he is far from a mechanic and so when his car suddenly stopped at the Capitol he was left stranded high and dry.

Give John Garry a hammer and a chisel and he is happy at the Clinton Square theatre, in Albany. All of which means that Mr. Garry spent a pleasant week assisting the carpenters in laying the new floor in the lobby.

Film salesmen declare that they should be equipped with an airplane and field glasses whenever they start out to sell Lew Fischer, of Fort Edward. Mr. Fischer travels between the four villages in which his houses are located and never seems to be at home.

Without taking the trouble to notify his brother until after the ceremony was over, Leon Herman, a salesman connected with the Universal exchange here, was married in New York City last Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Herman returned to Albany the fore part of the week and have been spending much of their time since in locating an apartment.

Motion pictures are being used in quite a number of instances this fall at night shows conducted along with county fairs. The pictures are attracting large crowds and the innovation is apparently successful.

Julius Berinstein, owner of the Colonial and Hudson theatres in Albany, is spending about one-half of his time these days with his theatre and the other half in polishing his car. Apparently he is more inclined to talk automobile than theatre.

Milton Caplon has succeeded Murray Ross as salesman at the local Pathe exchange.

St. Louis

THE Empire Theatre building, including the picture show with all of its furniture and equipment in Adrian, Mo., was destroyed by fire early on September 15. The loss was placed at $7,500, and is partly covered by insurance.

Dr. John O'Connell, 2549 Woodson Road, Overland, Mo., has decided to postpone, until next Spring, the construction of the theatre and store building he plans to erect at the Woodson Road and the Creve Cœur Street car tracks in Overland. The building will be 2-story, 50 by 120, and 43 by 70 feet.

It has been learned that the promoters of the theatre building for South Grand Boulevard, the plans for which were prepared by Clarence E. Stevens, 5323 South Grand Boulevard, have decided to abandon the project. The preliminary sketches contemplated a building two-story and basement, 120 by 120 feet, to cost about $75,000.

A film made up of shots of the preparation of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh for his historic trans-Atlantic flight from New York to Paris in the Spirit of St. Louis, his take-off from New York and his reception in Europe, etc., has been presented to Mayor Victor J. The Kinema Theatre, Tallula, Ill., has been bought by Joe Beck from L. E. Schaeffer.

The Gayety Theatre, Fourteenth Street and Locust Boulevard, St. Louis, closed its doors the night of September 17. It had been attempting to get by with the Lazone Players, a stock burlesque company, but could not buck the intense heat and other unfavorable conditions.

Benny Rodgers, of Gotham Pictures Corporation, was a visitor of the week, calling on Jack Weil, who handles Gotham Pictures in this territory.

Tom Reed of Duquoin, Ill., and John Marlowe of Herrin, Ill., were among the out-of-town exhibitors seen along picture row this week.

The picture show at Cassville, Mo., was closed for a short time because of an epidemic of diphtheria in the town, but was later allowed to re-open, with the proviso that children of grade school age and younger shall not be permitted to attend. The grade school has been closed.

Seattle

AS a result of a decision made by the general offices of West Coast Theatres in this city last week, the Colonial Theatre, in Tacoma, has been changed from its former 25c two-pictures-a-week policy into a 50c theatre booking long-run features. This means a change for the Rialto Theatre, which will bring the latter house the leading program pictures for a week's engagement, augmenting the policy of the neighboring Broadway Theatre, with its films and stage revues.

D. C. Millward, president of the De. Luxe-Tiffany exchange, last week was receiving the congratulations of local film and theatre men upon the handsome projection room that is a part of the new Tiffany quarters at 2419 Second Avenue. The room is reputed to be one of the finest in any exchange in the nation, and has carpeted floor, roomy and fully equipped booth, decorated walls and extremely comfortable divan chairs.

Mrs. Robert W. Bender, wife of the popular managing director of the Columbia Theatre, this week, is en route to Seattle after a three weeks' trip to Atlantic City as the official chaperone of "Miss Seattle" and "Miss Spokane" in the Atlantic City Bathing Beauty Pageant. On the way to the Pageant two weeks ago, the party stopped off for a weeks' booking at Universal's Rialto Theatre in Washington, D. C., which is now managed by Frank Steffy, for many years director of the Coliseum Theatre in this city.

Reports received from Bellingham last week indicate that the Grand Theatre, newly remodeled, will be ready for its Fall opening within the next few weeks. The house has been entirely reseated and remodeled, and will open under the management of Loren D. Wahl with a first-run picture policy.

The second units of Seattle's new film row, at Second Avenue and Battery Street, was completed early in September, and is already housing Tiffany Production at 2419 Second Avenue, Universal Film Company at 2421 Second Avenue, Cooperative Exchanges at 2417 Second Avenue, and Educational at 2415 Second. A special exhibitor's booking alcove and salesmen's private office is a distinctive feature of Manager Wallace Rucker's Educational office, which is among the most complete on the new row.

Herschel Stuart, general manager of the West Coast Theatres in the Pacific Northwest, last week, was host to Harold B. Franklin, president of West Coast; Mike Gore, vice-president; and a number of other West Coast executives who came to the city on a business deal. The visiting party spent several days here prior to their return to Los Angeles.

Harold B. Windus, for the last several seasons head organist at the Pantages Theatre in this city, last week was appointed to the same position at the New Orpheum Theatre by Manager Carl Reiter. At the new house Mr. Windus presides at the console of a rising Wurlitzer.

Two screen comedians made personal appearances in the Pacific Northwest during the last two weeks, and were particularly successful as box office cards, according to reports. Canada

ARRIVING at the Bedford Theatre, 3301 Yonge Street, Toronto, Ontario, on September 15, Jack Laver, manager, made the discovery that yeggmen had ruined a perfectly good safe, but had been unable to open it, during the previous night. The sum of $500 in the safe was untouched.

The robbers gained entry through an exit door. The combination handle was smashed off and the safe was rolled over on its side. The theatre is a handsome suburban house operated by Famous Players.

Because of the serious illness of his wife in the Western Hospital, Toronto, William Bach, general sales manager of British First National, has been detained in the Dominion several weeks after he had planned to return to London, England.

Mr. Bach is famed throughout Canadian film circles, having been with Canadian Universal at Toronto for years, after which he became Canadian district manager for First National. His promotion to the British office took place about 18 months ago. Mr. and Mrs. Bach had been visiting many friends in their old home city.

The Griffin Theatre, at St. Catharines, Ontario, is now on a six-day a week policy, after having been opened on Saturdays only for more than two months. The full-week policy was resumed with the presentation of "Firemen, Save My Child," by Manager G. J. Forhan.

The Grover Theatre, on Danforth Avenue, Toronto, is being opened as a suburban house, to serve a rapidly-growing residential district. This house is being opened by the B. & F. Theatre Circuit of Toronto, which is affiliated with Famous Players Canadian Corp. The proprietors of this circuit are Sam Bloom and Sam Fine, veteran local exhibitors, who are now conducting a chain of Toronto neighborhood houses under the auspices of Famous Players.

The Grover makes the 120th theatre operated, leased or owned by Famous Players in Canada.

Murphy, manager of the Toronto branch of the F B O of Canada, who was re-elected. The secretary-treasurer is Harry Law, manager of the Toronto branch of Canadian Universal.

Reports showed that a number of business disputes had been settled by arbitration but it was pointed out that comparatively few hearings had been conducted because of the generally satisfactory situation to be found in the Ontario theatre field.

After the painting and carpentering crews of Famous Players Canadian Corp., under the direction of David Stewart, Toronto, foreman, had finished $5,000 worth of work in the Grand Theatre, London, Ontario, this veteran house was re-opened by Manager Minhinnick.

Manager Harry Dahn of the Capitol Theatre, Montreal, Quebec, had a birthday party when the theatre observed the completion of seven years of service. The Capitol, one of the largest in Eastern Canada, is owned by Famous Players.

H. M. Thomas, Vancouver, B. C., Western Division manager of Famous Players Canadian Corp., was visiting the Toronto headquarters of the company during the week of September 11 to arrange details in connection with the fall programmes in Western Canadian theatres.

Two paragraphs appeared in these columns in the issues of September 9 and 16 to the effect that Messrs. Moisan and Tanguay, proprietors of the Victoria theatre, Quebec, had been denied a building permit for a new theatre in Belvedere Ward. This was in error, and to quote Mr. Moisan: "A bylaw was passed prohibiting the building of any new theatre in Belvedere Ward but only after we had our permit and only for the future. This does not affect us in any way in the building of our new house, which will be called the Cartier, and which will cater to neighborhood trade. The Victoria will continue as a first run theatre."

Luigi Romanelli, conductor of the Tivoli Theatre orchestra, Toronto, for years, received a noisy welcome on his return from a tour of Europe. The members of the orchestra dressed in carnival costume and escorted him from the railway station to his home in a motor truck. A blaring concert was played on the front lawn and the musicians finally paraded him through the house and eventually out on the roof.

Cleveland

EDWARD J. HIEHLE, for the past five years manager of the Hippodrome and Putnam theatres at Marietta for the Cambridge and Marietta Amusement Company, has resigned his position and taken over the management of the Auditorium and Alhambra theatres at Newark, Ohio, for the newly organized Midland Theatres Company, of which G. E. Hayward is president. It is the intention of the new company to build a $175,000 show house in Newark in the near future. George Fenberg, who for the past eleven years has had the lease on the Auditorium and Alhambra theatres in Newark, will take a much needed rest and try to regain his health, which has been poor for the past two years. Fred E. Johnson, manager of the Colonial and Strand theatres in Cambridge, has been appointed managing director for the four houses in the two cities controlled by the Cambridge and Marietta Amusement Company. He will handle the Hippodrome and Putnam of Marietta from Cambridge. A resident manager will be installed at Marietta who will work under Johnson. Mr. Hiehle took charge of the Newark houses on September 15th, but he will not move to his new location until next spring.

Mrs. L. B. Yoerns is greatly improving her Bedford theatre, Bedford. She is increasing the seating capacity of the house, adding 400 seats. A new and complete stage is being installed, and when completed, Mrs. Yoerns will offer vaudeville two days a week in addition to her regular picture program. Complete interior decorations and changes in exterior elevation are also being done, so that the Bedford will be able to compete with any neighborhood house in the outlying districts.

G. F. Hammond is president of the Downtown Amusement Company of Youngstown, which was recently taken over by the Princess theatre from the Renner Realty Company. Morris Weintraub was the former lessee and manager of the Princess.

J. S. Beck, formerly of the State theatre, Urichsville, is building a new motion picture theatre in Dover. The structure is two stories high, and will contain two stores and four office suites in addition to a 625-seat theatre. The entire structure is of Spanish design, and the interior decorations are being carried out in Spanish. Stage equipment is being installed, not for large vaudeville acts, but sufficiently large to take care of presentation numbers. The house is scheduled to be finished December 1st.

The whole membership of the local National Theatre Supply Company and their families had a picnic last Saturday at the lake shore summer home of Miss Zita Flory, of the office force. There were thirty-five guests present. Games, swimming, and eating were all indulged in and everybody had a fine time.

The picnic of the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors Associated died of aenemia. Some time ago there was talk of an outing, but it never materialized. Now the State Convention is too near for the local to plan an outing.

The Colonial-Strand employees, at Cambridge, Ohio, were recently entertained by Manager and Mrs. F. E. Johnson with a big picnic and outing at Rock Hill Park, six miles from the city. A most excellent dinner was served by Mrs. Johnson, with lemonade and iced watermelon as the afternoon menu. Races and horse shoe pitching for prizes took up the afternoon, with the Strand employees copping most of them. There were over 30 in the gathering.

D. Sidney has arrived in Cleveland to take charge of the local office of the Ad-Vance Trailer Service Corporation. He is located at 219 Film Exchange Bldg.

The Circle theatre, now in the Loew circuit, went Chinese last week. Lanterns and umbrellas decorated the marquee. Inside, Chinese hangings, lanterns and incense created more atmosphere.

Al Green, in command of the State theatre orchestra, has just returned from an automobile trip. Green believes in the slogan, "See America First." Only he is even more specific, and spent his vacation time exploring the byways of Ohio.

The auditing department of Loew's Ohio Theatres, Inc., has moved to large and spacious quarters on the fourth floor of the State Theatre Bldg., quite distinct from the other departments of the organization.

Ernest H. Hunt, organist at Loew's State theatre, is trying his talent as a camper in the wilds of Canada.

George Rider, who has been managing the Liberty theatre, has been transferred to the management of the Mall. Both are units of the Loew's Ohio Theatres organization.

Philip Spitalny and His Boys opened an engagement at Reade's Hippodrome last Sunday with a rousing cheer and an unmistakable welcome. Phil and His Boys have been playing in Boston all summer.

Detroit

DIFFERENCES between the musicians and exhibitors here have been settled by arbitration. Under the new wage scale agreement, the musicians receive an increase ranging from two to five dollars per man, depending on the size of the house and hours. There is no dispute with the operators' organization this season as the present wage plan does not expire until next year.

A permanent injunction restraining the Lewin Development Co., from calling their theatre at Linwood and Philadelphia streets the Orient was rendered by Judge Fred S. Lamb, August 18, in a decision recorded at the Detroit circuit court. It was granted on a petition filed by Charles H. Miles Theatre Corporation, April 19. The plaintiffs in the suit set forth that they were the owners of a large downtown theatre being erected on West Adams which they had named the Oriental and contended the similarity of names would mislead the public. Incidentally the Orient was leased to Lester Briggs last week and he has already decided to call it the Oriole.

Gus Greening, general manager of the Joe Cosco circuit in Detroit, has announced the appointment of Carl Edwards as manager of the De Luxe and Max Chetkin as manager of the Gratiot. The second baseball game—"combat de blood"—between exchange representatives and exhibitors in Kansas City was "washed out" by a hard rain in the third inning with the exhibitors leading 6 to 3. The contest was scheduled to be played off next Saturday, providing the weather is more favorable.

Bob Withers, Enterprise branch manager, and Eph Rosen, Tiffany branch manager, were out in the territory hustling business this week.

Mrs. June Medcalf, secretary of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri, returned from a vacation in Southern Missouri.

Ed Safier, special representative for Warner Bros., was a Kansas City visitor.

Guy Bradford, formerly of St. Louis, has joined the Fox sales staff.

The Pathe branch office has arranged a long booking desk where exhibitors can sit down and "talk it over" with the booker.

Bill Warner, First National branch manager, is telling movie row this week that he drove his car from St. Louis to Kansas City, a distance of 256 miles, in 6 hours and 30 minutes, beating the fastest passenger train by more than an hour.

All Kansas City theatres have been forced to work the cooling systems overtime this week, due to unusually hot weather.

Arthur H. Cole, Paramount branch manager, and J. H. Levering, film veteran, have contributed their services in the making of a film titled, "The Man Who Didn't Care," which will be shown at the Newman Theatre in conjunction with the annual charity drive in Kansas City. A pre-view of the picture was held at the Newman.

Milwaukee

M. R. BROUNZEL, formerly associated with the Detroit branch of M-G-M, is now traveling northern Wisconsin territory for F B O.

Louise Rossa, manager of the Dougles Theatre at Racine, was a Milwaukee visitor during the past week.

A marriage of interest to Milwaukee film folks took place on Sept. 19 when A. L. Geyer, manager of the Owl theatre at Pewaukee, and Miss Erma Pecor of the local First National office were married.

H. S. Wales of the Rialto theatre at Sharon was in the city on Thursday on business.

Harold Koehler has recently been appointed booker of the Pathe exchange. Oscar Caspari of that office has been transferred to the sales control department.

A. C. Accola of the Bonham theatre at Prairie du Sac again flew to Milwaukee on business. He has promised his friends in the exchanges a trip up just as soon as they gain enough confidence in him as a pilot.

F. M. DiLorenzo, manager of the Tiffany exchange, is driving about in a new Paige sedan.

Exhibitor Phipps of the Cozy theatre at Iron River was in the city on Tuesday signing up the new product for his theatre.

Tom McConnell has joined the sales force of the local Fox branch and has been assigned to cover southern Wisconsin. Mr. McConnell was formerly on the staff of M-G-M's Indianapolis branch.

The Pathe office force enjoyed a picnic at Cedar Lake on Saturday last. The entire staff met at the exchange and was driven out in cars of the various members. It will be a long time before they forget the good time they had at that picnic.

Charles Guelson of the Badger theatre at Stoughton came to Milwaukee this week to visit the exchanges and straighten out some of his business affairs.

Charles Washicheck, manager of the Pearl, Grace, Layton Park, and Rivoli theatres returned from an extended trip through the west on Wednesday.

A. C. Wilson, traveling auditor, who has been spending the past three weeks in the Fox exchange left on Saturday for Memphis.

A new $10,000 Kilgen organ has been installed in the Classic theatre at Watertown, of which Bryant Draginis is manager. A new canopy has also been added to the theatre.

William VanDyke, manager of the Bijou and Vaudette theatres at KaKukauna, was a recent Film Row visitor.

The Columbia theatre, under direction of Sam Ludwig, has been redecorated and remodeled.

Harold Sliter, son of manager F. G. Sliter of the Fox exchange, has been promoted from the accessory department, where he has been for the past year, to position as checker for shows in Wisconsin and upper Michigan.

Harvey Hanson of the Palace theatre at Antigo was in the city recently and visited several exchanges while here.

The bowling league is getting under way. A preliminary meeting has been called for Tuesday. It is contemplated to increase the league from four teams to six.

"Dad" Walcott of the Majestic theatre at Racine stopped off at exchanges for a brief visit on Tuesday.

Clyde Eckhardt, district manager for Fox, spent Wednesday in the Milwaukee branch.

A. H. McLoughlin, Mid-west division manager for Tiffany and R. Flothow, special representative from New York of the Third Dimension pictures, were in the city on Thursday, at which time they gave a special screening under the auspices of the Tiffany exchange of the Third Dimension pictures for exhibitors of the city.

Art Roberts, formerly with F B O, is now associated with the Fox exchange traveling southern Wisconsin territory.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Gilman and child of Plymouth were in the city early in the week. Mr. Gilman is manager of the Princess theatre at Plymouth.

Minneapolis

THE New Logan theatre, operated in North Minneapolis by W. A. Steffes, president of the Twin Cities Theatre Owners Association, has been reopened after having been closed all summer while extensive alterations were in progress. Mr. Steffes has added a balcony seating 300 and this brings the seating capacity of the house close to 1,000.

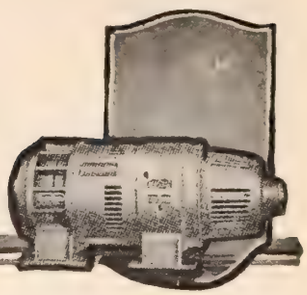
F & R have reopened the Grand theatre at Northfield, Minn., after completing extensive alterations. The theatre will remain under the active management of E. Dilley although it was recently added to the F & R chain.

The Minneapolis branch office of Universal had a two day visit last week from Lou Metzger, sales manager of the company. Metzger is on a tour of important exchanges of the company.

Saturday vaudeville, which was discontinued during the summer months, has been resumed at the Park theatre, Brainerd, Minn.

The Colonial theatre at Watertown, S. D., which was recently purchased by Finkelstein and Ruben, has been completely remodeled and just reopened.

The Alhambra theatre company is reported to be considering the erection of a new $30,000 theatre at Garrison, N. D.



The Orpheum theatre at Ryder, N. D., has been reopened by Earle Fredeen, after having been closed since last fall. A new heating plant has been installed and a number of other changes made.

The Garrick theatre in Minneapolis, which has been closed all summer, reopens this week with "Beau Geste," the picture which was road-showed in Minneapolis last winter at the Metropolitan. The Garrick is an F & R house in the loop district.

Inquiries and Comments

Port Masks and Changeover Shutters

CHARLES H. HOWELL, projectionist at the Everett Theatre, Middleton, Del., evidently has been studying some back numbers of the department because he now comes forward with a suggestion for some trouble on which Robert Block of Philadelphia wrote in early in the year.

Block, at that time, complained of stray light which was being projected to the top of the proscenium arch and attributed it to some fault in the projection lens of his Powers Projector. He was using Mazda equipment, although this has nothing to do with the problem.

The suggestion we made when answering Block's letter was that he place his eye in the path of the beam of stray light and sight back along it to the projector in order to see just where this light was coming from. After that it would be simply a matter of eliminating it.

An Obvious Remedy

Friend Howell now comes forward with a perfectly simple remedy, and one which should have been obvious to anyone giving thought to the problem. It is as follows:

"Dear Sir: I was looking over the February numbers of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, and saw where Robert G. Block of Philadelphia was having trouble with stray light being projected to the front of the theatre.

"He can easily eliminate this if he will close up the port opening in the front wall, leaving just space enough for the main beam of light being projected to the screen.

"In my own projection room, I covered the port opening with a piece of cardboard and then marked on it the outline of the light beam. After cutting out this hole, I used that cardboard in making one of tin, which I placed in the port to cover up the excess opening.

"I am using the same equipment as Mr. Block, and I find that one of these masks on each port hole solved this problem very satisfactorily.

Charles H. Howell."

Which goes to show that there is such a thing as getting too close to a thing to see it clearly. Howell, instead of looking for the source of the trouble as we did, simply took steps to render the stray light ineffective.

Evidently Block, also, like ourselves, was too close to see this simple remedy.

Other Ways of Masking

Howell's suggestion immediately recalls a number of other ways, probably more effective, of doing the same thing.

Where changeover devices as, for example, the Strong Magnetic Changeover, is used, it is common to place them on the front wall of the projection room so that they cover the port opening.

The projector beam is then passed through the aperture of the device and the surrounding framework to mask out any stray light. As a matter of fact, they did the job of making only too well because, frequently, the 2½-in. diameter opening in the old changeover was too small to accommodate the full beam, so that sometimes appreciable light was lost on this framework.

This model has since been abandoned and replaced with another which, in addition to certain minor mechanical improvements, has an aperture which measures, if we recall correctly, 5 inches in diameter so that there is little likelihood of light loss being encountered in this respect.

There is, however, great danger of this aperture being too large, at least for use on motionpicture projectors, where the beam ordinarily is relatively small. Any excess opening in this changeover, therefore, immediately opens the likelihood of stray light being passed.

Such changeover devices are called upon to meet a variety of conditions, ranging from motion picture projection to that of effects as obtained from the Brenkert Effect Machine. Where the diameter of the beam from a motion picture projector is approximately 2½ in. in diameter with a half-size lens, the useful beam from an effect projector may be as large as 4 in. in diameter (for special 4-in. diameter projection lenses), so that one device will seldom meet all conditions.

Iris Shutter for Masking

There is a simple way of overcoming this difficulty, and that is to mount an iris shutter (of, say, 4½-in. size) on the front wall, after which the size of the opening can be regulated to meet each condition of projection.

Such shutters cost in the neighborhood of $15.00 each and, while this may seem like an expensive method of obtaining a comparatively simple result, still the flexibility of these devices is something to be considered. It is also possible to obtain second-hand shutters for the same purpose, since they need not be in first-class mechanical condition for this service.

Frequent attempts have been made to use iris shutters for changeover purposes, but there are a number of objectives to their use in this manner.

Their opening and closing action, for one thing, is relatively slow, and they are sometimes inclined to join. It is also difficult to close them light tight unless they are closed tightly so as to wedge the blades together. All in all, they are not satisfactory for quick changeover work.

Home-made Shutters

No small number of projectionists take great delight in making shutters to conform with their own ideas, and the writer recently inspected what was intended to be a combination mask and changeover shutter constructed on the principle of an iris with the exception that it had but 4 or 5 blades so mounted as to give an extremely quick opening and closing action on a slight operating movement.

The intention was to place one over each port opening and join both together with an arm long enough to stretch from one projector port to the other. Opening one shutter (by hand) automatically closes the other and vice versa.

Other projectionists will strip changeover shutters from double dissolving stereopticon lanterns and effect projectors which have become badly battered from rough or long usage and impress them into motion picture service, although just how satisfactory these results are is a matter of opinion and depends, to a large extent, upon who is doing the work.

In view of the fact that magnetic changeover devices are available, it is truly remarkable how many projectionists prefer to make their own hand-operated shutters, claiming that while the electric types are all right up to a certain point, still the manual types are thoroughly satisfactory.

Just why this is so, we are at a loss to understand, unless it be that the hand-operated shutters are always positive in their action. The electric types, on the other hand, are certainly more flexible and, indeed, all projectors can be inter-connected so that no matter where the projectionist may stand the closing of switch will open one machine and close another.

In this connection, a new form of electric shutter has appeared recently which has both electric and manual controls so that this device should be able to remove all objections.

Georgia Theatre to be Rebuilt

Now that Gortatowsky Brothers' new Albany Theatre has opened, their Liberty Theatre, which has been operated at the corner of Broad and Jackson Streets, Albany, Ga., for several years, is to be completely renovated immediately. During the next two or three weeks the Liberty will be closed while decorators, painters and other artisans are at work.

Stanley-Crandell Open New 4,000 Seat Baltimore Theatre

THE Stanley Theatre, built on the site of the old Academy of Music, North Howard Street near Franklin, here, costing about $2,500,000, will be opened Friday night, September 23, at 8:30 o'clock for invited guests and the public.

This house was built by the Stanley-Crandell Company, Washington, D. C., a subsidiary company of the Stanley Company of America. The playhouse is of concrete, brick and steel, and is of fireproof construction throughout.

It was designed by the Hoffman-Henon Company, of Philadelphia. The auditorium of the structure measures 120 by 250 feet, and the general design is along Romanesque lines arranged to meet modern conditions.

The seating capacity is 4,000.

The officers of the Stanley-Crandell Company are: Harry M. Crandell, executive vice-president; Joseph P. Morgan, general manager; John J. Payette, supervisor of theatres; Guy Wonders, formerly manager of the Rivoli, here, assistant to Mr. Payette, and Bernard Depkin, Jr., resident manager of the Stanley.

The music at the playhouse will be furnished by an orchestra of thirty-five solo artists conducted by the Iula Brothers, Felice S., formerly conductor of music at the Rivoli, and Robert Paul, who conducted the Park Symphony orchestra during the past year.

The concert master will be Max Rosenstein, and Jules Sims will be the concert cellist.

Roland Toner was the construction superintendent for the Hoffman-Henon Company.

Skouras' Granada To Be Subsequent Run

The Granada is the name selected for the theatre on Gravois Avenue at Ellenwood Avenue, St. Louis, which will be opened by the St. Louis Amusement Company within a very few weeks.

The new house will seat about 2,000 persons, and will be among the largest of the outlying theatres operated by Skouras Brothers and Harry Koplar.

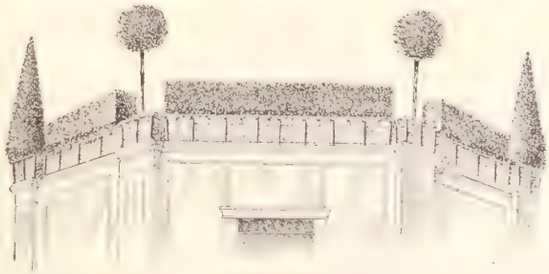
It is planned to use this house as a subsequent run picture palace. It will get the big features immediately after the Missouri and Ambassador, the big first-run houses of Skouras Brothers Enterprises.

There will be a 10-piece orchestra in the pit while atmospheric presentations and high-class vaudeville acts will also be featured on the program.

The feature picture will be changed twice weekly, similar to the arrangement at the West End Lyric and Lyric Skydome.

Efficiency Makes Economy Says, H. J. Yates

"Efficiency makes economy and economy helps the entire industry—and our factories are highly efficient," says Herbert J. Yates, president of the Consolidated Film Industries, Inc.



"The efficiency which Consolidated has introduced into the laboratory business needs no exposition. It is apparent in the appearance and equipment of our seven modern plants."

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"The Garden of Allah"—Metro-Goldwyn, Embassy Theatre, New York City

American: "At least two reasons why you should put 'Garden of Allah' on your 'must see' list. One is simply awe-inspiring and breath-taking shots of desert and heart of Algiers, other splendid acting of Petrovich. . . . Beautiful long shots of minarets, approaching of caravan, glorious oasis in desert and Garden of Allah itself. Audience applauded spontaneously, which is praise enough from allegedly hard-boiled first-nighters."

Telegram: "Ingram may safely be said to have scored another triumph. . . . An extraordinarily beautiful spectacle."

Brooklyn Eagle: "Ingram has brought degree of magnificence to its arid scenes of love on Sahara. Fine camera effects and great deal of brilliant direction."

World: "Fascinating and never-changing Orient and effect that magnetic atmosphere had on will powers of two central characters in their almost fanatically religous struggle with their own hearts' desires."

Sun: "Achieves beauty rare in filmdom. . . . Garden of palms, shifting, swirling sands, of monasteries and monks, dancing girls and romantic passion. An achievement of which Ingram may feel proud."

Telegram: "Perhaps desert-flower love story of 'Garden of Allah' is most human, most realistic portrayal of soul-searing passion of man for maid that was ever transmuted into celluloid through genius of man. Contains passion flowers of poignant beauty."

Herald: "Beautiful and tasteful production, replete with atmosphere and pictorial loveliness—superb desert landscapes, imposing groupings of Mohametans at prayer and at play."

Times: "This latest film from expert. Memorable shadow achievements is subject of rare beauty, with enchanting scenes under Algerian skies."

Daily News: "A beautiful thing and playing of Alice Terry and Petrovich generally excellent. . . . Too much praise cannot be bestowed on photography. Desert scenes are far and away most beautiful that we have ever gazed upon."

Journal: "Hichens novel transformed into colorful motion picture. With eye for pictorial beauty, Ingram has utilized all atmospheric appeal of Northern Africa."

Graphic: "Distinguished by unusually beautiful photography and excellent direction, this film interpretation of well-remembered legitimate production arrives on screen without having lost anything of original beauty and having acquired grandeur of atmosphere. . . . Spectacle picture amazingly well done."

"Shanghai Bound"—Paramount, Metropolitan Theatre, Los Angeles

Record: "Wild entertainment containing breath-taking romantic sequences. Piece travels fast and is indeed amusing."

Herald: "If Dix keeps up at this pace, Dempsey, Tunney and all the rest had better look to their laurels.—"

Daily News: "Score another success for Luther Reed—'Shanghai Bound' now playing to crowded houses at Metropolitan. Scenery delighaful and action fast. . . ."

Examiner: "Dix energetic and capable hero—Mary Brian winsome—Dix's Yangtse romance full of adventure."

"College"—United Artists, Mark Strand Theatre, New York City

Daily News: "In Buster's 'College' he tried for everything—and made laughs. Scores, hundreds, thousands of them. Comedian a riot in this one. . . . Buster's best in many moons."

Sun: "Gags come thick and fast . . . much to delight of audience. Audience, as though it were one spectator, emitted guffaw that topped all previous laughs. As funny if not funnier than most of Keaton films that have come to town since 'Navigator.'"

Graphic: "Buster's best contribution to cinema in two years. . . . Much better than any of recent Keaton efforts. Good entertainment and well worth seeing."

Evening World: "Very funny; as funny, in fact, as any that has come to this theatre for some time. Crammed full of gags. . . . most amusing. People in roars of laughter. Best of Keaton releases for some time. Full of fun and packed with lot of 'belly laughs.'"

Herald-Tribune: "Keaton's funniest picture. You're almost sure to enjoy 'College.'"

American: "Keaton's film offers many laughs . . . highly amusing."

Morning Telegraph: "Antics hilarious . . . whirlwind finish. Sends audience out laughing merrily. Original and surprising."

Telegram: "Genuinely funny . . . currently driving Strand audiences into alarming degrees of apoplexy. Generous supply of laughs."

"The Life of Riley"—First National, Strand Theatre, New York City

Times: "Another cheery pictorial subject tickled risibles of audience at Strand. Boisterous but frequently ingenious strip of fun, handled with no little imagination.

American: "Sidney and Murray bring laughs Sidney invariably gives good performance. Mannerism are so perfect that they appear natural. . . . Hardy funny."

Mirror: "Hearty movie humor. Will give a good time to many."

Evening World: "Murray and Sidney . . . those hardy perennials who blossom all year round . . . furnish much material for humor and sentiment. Sidney one of very best of Hollywood's low comedians. Murray has popular appeal. If you are a Sidney-Murray enthusiast go to see picture."

"Shanghaied"—F B O, Hippodrome, New York City

Daily News: "Best role of Patsy Ruth Miller's career. If all her free lance efforts prove as profitable as this one Miss Miller will have reached in no time at all pinnacle of screen success, which might have been hers already if she had been awarded suitable parts up to this time. For first time in her screen career, Pat is tantalizingly pretty. Patsy's performance is so fiery and full of pep that the Hippodrome's fare is much better than average screen stuff.

American: "Thrilling moments and one finds oneself quite absorbed. Incidentally, this romance provides Miss Miller with opportunity to portray type of character which is distinct departure from saccharine heroine she is usually called upon to enact."

Morning Telegraph: "Miss Miller attractive and alert. Ince is vigorous."

Sun: "Treat for kiddies. Miss Miller makes you believe in her plight, so sincerely and capably does she play."

Journal: "Patsy Ruth Miller does best acting she's done in long time."

World: "Mr. Ince does very well as hard boiled Captain."

Graphic: "Miss Miller has never had a part which has shown her to such advantage."

"White Gold"—Pathe-De Mille, Capitol Theatre, London, England

Daily Chronicle: "A film that everybody should see, for it is something entirely new in cinematography. Clearly a masterpiece because characterization is perfect."

Sunday Pictorial: "A film masterpiece of simplicity and sincerity. Is pure gold and a milestone in cinematography."

"The Stolen Bride"—First National, Olympia Theatre, Boston

Globe: "Thrilling romance combining adventure, love and military service . . . shown in vivid illustrations of different incidents woven into interesting story."

Advertiser: "Billie Dove . . . gorgeous. Gorgeous film to match her screen values. Especially gorgeous are costumes. Fair sex will rave over this production. Picture has fascinating Old World flavor. Vivid, alluring views of pre-war life of Vienna and Budapest."

Post: "Beauteous Billie Dove and handsome Lloyd Hughes are teamed again. Elaborate and gorgeous continental settings."

Transcript: "Miss Dove very lovely to look upon, and, as always, her talents lend themselves easily to working of her director. She is inspired to very honest and creditable efforts. Is given benefit of careful photography as picture is swiftly moved from sequence and mood to mood by camera technique which smacks of continental upbringing."

Traveler: "Hungarian rhapsody. Miss Dove has opportunity to wear some gorgeous clothes and no one can display gowns to more advantage than charming Billie."
